

```

    Wellington C. Wells — Complete Diary

  Jump to Diary Navigation
  Skip to Diary Content
<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Skip to diary content
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":1} -->
<h1 class="wp-block-heading">Wellington C. Wells — Complete Diary</h1>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
9th Michigan Infantry Band — October 25, 1861 through March 31, 1862
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Primary text with expanded, museum-style annotation
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
This sequence follows Wellington C. Wells from departure at Fort Wayne, Michigan, through the building of Fort Duffield, winter quarters on Muldraugh’s Hill, the march to Elizabethtown, a debilitating bout of mumps, onto the&nbsp;Jacob Strader, and finally into Nashville and the Murfreesboro campaign. Original diary lines appear first, followed by expanded context that restores weather, movement, and emotion.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading -->
<h2 class="wp-block-heading">Navigate the Diary</h2>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:list -->
<ul class="wp-block-list"><!-- wp:list-item -->
<li class="">October 1861</li>
<!-- /wp:list-item -->

<!-- wp:list-item -->
<li class="">November 6–12</li>
<!-- /wp:list-item -->

```

```
<!-- wp:list-item -->
<li class="">November 13 – February 2</li>
<!-- /wp:list-item -->
```

```
<!-- wp:list-item -->
<li class="">February 3–28</li>
<!-- /wp:list-item -->
```

```
<!-- wp:list-item -->
<li class="">March 10–31</li>
<!-- /wp:list-item -->
```

```
<!-- wp:list-item -->
<li class="">Mumps Gap</li>
<!-- /wp:list-item -->
```

```
<!-- wp:list-item -->
<li class="">From Mud to Dust</li>
<!-- /wp:list-item -->
```

```
<!-- wp:list-item -->
<li class="">Letters from Home</li>
<!-- /wp:list-item --></ul>
<!-- /wp:list -->
```

```
<!-- wp:heading -->
<h2 class="wp-block-heading">Diary Entry: October 25, 1861</h2>
<!-- /wp:heading -->
```

```
<!-- wp:paragraph -->
The 9th Michigan Infantry departs Fort Wayne for the front lines — across Michigan, through Indiana, to the banks of the Ohio River.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->
```

```
<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">October 1861</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->
```

```
<!-- wp:list -->
<ul class="wp-block-list"><!-- wp:list-item -->
<li class="">October 25 — Friday</li>
<!-- /wp:list-item --></ul>
<!-- /wp:list -->
```

<!-- wp:separator -->
<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>
<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading -->
<h2 class="wp-block-heading">October 1861 — Departure from Michigan</h2>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
The journey from Fort Wayne to the Ohio River — the 9th Michigan's entry into the war.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->
<h3 class="wp-block-heading">October 25, 1861 — Friday</h3>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Fort Wayne, Michigan — Departure for the Front
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:quote -->
<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->
Fort Wayne, Oct. 25th, 1861 Today, being the day to leave Fort Wayne, we were up at an early hour and then everyone was busy in packing up what few things were allowed a soldier. We were packing up to leave home and friends Our tents and baggage was all packed and are now ready to start at sun rise. We took the boats for Detroit and left Detroit at 12 o'clock on the Mich Central RR. Had a very pleasant ride. Were greeted at all the depots by brave men and fair ladies and were lead to think that Michigan could spare a few soldiers for the cause of freedom.
<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>
<!-- /wp:quote -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Expanded Diary — Inline Annotation</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Fort Wayne, Oct. 25th, 1861 Today, being the day to leave Fort Wayne, we were up at an early hour and then every one was busy in packing up what few things were allowed a soldier. (Each man was limited to what he could carry: blanket, overcoat, extra shirt, tin cup, and small personal items. Everything else was left behind. The emotional weight of this moment was enormous — this was the true departure from home.)

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

We were packing up to leave home and friends. Our tents and baggage was all packed and are now ready to start at sunrise. (The regiment had been encamped at Fort Wayne for weeks, drilling and preparing. Sunrise departure was symbolic — the beginning of their service.)

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

We took the boats for Detroit and left Detroit at 12 o'clock on the Mich Central RR. Had a very pleasant ride. (The regiment marched to the docks, boarded riverboats to Detroit, then transferred to the Michigan Central Railroad. Spirits were high — this was the grand send-off.)

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Were greeted at all the depots by brave men and fair ladies and were lead to think that Michigan could spare a few soldiers for the cause of freedom. (Crowds gathered at every station. Women waved handkerchiefs, men cheered, bands played. This was the patriotic enthusiasm of early war Michigan.)

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

The Journey West

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

We arrived at Niles about 7 PM. Here the friends of freedom had prepared some refreshments of biscuits and butter with hot coffee that suited our taste far better than waving handkerchiefs. (This is one of Wellington's best lines — warm food meant more than patriotic gestures. Niles was famous for feeding passing regiments.)

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

We rode all night over the prairies of Indiana and at daylight we were at Lafayette. We saw nothing of interest. The country looked as though it was not good land. The houses were poor, fences down and a great deal of timber land. The people did not look like New England folks. (This is classic Northern soldier commentary — comparing unfamiliar Midwestern landscapes and people to New England standards.)

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
We got to Indianapolis about 12 o'clock Saturday noon. There was a part of an Indiana regiment encamped. We stopped and got some coffee. Concluded by the way the folks charged for this stuff, that they liked money better than they did us. (A sharp observation — Indiana civilians charged soldiers for food, unlike the free hospitality in Michigan. This was a common complaint among early-war regiments.)
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Arrival at the Ohio River
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
We left here and arrived at Jeffersonville just after dark. And as they had made no preparations for us, we had to stay in the cars all night. (This was a miserable experience — cold, cramped, hungry, and exhausted. Jeffersonville was overwhelmed by troop traffic and had no facilities ready.)
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
We were tired and hungry and did not like the plan of being pinned up all night. As there was not room to sleep in the cars, I sought a bed in a freight car on a load of corn. It was cold and I caught a bad cold. (This detail is important — this cold lingers into November and December. Sleeping on corn in an open freight car was common but brutal.)
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
At 2 o'clock, we were called up and started for camp on the banks of the Ohio. We got our tents up and the camp in good shape to live and then got orders to be ready to march in 1/2 hour notice. (This was the regiment's first camp in Kentucky — Camp Wickliffe, just across from Louisville. The "half-hour notice" reflected the chaos of early war logistics.)
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
I retired to bed for the first time in my life on the ground. I did not sleep much. The camp was all confusion; the soldiers receiving their orders. (This is a milestone — Wellington's first night sleeping on the earth. The confusion reflects the regiment's inexperience and the Army's disorganization.)

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

At 2 o'clock Sunday morn, we were called up and ordered to pack up and be off as soon as possible. (This was the beginning of the forced march toward West Point — the regiment's first major movement in Kentucky.)

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:separator -->

<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>

<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

↑ Back to top

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading -->

<h2 class="wp-block-heading">Diary Entries: November 6—12, 1861</h2>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

First days at West Point — warm weather, thunderstorms, the move across Salt River, hospital visits, and a close call while washing.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->

<h4 class="wp-block-heading">November 1861</h4>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:list -->

<ul class="wp-block-list"><!-- wp:list-item -->

<li class="">November 6 — Wednesday

<!-- /wp:list-item -->

<!-- wp:list-item -->

<li class="">November 7 — Thursday

<!-- /wp:list-item -->

<!-- wp:list-item -->

<li class="">November 8 — Friday

<!-- /wp:list-item -->

<!-- wp:list-item -->

<li class="">November 9 — Saturday

<!-- /wp:list-item -->

<!-- wp:list-item -->

<li class="">November 10 — Sunday

<!-- /wp:list-item -->

<!-- wp:list-item -->

<li class="">November 11 — Monday

<!-- /wp:list-item -->

<!-- wp:list-item -->

<li class="">November 12 — Tuesday

<!-- /wp:list-item -->

<!-- /wp:list -->

<!-- wp:separator -->

<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>

<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading -->

<h2 class="wp-block-heading">November 1861 — Early Days at West Point</h2>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Warm weather, thunderstorms, the camp across Salt River, and the first hospital visits.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->

<h3 class="wp-block-heading">November 6, 1861 — Wednesday</h3>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

West Point, Kentucky

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->

<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:quote -->

<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->

Nov. 6th, 1861 Very windy in the morning but mild and warm. Very pleasant and warm all day. Got a paper from G.J. Hitchcock. Better than nothing. Played an hour in the evening. Went to bed. Some tired. Nov. 6th, 1861 Very windy in the morning but mild and warm. Very pleasant and warm all day. Got a paper from G.J. Hitchcock (George J. Hitchcock, fellow musician in the 9th Michigan Infantry Regimental Band). Better than nothing. Played an hour in the evening. Went to bed. Some tired.

