

Station Six — The Overlook

Fort Duffickl - West Point, Kentucky
Winter 1861-62

Introduction

From this high ridge Muldraugh Hill, Untan soldlers of the 9th Michigan infanep watched over the Salt River variley, the Ohio River corridor, and the Louisvt-ils & Nænbylile Tumphæ; I his packet rexonstructs what those soldiers stv—and why this ridge became one of the important early war, in Kentucky.

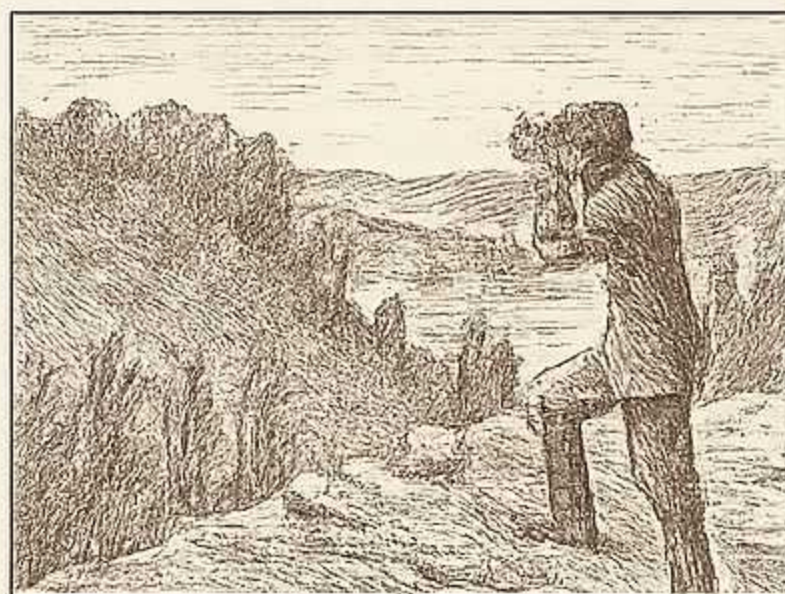

The Terrain in 1861

The slopes were strioped of trees for lumber and firewood.

- Brush was removed to srate cleat lines at sight
- The hidge knopped sat the Salt River and the Timpike
- Soldiers described wstural platform for observation posts:

Soldiers deseribed the linb as "steep and exhausting," but the view from "commanding for miles.

Sightlines and Ohservatlon Arcs

From this overtook, sinstuvier

- The mouth of the Salt River
Ohio Rlyer texthe approaching West Point.
- The Louisstle & Nachviile Tumoiike
- The Weer Point landing and supply depot
- Approaches from Muldraugh Hill to the south

Why Sherman Chose This Ridge

Ceneral William Tecumseh oberman ordered the consienction in late Fe

- Ho woeveheight ridge controlied the river iunction
- The foet protected the supply line feeding hie army to the south