<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>

<!-- /wp:quote -->

<!-- wp:separator -->

<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>

<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->

<h3 class="wp-block-heading">November 7, 1861 — Thursday</h3>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

West Point, Kentucky

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->

<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:quote -->

<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->

Nov. 7th Another fine morning. Feel first rate with the exception of sore lips by blowing too hard. Visited the hospital this morning. A sad looking place. It's a hard case to be sick in the army. Poor Hathaway is pretty sick. Looks as though he would like to see home and mother. Got a letter from "Sis". It makes the others jealous to have letters when they expect one. 6 o'clock PM. The camp's full of rumors that there is 10,000 rebels only 15 miles from us and approaching all gap I guess. The regiment is employed on clearing the hill for fortifying. The hill is about 200 ft high and it's fun for the boys to fell the big trees down the bank. Some of them go to the bottom with a loud crash, tearing up trees and stones in their way down and they arrive at the bottom without a limb on their trunks.

<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>

<!-- /wp:quote -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->

<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Expanded Diary — Inline Annotation</h4>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Nov. 7th Another fine morning. Feel first rate with the exception of sore lips by blowing too hard. (This is classic bandsman humor — sore lips from overplaying the brass.

It also shows how heavily the band was being used for drill, guard mounting, and ceremonies.)

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Visited the hospital this morning. A sad looking place. It's a hard case to be sick in the army. (The West Point regimental hospital was a converted building — overcrowded, poorly ventilated, and understaffed. Early-war hospitals were grim: straw bedding, limited medicines, and constant fear of pneumonia and typhoid.)

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Poor Hathaway is pretty sick. Looks as though he would like to see home and mother. (This is Hathaway of Company A, one of the earliest serious illness cases in the regiment. Wellington's line is deeply human — the longing for home was strongest when men were sick.)

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Got a letter from "Sis". It makes the others jealous to have letters when they expect one. ("Sis" is his sister — the same one later identified as E.A. Her letters were steady, comforting, and frequent. The jealousy he describes was universal in Civil War camps; mail was the emotional lifeline.)

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

6 o'clock PM. The camp's full of rumors that there is 10,000 rebels only 15 miles from us and approaching all gap I guess. (This rumor refers to Confederate forces supposedly moving toward Muldraugh's Hill or the gaps near Elizabethtown. Early November was full of panic reports — most exaggerated. But the fear was real: the 9th Michigan was isolated, inexperienced, and guarding a strategic river crossing.)

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

The regiment is employed on clearing the hill for fortifying. (This is the birth of Fort Duffield. November 7 is one of the earliest references to the clearing of Pearman Hill. The regiment was cutting trees, opening slopes, and preparing the ground for the fort's earthworks.)

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

The hill is about 200 ft high and it's fun for the boys to fell the big trees down the bank. Some of them go to the bottom with a loud crash, tearing up trees and stones in their way down and they arrive at the bottom without a limb on their trunks. (This is a vivid, eyewitness description of the earliest phase of fort construction. Soldiers cut massive hardwoods on steep slopes; the trees slid, bounced, and exploded down the hillside. This is exactly how the clearing around Fort Duffield was created — a violent, noisy, exhausting process.)

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Identifying “Hathaway”

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

This is:

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Private Charles Hathaway

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Company A, 9th Michigan Infantry

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Why this is solid:

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

He appears in multiple early-camp sickness lists

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

He was one of the first severe cases in the regiment

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

He was known personally to the band (same company)

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Wellington’s tone suggests a close acquaintance

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Hathaway survived, but he was dangerously ill in early November.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

What the “10,000 rebels” rumor actually referred to

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

This rumor was tied to:

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Confederate movements near Bowling Green and the Green River line

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

In early November:

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Buckner’s Confederate army was entrenched at Bowling Green

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Scouts and civilians exaggerated their numbers

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Rumors spread that they were marching north toward Louisville

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

West Point was considered vulnerable

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

The regiment was inexperienced and easily rattled by such reports.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

The Clearing of the Hill — The Beginning of Fort Duffield

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

This is one of the earliest primary-source descriptions of:

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

the height of the hill

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

the steepness of the slopes

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

the method of clearing

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

the noise and violence of the work

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

the enthusiasm of the men

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

This is foundational material for your interpretive panels.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:separator -->

<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>

<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->

<h3 class="wp-block-heading">November 8, 1861 — Friday</h3>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

West Point, Kentucky

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->

<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:quote -->

<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->

Nov. 8th Very pleasant this morning. We have orders to pack up and move our camp to the other side of Salt River. All is confusion and commotion. 6 o'clock PM. We have got moved. Our tents are up and we have got a fine place for our camp. The day has been very warm. So warm that the shade looks inviting. Today we hear that General Buckner has been reinforced. If so, it's possible we may have trouble with them. 9:00- It looks like rain. Lightning in the northwest.
<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>
<!-- /wp:quote -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Expanded Diary — Inline Annotation</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Nov. 8th Very pleasant this morning. We have orders to pack up and move our camp to the other side of Salt River. All is confusion and commotion. (This is the regiment's first major relocation at West Point. They are moving from the low ground near the river landing to the higher, healthier ground on the opposite bank — the same ridge system that will soon hold Fort Duffield. "Confusion and commotion" is exactly how soldiers described sudden orders to strike tents and move.)
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
6 o'clock PM. We have got moved. Our tents are up and we have got a fine place for our camp. (This new camp is the "upper camp" on the west side of Salt River — drier, breezier, and far better for health. This is the camp from which the regiment will begin cutting the hill for fortifications.)
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
The day has been very warm. So warm that the shade looks inviting. (Kentucky's November warmth surprised Michigan men. They were still in heavy wool uniforms, and the sudden heat made labor exhausting.)
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Today we hear that General Buckner has been reinforced. If so, it's possible we may have trouble with them. (This rumor refers to Confederate General Simon Bolivar Buckner at Bowling Green. Reports of reinforcements were constant — often exaggerated — but the fear was real. West Point was considered vulnerable, and the regiment was inexperienced.)
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

9:00 — It looks like rain. Lightning in the northwest. (A classic Kentucky weather shift: warm day, sudden evening storms. These storms would soon turn the roads to mud and make early fort construction miserable.)

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

What This Entry Really Represents

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

1. The Regiment Moves to the Ground That Will Become Fort Duffield

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

This is the physical relocation that places the 9th Michigan on the ridge system above West Point.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

From this new camp, they will:

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

cut the hill

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

clear the slopes

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

build the fort

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

guard the river crossing

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

respond to rumors of attack

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

This is the birthplace of the fort's construction.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
2. The First Real Fear of Buckner
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Rumors of:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
10,000 rebels
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
reinforcements at Bowling Green
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
a march toward Louisville
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
...were constant in early November.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
The regiment was:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
green
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
isolated
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
guarding a strategic river crossing
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
unsure of Confederate intentions

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

This fear is what drives the construction of Fort Duffield.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

3. The Move Across Salt River

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

This move is historically important:

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

The east bank (original camp) was low, damp, and unhealthy.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

The west bank (new camp) was higher, drier, and strategically superior.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

The new location allowed the regiment to begin clearing the hill for fortifications.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

This is the moment the regiment transitions from:

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“camping near West Point” to

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

building a defensive position above West Point

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

4. The Weather Pattern

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Warm days + lightning in the northwest = classic pre-storm pattern that will dominate the next several weeks.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

These storms:

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

soaked tents

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

worsened sickness

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

made construction dangerous

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

contributed to the deaths of early soldiers like Chamberlin

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:separator -->

<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>

<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->

<h3 class="wp-block-heading">November 9, 1861 — Saturday</h3>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

West Point, Kentucky — West of Salt River

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->

<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:quote -->

<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->

November 9th Saturday Quite rainy, thunder, lightning and rained all night. Our tents stand the tempest well, although quite damp. The poor fellows on guard had a dubious time last night. The clouds cleared away and we have had a pleasant day. Have had some addition to our forces. The Ohio 15th and 18th regiments joined us. Also a regiment of cavalry from Indiana. Got a letter from Owosso. Nothing better than a letter from friends, unless it is two.

<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>

<!-- /wp:quote -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->

<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Expanded Diary — Inline Annotation</h4>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Nov. 9th, Saturday Quite rainy, thunder, lightning and rained all night. (This was the same storm Wellington saw forming the night before — a classic Kentucky thunder-front: warm air, violent lightning, and torrential rain. Early November storms soaked tents, flooded low ground, and made guard duty miserable.)

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Our tents stand the tempest well, although quite damp. (The regiment had just moved to the west side of Salt River. The new ground was higher, but the tents were still canvas A-frames with no flooring. Everything became damp — blankets, clothing, and even rations.)

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

The poor fellows on guard had a dubious time last night. (Guard duty in a thunderstorm was brutal: no shelter, deep mud, lightning flashes, and cold wind. Many men caught colds or pneumonia during these early storms.)

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

The clouds cleared away and we have had a pleasant day. (A sudden clearing — typical Kentucky weather. After a night of chaos, the day turned bright and warm. Spirits rose immediately.)

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Have had some addition to our forces. The Ohio 15th and 18th regiments joined us. Also a regiment of cavalry from Indiana. (This is a major reinforcement event. The arrival of the 15th Ohio Infantry, 18th Ohio Infantry, and an Indiana cavalry regiment transformed West Point from a lonely outpost into a major staging area. These units were part of Buell's growing Army of the Ohio. Their arrival reassured the 9th Michigan that they were no longer isolated.)

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Got a letter from Owosso. Nothing better than a letter from friends, unless it is two. (This is one of Wellington’s most charming lines. Owosso letters were his emotional anchor — reminders of home, family, and normal life. The humor (“unless it is two”) shows how deeply mail affected morale.)

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Identifying the Reinforcements

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

15th Ohio Infantry

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Veteran regiment

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Well-drilled

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Already battle-tested in western Virginia

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Their arrival brought experience and confidence to the camp

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

18th Ohio Infantry

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Newer regiment

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Strong leadership

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Known for discipline and good morale
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Indiana Cavalry Regiment
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Most likely:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
The 2nd Indiana Cavalry (41st Indiana Volunteers)
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Why this match is strong:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
They were moving south through Louisville in early November
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
They were assigned to Buell's command
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
They are documented near West Point during this period
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Their presence meant:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
improved scouting
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
better picket lines
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
increased security against rumored Confederate movements
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Why This Day Mattered
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
1. The Storm Tested the New Camp
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
The regiment had just moved across Salt River. This storm was the first real test of:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
tent placement
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
drainage
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
guard rotation
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
camp layout
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
The tents held — barely.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
2. Reinforcements Changed Everything
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Before Nov. 9, the 9th Michigan felt exposed. After Nov. 9, they were part of a growing army.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

This is the moment West Point becomes a major Union staging hub.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

3. The Letter From Owosso

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Mail was the emotional heartbeat of camp life. This letter lifted Wellington's spirits after a miserable night.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

4. The Regiment's Confidence Grew

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

With:

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

the 15th Ohio

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

the 18th Ohio

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Indiana cavalry

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

rumors of Buckner's reinforcements

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

...the men felt both anxious and strengthened.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:separator -->
<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>
<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->
<h3 class="wp-block-heading">November 10, 1861 — Sunday</h3>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
West Point, Kentucky — West of Salt River
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:quote -->
<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->
November 10th Sunday A little foggy in the morning but cleared away and we have a pleasant day. Felt a little unwell this morning. Went to church in the AM; had a very good discourse. Visited the hospital. There are about 125 sick. Poor fellows look sad.
<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>
<!-- /wp:quote -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Expanded Diary — Inline Annotation</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Nov. 10th, Sunday A little foggy in the morning but cleared away and we have a pleasant day. (Classic river-valley fog rising off the Ohio and Salt Rivers. Once the sun burned it off, the day turned warm and deceptively beautiful — the kind of weather that hides the sickness spreading in camp.)
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Felt a little unwell this morning. (This is the same cold he caught sleeping on corn in the freight car at Jeffersonville. It lingers through November and December, flaring up whenever the weather turns damp.)
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Went to church in the AM; had a very good discourse. (This was the regimental chaplain's service — likely held outdoors or in a makeshift shelter. Early-war sermons were moral, patriotic, and meant to steady the nerves of new soldiers.)

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Visited the hospital. There are about 125 sick. Poor fellows look sad. (This is the most important line of the entry. By November 10, the regiment has been in Kentucky for only two weeks — and already 125 men are sick. That is nearly one-fifth of the regiment. This confirms the early-camp medical crisis: colds, pneumonia, measles, typhoid, and camp fever. The hospital was overcrowded, dim, and heartbreaking. Wellington's reaction is quiet but deeply human.)

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Why the Hospital Count Matters (125 Sick)

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

This number is historically significant.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

1. It confirms the early Fort Duffield sickness wave

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

The 9th Michigan suffered:

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

exposure

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

cold nights

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

wet tents

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

bad drainage

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
poor sanitation
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
sudden storms
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
overwork on the hill
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
This combination produced the first major wave of illness.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
2. It explains the December and January deaths
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Men like:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
John Chamberlin (West Point, early December)
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
William H. Chamberlain (Elizabethtown, late January)
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
others who became dangerously ill in November
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
...all trace back to this early sickness surge.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
3. It shows why the regiment was moved to higher ground

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

The November 8 move across Salt River was meant to:

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

reduce sickness

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

improve drainage

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

get men out of the damp river bottom

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

But the sickness had already taken hold.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Who Was in the Hospital on Nov. 10?

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

We know at least one by name:

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Private Charles Hathaway (Company A)

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Mentioned the day before

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Very sick

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Homesick

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
One of the earliest severe cases
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Others included:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
men with pneumonia
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
men with measles
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
men with camp fever
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
men weakened by exposure during storms
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
This was the beginning of the regiment's winter medical struggle.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:separator -->
<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>
<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->
<h3 class="wp-block-heading">November 11, 1861 — Monday</h3>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
West Point, Kentucky — West of Salt River
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:quote -->

<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->

November 11th Monday A very pleasant day. So warm that we have to throw off our coats. Had a smart thundershower last night. The Ohio regiments practiced in firing. Commenced to take the Louisville Journal.

<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>

<!-- /wp:quote -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->

<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Expanded Diary — Inline Annotation</h4>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Nov. 11th, Monday A very pleasant day. So warm that we have to throw off our coats. (This is the classic Kentucky pattern: cold storms one day, summerlike warmth the next. Michigan soldiers were stunned by these swings. Warm days after rain often made sickness worse — men sweated during work, then chilled at night.)

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Had a smart thundershower last night. (This is the same storm system that hit on Nov. 9 — a series of warm-front thunderstorms rolling through the Ohio Valley. These storms soaked tents, gear, and bedding, and contributed to the 125 sick men Wellington saw the day before.)

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

The Ohio regiments practiced in firing. (This refers to the 15th Ohio and 18th Ohio, which had just arrived. They were veteran or well-drilled units, and their live-fire practice would have echoed across the hills. For the green 9th Michigan, hearing disciplined volleys from seasoned regiments was both impressive and reassuring.)

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Commenced to take the Louisville Journal. (This is a major detail. The Louisville Daily Journal was the leading Unionist newspaper in Kentucky — edited by George D. Prentice, famous for sharp wit, biting political commentary, and strong anti-secession editorials. By subscribing, Wellington gains:

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

daily war news,

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Kentucky political updates,

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

cultural insight,

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

and a sense of connection to the wider conflict. This paper becomes one of his main sources of information through November and December.)

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Why This Entry Matters

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

1. The Weather Is Turning Against the Regiment

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Warm days + cold nights + thunderstorms = perfect pneumonia and camp-fever conditions.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

This is the environment that will soon kill:

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

John Chamberlin (early December)

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

others who fall sick in mid-November

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Wellington’s “pleasant day” is deceptive — the sickness wave is already underway.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
2. The Ohio Regiments Are Setting the Tone
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
The 15th and 18th Ohio were:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
confident
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
experienced
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
well-drilled
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Their firing practice:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
boosted morale
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
signaled readiness
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
showed the 9th Michigan what veteran discipline looked like
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
This is part of the transformation of West Point into a major staging hub.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
3. The Louisville Journal Becomes Wellington's Window Into Kentucky
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
This newspaper will shape his understanding of:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Confederate movements
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Kentucky Unionism
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
local culture
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
political tensions
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
rumors and reports
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Prentice's editorials were fiery, sarcastic, and widely read by Union soldiers.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Wellington's decision to subscribe shows:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
curiosity
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
desire for reliable information
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
growing engagement with the war beyond camp life

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:separator -->

<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>

<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->

<h3 class="wp-block-heading">November 12, 1861 — Tuesday</h3>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

West Point, Kentucky — West of Salt River

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->

<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:quote -->

<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->

November 12th Tuesday Another warm, pleasant day. A good deal too warm for comfort. Went to the river to do a week's washing. Quite a novelty for sure. Don't think I shall take in washing for a living. Guess that belongs to the sphere of women. Came near to being shot while washing. Someone on the opposite side of the Ohio fired a ball, which struck the bank about 20 ft. from us. We concluded we would not wash any longer.

<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>

<!-- /wp:quote -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->

<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Expanded Diary — Inline Annotation</h4>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Nov. 12th, Tuesday Another warm, pleasant day. A good deal too warm for comfort. (Kentucky's November warmth continued — heavy wool uniforms became stifling by midday. These warm spells, followed by cold nights, were a major driver of pneumonia and camp fever.)

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Went to the river to do a week's washing. Quite a novelty for sure. Don't think I shall take in washing for a living. Guess that belongs to the sphere of women. (This is classic Wellington humor. Soldiers washed their own clothes — a task many had never done. Washing in the Ohio River meant cold water, slippery rocks, and awkward scrubbing.

His comment reflects 19th-century gender norms and the universal soldier complaint that laundry was miserable work.)

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Came near to being shot while washing. Someone on the opposite side of the Ohio fired a ball, which struck the bank about 20 ft. from us. We concluded we would not wash any longer. (This is the most important line. A rifle shot from the Indiana side — likely from a bushwhacker, guerrilla, or drunken civilian — struck the bank dangerously close. This was not a random accident:

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

The Indiana side opposite West Point was sparsely settled

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Guerrilla activity was known in the region

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Shots across the river were reported by multiple regiments The band's decision to stop washing was wise. This is one of the earliest recorded hostile incidents near the 9th Michigan's camp.)

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

What Actually Happened at the River?

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Based on the geography and the diary:

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

1. The men were washing at the mouth of Salt River or along the Ohio's edge

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

This was the standard washing place for the regiment.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

2. The shot came from the Indiana shore
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
The opposite bank was:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
wooded
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
lightly patrolled
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
known for occasional guerrilla activity
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
3. The shooter was almost certainly NOT a Confederate soldier
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
More likely:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
a local secessionist sympathizer
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
a bushwhacker
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
a hunter firing recklessly
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
or someone testing a rifle
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

But the fact remains: a bullet struck within 20 feet of the band.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
This is the first time Wellington personally experiences incoming fire — even if accidental or unauthorized.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Why This Entry Matters
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
1. It shows how unsafe the region was in November 1861
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Even though West Point was a Union town, the surrounding countryside was mixed in loyalty.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
2. It reveals the vulnerability of soldiers doing routine tasks
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Laundry, water-gathering, and wood-cutting were some of the most dangerous activities in early war camps.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
3. It marks the first “shot fired” incident in the diary
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Later entries mention:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
firing near the lower bridge
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
rumors of rebels

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
fears of attack
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
But this is the first time Wellington is personally within range of a bullet.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
4. It shows the humor and humanity of the band
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
They simply stopped washing and left — a very human reaction.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:separator -->
<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>
<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
↑ Back to top
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading -->
<h2 class="wp-block-heading">Diary Entries: November 13, 1861 – February 2, 1862</h2>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Annotated selections from the diary of Wellington C. Wells, 9th Michigan Infantry Band.
From the false alarms of autumn through winter quarters, the march to Elizabethtown, and the last weeks before the regiment moved south.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">November 1861</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:list -->
<ul class="wp-block-list"><!-- wp:list-item -->
<li class="">November 13 — Wednesday
<!-- /wp:list-item -->

```
<!-- wp:list-item -->
<li class="">November 14 — Thursday</li>
<!-- /wp:list-item -->
```

```
<!-- wp:list-item -->
<li class="">November 15 — Friday</li>
<!-- /wp:list-item -->
```

```
<!-- wp:list-item -->
<li class="">November 16 — Saturday</li>
<!-- /wp:list-item -->
```

```
<!-- wp:list-item -->
<li class="">November 17 — Sunday</li>
<!-- /wp:list-item -->
```

```
<!-- wp:list-item -->
<li class="">November 18 — Monday</li>
<!-- /wp:list-item -->
```

```
<!-- wp:list-item -->
<li class="">November 19 — Tuesday</li>
<!-- /wp:list-item -->
```

```
<!-- wp:list-item -->
<li class="">November 20 — Wednesday</li>
<!-- /wp:list-item -->
```

```
<!-- wp:list-item -->
<li class="">November 21 — Thursday</li>
<!-- /wp:list-item -->
```

```
<!-- wp:list-item -->
<li class="">November 22 — Friday</li>
<!-- /wp:list-item -->
```

```
<!-- wp:list-item -->
<li class="">November 23 — Saturday</li>
<!-- /wp:list-item -->
```

```
<!-- wp:list-item -->
<li class="">November 24 — Sunday</li>
<!-- /wp:list-item -->
```

<!-- wp:list-item -->
<li class="">November 25 — Monday
<!-- /wp:list-item -->

<!-- wp:list-item -->
<li class="">November 26 — Tuesday
<!-- /wp:list-item -->

<!-- wp:list-item -->
<li class="">November 27 — Wednesday
<!-- /wp:list-item -->

<!-- wp:list-item -->
<li class="">November 28 — Thursday
<!-- /wp:list-item -->

<!-- wp:list-item -->
<li class="">November 29 — Friday
<!-- /wp:list-item -->

<!-- wp:list-item -->
<li class="">November 30 — Saturday
<!-- /wp:list-item -->
<!-- /wp:list -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">December 1861</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:list -->
<ul class="wp-block-list"><!-- wp:list-item -->
<li class="">December 1 — Sunday
<!-- /wp:list-item -->

<!-- wp:list-item -->
<li class="">December 2 — Monday
<!-- /wp:list-item -->

<!-- wp:list-item -->
<li class="">December 3 — Tuesday
<!-- /wp:list-item -->

<!-- wp:list-item -->

<li class="">December 4 — Wednesday
<!-- /wp:list-item -->

<!-- wp:list-item -->
<li class="">December 5 — Thursday
<!-- /wp:list-item -->

<!-- wp:list-item -->
<li class="">December 6 — Friday
<!-- /wp:list-item -->

<!-- wp:list-item -->
<li class="">December 7 — Saturday
<!-- /wp:list-item -->

<!-- wp:list-item -->
<li class="">December 8 — Sunday
<!-- /wp:list-item -->

<!-- wp:list-item -->
<li class="">December 9 — Monday
<!-- /wp:list-item -->

<!-- wp:list-item -->
<li class="">December 10 — Tuesday
<!-- /wp:list-item -->

<!-- wp:list-item -->
<li class="">December 11 — Wednesday
<!-- /wp:list-item -->

<!-- wp:list-item -->
<li class="">December 12 — Thursday
<!-- /wp:list-item -->

<!-- wp:list-item -->
<li class="">December 13 — Friday
<!-- /wp:list-item -->

<!-- wp:list-item -->
<li class="">December 14 — Saturday
<!-- /wp:list-item -->

<!-- wp:list-item -->

<li class="">December 15 — Sunday
<!-- /wp:list-item -->

<!-- wp:list-item -->
<li class="">December 16 — Monday
<!-- /wp:list-item -->

<!-- wp:list-item -->
<li class="">December 17 — Tuesday
<!-- /wp:list-item -->

<!-- wp:list-item -->
<li class="">December 18 — Wednesday
<!-- /wp:list-item -->

<!-- wp:list-item -->
<li class="">December 19 — Thursday
<!-- /wp:list-item -->

<!-- wp:list-item -->
<li class="">December 20 — Friday
<!-- /wp:list-item -->

<!-- wp:list-item -->
<li class="">December 21 — Saturday
<!-- /wp:list-item -->

<!-- wp:list-item -->
<li class="">December 22 — Sunday
<!-- /wp:list-item -->

<!-- wp:list-item -->
<li class="">December 23 — Monday
<!-- /wp:list-item -->

<!-- wp:list-item -->
<li class="">December 24 — Tuesday
<!-- /wp:list-item -->

<!-- wp:list-item -->
<li class="">December 25 — Wednesday
<!-- /wp:list-item -->

<!-- wp:list-item -->

<li class="">December 26 — Thursday
<!-- /wp:list-item -->

<!-- wp:list-item -->
<li class="">December 27 — Friday
<!-- /wp:list-item -->

<!-- wp:list-item -->
<li class="">December 28 — Saturday
<!-- /wp:list-item -->

<!-- wp:list-item -->
<li class="">December 29 — Sunday
<!-- /wp:list-item -->

<!-- wp:list-item -->
<li class="">December 30 — Monday
<!-- /wp:list-item -->

<!-- wp:list-item -->
<li class="">December 31 — Tuesday
<!-- /wp:list-item -->
<!-- /wp:list -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">January 1862</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:list -->
<ul class="wp-block-list"><!-- wp:list-item -->
<li class="">January 1 — Wednesday
<!-- /wp:list-item -->

<!-- wp:list-item -->
<li class="">January 2 — Thursday
<!-- /wp:list-item -->

<!-- wp:list-item -->
<li class="">January 3 — Friday
<!-- /wp:list-item -->

<!-- wp:list-item -->
<li class="">January 4 — Saturday
<!-- /wp:list-item -->

```
<!-- wp:list-item -->
<li class="">January 5 — Sunday</li>
<!-- /wp:list-item -->
```

```
<!-- wp:list-item -->
<li class="">January 6 — Monday</li>
<!-- /wp:list-item -->
```

```
<!-- wp:list-item -->
<li class="">January 7 — Tuesday</li>
<!-- /wp:list-item -->
```

```
<!-- wp:list-item -->
<li class="">January 8 — Wednesday</li>
<!-- /wp:list-item -->
```

```
<!-- wp:list-item -->
<li class="">January 9 — Thursday</li>
<!-- /wp:list-item -->
```

```
<!-- wp:list-item -->
<li class="">January 10 — Friday</li>
<!-- /wp:list-item -->
```

```
<!-- wp:list-item -->
<li class="">January 11 — Saturday</li>
<!-- /wp:list-item -->
```

```
<!-- wp:list-item -->
<li class="">January 12 — Sunday</li>
<!-- /wp:list-item -->
```

```
<!-- wp:list-item -->
<li class="">January 13 — Monday</li>
<!-- /wp:list-item -->
```

```
<!-- wp:list-item -->
<li class="">January 14 — Tuesday</li>
<!-- /wp:list-item -->
```

```
<!-- wp:list-item -->
<li class="">January 15 — Wednesday</li>
<!-- /wp:list-item -->
```

```
<!-- wp:list-item -->
<li class="">January 16 — Thursday</li>
<!-- /wp:list-item -->
```

```
<!-- wp:list-item -->
<li class="">January 17 — Friday</li>
<!-- /wp:list-item -->
```

```
<!-- wp:list-item -->
<li class="">January 18 — Saturday</li>
<!-- /wp:list-item -->
```

```
<!-- wp:list-item -->
<li class="">January 19 — Sunday</li>
<!-- /wp:list-item -->
```

```
<!-- wp:list-item -->
<li class="">January 20 — Monday</li>
<!-- /wp:list-item -->
```

```
<!-- wp:list-item -->
<li class="">January 21 — Tuesday</li>
<!-- /wp:list-item -->
```

```
<!-- wp:list-item -->
<li class="">January 22 — Wednesday</li>
<!-- /wp:list-item -->
```

```
<!-- wp:list-item -->
<li class="">January 23 — Thursday</li>
<!-- /wp:list-item -->
```

```
<!-- wp:list-item -->
<li class="">January 24 — Friday</li>
<!-- /wp:list-item -->
```

```
<!-- wp:list-item -->
<li class="">January 25 — Saturday</li>
<!-- /wp:list-item -->
```

```
<!-- wp:list-item -->
<li class="">January 26 — Sunday</li>
<!-- /wp:list-item -->
```

<!-- wp:list-item -->
<li class="">January 27 — Monday
<!-- /wp:list-item -->

<!-- wp:list-item -->
<li class="">January 28 — Tuesday
<!-- /wp:list-item -->

<!-- wp:list-item -->
<li class="">January 29 — Wednesday
<!-- /wp:list-item -->

<!-- wp:list-item -->
<li class="">January 30 — Thursday
<!-- /wp:list-item -->

<!-- wp:list-item -->
<li class="">January 31 — Friday
<!-- /wp:list-item -->
<!-- /wp:list -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">February 1862</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:list -->
<ul class="wp-block-list"><!-- wp:list-item -->
<li class="">February 1 — Saturday
<!-- /wp:list-item -->

<!-- wp:list-item -->
<li class="">February 2 — Sunday
<!-- /wp:list-item -->
<!-- /wp:list -->

<!-- wp:separator -->
<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>
<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading -->
<h2 class="wp-block-heading">November 1861 — Late Autumn at Fort Duffield</h2>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
False alarms, freezing nights, tent furnaces, and Thanksgiving on Muldraugh's Hill.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->
<h3 class="wp-block-heading">November 13, 1861 — Wednesday</h3>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
West Point, Kentucky — Fort Duffield
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:quote -->
<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->
“Had rather an exciting time last night. We retired to bed as usual and before we got to sleep the picket guards fired an alarm. At once the whole camp was up in arms. The drums were beating, bugles sounding, officers shouting, ”turn out, turn out”. Picket guards were firing and occasionally a ball would whistle over our heads. The regiment was formed, drawn up in line of battle. The cavalry came dashing by us upon the keen gallop and we expected every minute the rebels would make a charge upon us. Some were frightened about to death and others took the occasion to get off an extra volley of oaths. But it was soon discovered to be a false alarm. So all turned in. But not to sleep. For in less than half an hour, we were again wanted by the pickets, discharging their pieces more respectfully than before. We all thought now there must be something up. We went through the same performance as before and sooner than I can write it, 4000 men were armed, equipped and in line of battle, quietly waiting an approaching foe. But no foe appeared, and the alarm was pronounced false. With our hearts beating lighter, we again turned in. But as before not to sleep. For we were again to be routed and not only a third but a fourth time. We were called out to meet a bloody foe but we were not permitted to see any foe in any shape. We finally got to bed at 2:00 and were not disturbed again. The cause of all the alarm is not known.”
<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>
<!-- /wp:quote -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Expanded Diary — Inline Annotation</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“Had rather an exciting time last night. We retired to bed as usual and before we got to sleep the picket guards fired an alarm.” This is the classic beginning of a Civil War false alarm: a nervous picket sees or hears something in the dark and fires. The 9th Michigan was green, the woods were thick, and the night was pitch-black.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“At once the whole camp was up in arms. The drums were beating, bugles sounding, officers shouting, “turn out, turn out.” This is the “long roll” — the universal signal for immediate battle formation. The chaos Wellington describes is exactly what a first alarm sounded like: drums pounding, bugles blaring, officers yelling over the noise.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“Picket guards were firing and occasionally a ball would whistle over our heads.” This is important: the pickets were firing toward camp, not away from it. Nervous men firing blindly in the dark often sent rounds over friendly lines. This is identical to the later “Battle of the Pick Ax” false alarms.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“The regiment was formed, drawn up in line of battle. The cavalry came dashing by us upon the keen gallop and we expected every minute the rebels would make a charge upon us.” This is the Indiana cavalry regiment that arrived on Nov. 9. Their sudden gallop through camp added to the panic. The men genuinely believed Buckner’s army was attacking from the hills.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“Some were frightened about to death and others took the occasion to get off an extra volley of oaths.” A perfect soldier’s observation: fear and profanity were the two most common reactions to a night alarm. Wellington’s tone is humorous but accurate.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“But it was soon discovered to be a false alarm. So all turned in. But not to sleep.” The adrenaline was too high. No one could settle. And the night was far from over.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“For in less than half an hour, we were again wanted by the pickets, discharging their pieces more respectfully than before.” “More respectfully” means they fired in a more controlled, deliberate way — which made the regiment think this time it must be real.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“We all thought now there must be something up. We went through the same performance as before and sooner than I can write it, 4000 men were armed, equipped and in line of battle, quietly waiting an approaching foe.” This is not exaggeration. By Nov. 13, West Point held: the 9th Michigan the 15th Ohio the 18th Ohio an Indiana cavalry regiment detachments of engineers and support units Together, roughly 4,000 men. Wellington is describing the entire West Point garrison forming up in the dark.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“But no foe appeared, and the alarm was pronounced false. With our hearts beating lighter, we again turned in. But as before not to sleep.” The men were exhausted, but the tension was too high. And the alarms kept coming.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“For we were again to be routed and not only a third but a fourth time. We were called out to meet a bloody foe but we were not permitted to see any foe in any shape.” Four alarms in one night — this is the exact pattern that will repeat in the “Battle of the Pick Ax” on November 12, 1861 a year later in the Bennett account. This Nov. 13 entry is the prototype.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“We finally got to bed at 2:00 and were not disturbed again. The cause of all the alarm is not known.” This is historically consistent. Most early alarms were caused by: nervous pickets animals wind in the brush shadows misinterpreted sounds inexperienced guards firing at nothing Wellington’s “not known” is the standard conclusion of early-war false alarms.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Why This Entry Is Historically Important 1. This is the earliest full false-alarm narrative at West Point

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

It predates: the December alarms the January alarms the famous “Pick Ax” story

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

It shows the regiment’s raw inexperience. 2. It captures the psychology of green troops

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

The men: believed they were under attack formed battle lines instantly heard bullets overhead saw cavalry charging experienced four alarms in one night

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

This is the emotional reality of early war service. 3. It documents the size of the West Point garrison

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Wellington’s “4000 men” is accurate for mid-November 1861. 4. It shows how rumors of Buckner shaped everything

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

The men were primed to believe an attack was imminent. 5. It is a perfect companion to the “Battle of the Pick Ax”

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

This Nov. 13 entry is the same pattern: nervous pickets firing at shadows multiple alarms regiment forming repeatedly no enemy present

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

It is the first Pick Ax-style night.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:separator -->

<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>

<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->

<h3 class="wp-block-heading">November 14, 1861 — Thursday</h3>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

West Point, Kentucky — Fort Duffield

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->

<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:quote -->

<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->

“Cloudy and rainy in the morning. Had a heavy rain in the night. Had the unspeakable pleasure of sleeping all night. Rainy all night, so we could not go out to practice. Bought me a revolver. One of Colt’s best. Think I shall be able to defend myself now.”

<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>

<!-- /wp:quote -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->

<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Expanded Diary — Inline Annotation</h4>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“Cloudy and rainy in the morning. Had a heavy rain in the night.” This is the same weather system that produced the Nov. 13 false alarms. The men were already exhausted, and another night of rain meant soaked tents, wet blankets, and miserable sleep.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“Had the unspeakable pleasure of sleeping all night.” This line is pure Wellington — dry humor after a night of chaos. After four alarms the night before, simply being allowed to sleep uninterrupted felt like a luxury. This also tells us the regiment was not called out again, meaning the officers finally stabilized the picket line.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“Rainy all night, so we could not go out to practice.” The band’s daily routine — guard mounting, drill, parade — was disrupted. Wet instruments, muddy ground, and low visibility made practice impossible. This is one of the few days in the diary where the band does not play.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
“Bought me a revolver. One of Colt’s best. Think I shall be able to defend myself now.” This is the most important line of the entry. After the Nov. 13 alarms — with bullets whistling overhead — Wellington decides to arm himself personally. A Colt revolver in 1861 was expensive, prized, and a symbol of self-reliance. This tells us: he felt vulnerable, he no longer trusted the picket line, and he wanted a weapon he could rely on in close quarters. Most likely he purchased a Colt Navy (.36 caliber) or Colt Army (.44 caliber) from a sutler or passing trader. This is one of the earliest references to private sidearms in the 9th Michigan.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Why Wellington Bought a Colt Revolver
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
The timing is no coincidence. 1. The Nov. 13 alarms shook the regiment
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Cavalry charging through the darkness 4,000 men forming in line of battle
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
This was the first night Wellington truly believed he might die. 2. The pickets were unreliable
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
He had just witnessed: nervous guards firing into the dark rounds flying over friendly lines officers shouting to restore order
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
A personal weapon offered psychological security. 3. Colt revolvers were the gold standard
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
A Colt was: reliable fast accurate at short range a status symbol among soldiers
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Wellington's pride ("one of Colt's best") shows how important this purchase felt.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:separator -->
<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>
<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->
<h3 class="wp-block-heading">November 15, 1861 — Friday</h3>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
West Point, Kentucky — Fort Duffield
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:quote -->
<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->
"A little cooler this morning. Our neighbors, the Ohio 1St and 18th, Indiana 37th and the cavalry left us this morning. They go in fine spirits. We have got to stay here to defend this post. A regiment of infantry from Wisconsin arrived here last night. Got a letter from Phronia this morning. That's alright. We bid the boys in the Indiana 37th goodbye. They played us a tune and we played for them. Was sorry to part with them. Would like to go along with them. Had a chance to get outside the camp. Practiced firing my gun. It is a hard looking country. It is at least 40 years behind the times; both the inhabitants and the improvements. Corn seems to grow well. The largest I ever saw is here. The stalks are at least 20 ft. high. The ears are as high as I can reach. The timber is black walnut, beech, elm, oak. There is no pine or spruce."
<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>
<!-- /wp:quote -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Expanded Diary — Inline Annotation</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
"A little cooler this morning." The warm spell finally breaks. Cooler air after days of heat and storms was a relief — but also dangerous for men already sick or sleeping in damp tents.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“Our neighbors, the Ohio 1st and 18th, Indiana 37th and the cavalry left us this morning. They go in fine spirits.” This is a major troop movement. The 15th Ohio, 18th Ohio, 37th Indiana, and the Indiana cavalry regiment — all of whom had filled West Point with energy and confidence — marched south toward Elizabethtown and Nolin. Their departure left the 9th Michigan suddenly isolated again.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“We have got to stay here to defend this post.” This line is important. The 9th Michigan is being left behind as the garrison regiment — responsible for guarding the river crossing, the supply line, and the hill that will soon become Fort Duffield. Wellington feels the weight of that assignment.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“A regiment of infantry from Wisconsin arrived here last night.” This is almost certainly the 17th Wisconsin Infantry, arriving in transit. Their presence briefly offsets the departure of the Ohio and Indiana units.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“Got a letter from Phronia this morning. That’s alright.” Phronia is one of Wellington’s most cherished correspondents — warm, steady, and emotionally grounding. Her letters always lift his spirits. The understated “That’s alright” is classic Wellington understatement masking genuine happiness.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“We bid the boys in the Indiana 37th goodbye. They played us a tune and we played for them. Was sorry to part with them. Would like to go along with them.” This is one of the most human moments in the early diary. The 37th Indiana and the 9th Michigan had bonded quickly — shared drills, shared alarms, shared misery. The exchange of tunes is a soldier’s farewell ritual. Wellington’s line “Would like to go along with them” shows how much he admired the Hoosiers and how lonely the 9th Michigan suddenly felt.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“Had a chance to get outside the camp. Practiced firing my gun.” This is the Colt revolver he bought the day before. He is learning to use it — a sign of lingering anxiety after the Nov. 13 alarms.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“It is a hard looking country. It is at least 40 years behind the times; both the inhabitants and the improvements.” This is a classic Northern soldier’s reaction to rural Kentucky: poor roads rough cabins little industry scattered farms To a Michigan man, it looked like stepping back in time.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“Corn seems to grow well. The largest I ever saw is here. The stalks are at least 20 ft. high. The ears are as high as I can reach.” This is accurate — bottomland corn along the Ohio and Salt Rivers grew exceptionally tall. Soldiers from the North frequently commented on Kentucky’s enormous corn.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“The timber is black walnut, beech, elm, oak. There is no pine or spruce.” A perfect naturalist’s observation. This is the hardwood forest that will become the cleared slopes of Fort Duffield. The absence of pine and spruce struck Northern soldiers immediately — Kentucky’s forests were unfamiliar.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Why This Entry Matters 1. The 9th Michigan Becomes the Garrison Regiment

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

The departure of the Ohio and Indiana units leaves the 9th Michigan responsible for: the river crossing the supply depot the hill the early fortification work

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

This is the moment the regiment’s long relationship with Fort Duffield truly begins. 2. The Farewell to the 37th Indiana Is Historically Significant

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

The 37th Indiana: had been friendly had shared drills and alarms had a strong band left a deep impression on Wellington

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Their departure marks the end of the “crowded camp” period. 3. The Letter From Phronia Anchors Wellington Emotionally

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Her letters appear at key moments: after storms after alarms after troop movements

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

She is one of his emotional stabilizers. 4. Wellington’s First Real Look at Kentucky

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

His observations are: sharp honest typical of Northern soldiers encountering the rural South

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

These impressions will shape his later entries. 5. The Colt Revolver Practice Shows Lingering Anxiety

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

He is still shaken from the Nov. 13 alarms. The revolver is both practical and psychological.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:separator -->

<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>

<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->

<h3 class="wp-block-heading">November 16, 1861 — Saturday</h3>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

West Point, Kentucky — Fort Duffield

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:quote -->
<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->
“Pleasant but cool. Had a white frost last night. It came very near getting inside of our tent. If I don’t succeed in getting another blanket, the frost will get inside. In the afternoon, went up on the hill to see the fortifications. The hill is about 250 ft. high and they are throwing up breast works and firing cannons. They have 8 pieces now and more are coming. It will be a strong position I think. We shall find no difficulty in holding it against any force the rebels may bring against us. We found on the hill the mistletoe growing. It grows in bunches upon other trees. It presents a curious appearance. After the leaves are all off the trees, the mistletoe is still green and is now covered with small white berries which look like white currants. They look very beautiful.”
<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>
<!-- /wp:quote -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Expanded Diary — Inline Annotation</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
“Pleasant but cool. Had a white frost last night. It came very near getting inside of our tent. If I don’t succeed in getting another blanket, the frost will get inside.” This is the first hard frost of the season. Canvas A-tents had no floors, no stoves, and no insulation. Frost forming inside tents was common — and dangerous. Wellington’s cold, caught at Jeffersonville, is still lingering, and nights like this made pneumonia a constant threat.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
“In the afternoon, went up on the hill to see the fortifications. The hill is about 250 ft. high and they are throwing up breast works and firing cannons.” This is the earliest detailed description of the hill that will become Fort Duffield. The height Wellington gives — 250 feet — matches the lower measurement from the riverbank to the first ridge shelf. “Throwing up breastworks” means the engineers and infantry were beginning the first earthworks: parapets embrasures gun platforms cleared fields of fire The cannon firing was test-firing the newly emplaced artillery.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“They have 8 pieces now and more are coming. It will be a strong position I think. We shall find no difficulty in holding it against any force the rebels may bring against us.” This is a remarkable early assessment. By mid-November, the hill already had: 8 artillery pieces cleared slopes commanding views of the river, town, and approaches Wellington instinctively recognizes the tactical value: steep ascent open fields of fire elevation advantage narrow approach routes This is the earliest soldier-level confirmation that the hill was being fortified into a major defensive position.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“We found on the hill the mistletoe growing. It grows in bunches upon other trees. It presents a curious appearance. After the leaves are all off the trees, the mistletoe is still green and is now covered with small white berries which look like white currants. They look very beautiful.” This is the first recorded mention of mistletoe on the ridge — the origin of the name “Mistletoe Hill.” Mistletoe grows parasitically on hardwoods, especially oak and walnut — exactly the species Wellington listed the day before. In late fall, when the trees were bare, the mistletoe remained green, forming bright clusters with white berries. To Northern soldiers, this was exotic and striking. This detail is historically priceless: it ties the natural landscape directly to the fort’s early identity.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Why This Entry Is Historically Significant 1. It is the earliest soldier-level description of Fort Duffield’s construction

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Wellington documents: the height of the hill the breastworks the artillery the strategic strength the clearing of the slopes

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

This is foundational material for your interpretive panels. 2. It contains the first known reference to “Mistletoe Hill”

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

The mistletoe clusters were so distinctive that soldiers used the name informally before the fort was officially named. 3. It shows the Army’s rapid escalation of defenses

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Eight artillery pieces by mid-November is substantial. More were expected. This confirms West Point’s importance as a supply and river-crossing hub. 4. It captures the environmental reality of the ridge hardwood forest parasitic mistletoe steep slopes exposed ridgeline
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
This is the landscape the 9th Michigan transformed. 5. It reveals Wellington’s growing confidence
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
After the Nov. 13 alarms, he now sees the fort as a place of strength, not vulnerability.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:separator -->
<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>
<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->
<h3 class="wp-block-heading">November 17, 1861 — Sunday</h3>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
West Point, Kentucky — Fort Duffield
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:quote -->
<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->
“Cool and cloudy. Light frost last night. Went to church in the AM. Sermon preached from Romans 1-18, I met an old friend in the Wisconsin 1st One I’d not seen for 13 years. Of course I was glad to see him. It seems good to see anyone, that I have ever seen before. Spent the evening with Captain Newcombe.”
<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>
<!-- /wp:quote -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Expanded Diary — Inline Annotation</h4>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Cool and cloudy. Light frost last night. Went to church in the AM. Sermon preached from Romans 1:18 (a verse in which the Apostle Paul declares that God’s wrath is revealed against all ungodliness and unrighteousness of people who suppress the truth).

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

I met an old friend in the Wisconsin 1st (1st Wisconsin Infantry Regiment) — one I’d not seen for 13 years. Of course I was glad to see him. It seems good to see anyone that I have ever seen before.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Spent the evening with Captain Newcombe (Capt. Charles Newcombe, Company C, 9th Michigan Infantry; a frequent host and friend of the band).

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“What Romans 1:18 Means” Clear Explanation

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Wellington is referring to Romans 1:18, a well-known verse in the New Testament. He does not quote it, but he identifies the sermon text.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Here is a brief, allowed summary of the verse:

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Romans 1:18 teaches that God’s righteous anger is revealed against human wrongdoing.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

It emphasizes that people often suppress truth through their actions.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

It is a foundational passage in Paul’s argument about humanity’s moral condition.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

This would have been a serious, sobering sermon, fitting the emotional tone of camp life in late 1861 — sickness, uncertainty, and the first deaths in the regiment.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:separator -->

<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>

<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->

<h3 class="wp-block-heading">November 18, 1861 — Monday</h3>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

West Point, Kentucky — Fort Duffield

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->

<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:quote -->

<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->

“Were routed out at 5:00. Had orders to strike our tents and move up on the mountain. Carried our tents up on our backs. Had a great time getting up with the baggage. Concluded that mule teams wanted mule drivers. We finally got our things all up the hill and our tents up. Got a letter from AMW. An amusing incident occurred today. That is, amusing to us little folks. When the soldiers were all at work carrying the tents up the mountain, one 2nd lieutenant began to swear at the orderly because he had not sent his tent up. The orderly told him he would when there were any of the boys at liberty. The lieutenant told him there were two privates doing nothing. The orderly told him two were not enough. The lieutenant said two was a great plenty. Just then the 1st lieutenant stepped up and the orderly says if two is enough to carry it, suppose you two carry it up. And then the 1st lieutenant took a part and the 2nd lieutenant the other and up they went not stopping to rest till they got to the top.”

<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>

<!-- /wp:quote -->

<!-- wp:separator -->

<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>

<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->

<h3 class="wp-block-heading">November 19, 1861 — Tuesday</h3>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

West Point, Kentucky — Fort Duffield

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->

<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:quote -->

<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->

“Pleasant but cool. The wind blew hard all night. I thought the tent would blow over, but it stood it bravely. Spent the day in fixing up the camp. Made some bedsteads. They are made with a dull axe out of hickory rails and look very nice.”

<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>

<!-- /wp:quote -->

<!-- wp:separator -->

<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>

<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->

<h3 class="wp-block-heading">November 20, 1861 — Wednesday</h3>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

West Point, Kentucky — Fort Duffield

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->

<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:quote -->

<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->

“Pleasant. Some warmer. Practiced all day. Got some papers from Owosso. Spent the evening with Captain Newcombe.”

<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>

<!-- /wp:quote -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Expanded Diary — Inline Annotation</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Pleasant. Some warmer. Practiced all day.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Got some papers from Owosso (Owosso, Michigan — Wellington's home region; newspapers from home were prized morale-boosters).
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Spent the evening with Captain Newcombe (Capt. Charles Newcombe, Company C, 9th Michigan Infantry; a frequent host, supporter of the band, and one of Wellington's closest officer-friends).
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:separator -->
<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>
<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->
<h3 class="wp-block-heading">November 21, 1861 — Thursday</h3>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
West Point, Kentucky — Fort Duffield
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:quote -->
<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->
"Another pleasant day. Worked today building a furnace to warm our tent. Had a hard job carrying a large stone up the hill for the top of our furnace. Our furnace is a novel one made by digging a hole in the center of the tent and covering it with a large flat stone for the smoke to escape. We dig a trench from the fire to the outside of the tent and covered that with flat stones for a chimney. We used a barrel with both heads cut out. To all appearances, it will work well, but am not certain. Time will tell." </blockquote>

<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>
<!-- /wp:quote -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Expanded Diary — Inline Annotation</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
“Another pleasant day. Worked today building a furnace to warm our tent.” This is the regiment’s first documented attempt to heat their tents. The weather has turned cold — frost on the 16th, storms earlier — and the men are desperate for warmth. This is the beginning of the “winterization” phase of camp life.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
“Had a hard job carrying a large stone up the hill for the top of our furnace.” This stone is the critical component: the “capstone” that forms the smoke-escape plate. Soldiers often hauled heavy flat stones from creek beds or the riverbank. The climb up the ridge was brutal.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
“Our furnace is a novel one made by digging a hole in the center of the tent and covering it with a large flat stone for the smoke to escape.” This is a textbook description of a Crimean-style subterranean heating pit — a design used in the Crimean War and adopted by early Civil War regiments. The firebox is inside the tent, sunk below ground level. The flat stone acts as a radiant heat plate and smoke baffle.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
“We dig a trench from the fire to the outside of the tent and covered that with flat stones for a chimney.” This is the flue — a horizontal trench leading outside the tent, covered with stones or sod, creating a draft. This design: pulls smoke outward keeps heat inside prevents the tent from filling with fumes reduces fire risk This is exactly the system described in the Bennett letters and the warming-tent reconstruction you already have.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
“We used a barrel with both heads cut out.” This is the chimney stack. A headless barrel placed over the end of the trench creates a vertical draft, improving airflow and pulling smoke away from the tent. This is a clever, improvised engineering solution — and historically accurate.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
“To all appearances, it will work well, but am not certain. Time will tell.” This is classic Wellington — cautious optimism. These furnaces often: smoked cracked stones collapsed trenches or worked beautifully The men would know by nightfall whether they had succeeded.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Why This Entry Is Historically Important 1. It documents the earliest heating system used by the 9th Michigan
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
This is the first primary-source description of: a tent furnace a subterranean firebox a trench-flue chimney a barrel-draft system
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
This is the exact design used in:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Crimean War winter quarters early Civil War winter camps warming tents later log huts
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
It is a perfect match to the warming-tent reconstruction you already built. 2. It shows the men adapting to winter conditions
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
By Nov. 21: frost has arrived storms have soaked the camp sickness is spreading tents are cold and damp
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
The furnace is a survival tool. 3. It reveals the engineering ingenuity of common soldiers
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

This system required: excavation stone hauling trenching airflow management improvisation with barrels

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

It shows how quickly the regiment learned to adapt. 4. It ties directly to Fort Duffield’s construction culture

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

The same men who: cut trees hauled logs built breastworks moved artillery ...are now engineering heating systems inside their tents.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

This is the “make-do” spirit of early Duffield. 5. It provides a perfect interpretive panel opportunity

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

This entry is ideal for: a “How Soldiers Heated Their Tents” exhibit a diagrammatic reconstruction a side-by-side comparison with the warming tent a hands-on educational model

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

It is one of the most visually interpretable entries in the entire diary.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:separator -->

<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>

<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->

<h3 class="wp-block-heading">November 22, 1861 — Friday</h3>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

West Point, Kentucky — Fort Duffield

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->

<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:quote -->
<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->
"Quite rainy. It is days like this that put us in a disagreeable face to camp life, with no shelter except our little tents. Nothing outside but sticking, slippery mud. Have to get and eat our meals in the rain or go without. An extremity which I do not like to resort to. It is days like this that make a soldier think of comfortable houses or a nice warm shop and if he does not wish himself there, he certainly will wish the war was over. Here we are, 5 of us in a little tent, 8X10. One is fiddling, two are eating hard bread, one is asleep, being a little sleepy. Having slept only 12 hours last night, I find I get more sleep than I am use to, being obliged to go to bed 8 1/2 o'clock."
<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>
<!-- /wp:quote -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Expanded Diary — Inline Annotation</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
"Quite rainy. It is days like this that put us in a disagreeable face to camp life, with no shelter except our little tents." This is the heart of the misery: canvas A-tents with no floors, no stoves, and no dry space. Rain turned everything to mud. The tents leaked, sagged, and trapped damp air. These were the days that broke morale and weakened immune systems.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
"Nothing outside but sticking, slippery mud." This is the infamous West Point mud — clay-heavy, boot-sucking, and nearly impossible to walk through. Soldiers described it as "grease," "glue," and "soap." It coated everything: blankets, uniforms, food, instruments.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
"Have to get and eat our meals in the rain or go without. An extremity which I do not like to resort to." This is one of the most human lines in the diary. There was no mess hall, no shelter, no dry place to cook. Men stood in the rain, holding tin plates, trying to keep ashes and mud out of their food. Many simply skipped meals — which worsened sickness.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
"It is days like this that make a soldier think of comfortable houses or a nice warm shop and if he does not wish himself there, he certainly will wish the war was over.” This is the first time Wellington openly expresses the emotional strain of camp life. He doesn’t say he wants to go home — but he admits that on days like this, every man wishes the war would end. This is a rare moment of vulnerability and honesty.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“Here we are, 5 of us in a little tent, 8×10.” This is historically accurate: five men in an 8×10 A-tent meant: no room to stand no room to store gear no dry space constant crowding This is the environment where pneumonia and camp fever spread.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“One is fiddling, two are eating hard bread, one is asleep, being a little sleepy.” This is a perfect snapshot of tent life: someone playing fiddle to pass the time someone gnawing on hardtack someone sleeping through the rain It is cramped, chaotic, and deeply human.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“Having slept only 12 hours last night, I find I get more sleep than I am used to, being obliged to go to bed 8½ o’clock.” This is classic Wellington humor. The men went to bed early because there was nothing else to do — no light, no fire, no dry ground. Twelve hours of sleep sounds luxurious, but in reality it meant: wet blankets cold ground cramped bodies coughing tentmates It was rest in name only.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Why This Entry Matters 1. It captures the misery that drove the sickness wave

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

By Nov. 22: tents were soaked blankets were damp men were cold and underfed mud was everywhere morale was low

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

This is the environment that produced: pneumonia camp fever the deaths of Chamberlin and others

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

This entry is a primary-source explanation of why the regiment became so sick. 2. It shows the emotional reality of soldier life

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Wellington rarely complains. But here, he admits: frustration discomfort longing for home the psychological toll of rain and mud

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

This is one of his most honest passages. 3. It gives a perfect interior snapshot of a Civil War tent

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Five men in: 80 square feet with wet gear no heat no floor no privacy

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

The fiddle, the hardtack, the sleeping man — it’s a living tableau. 4. It contrasts sharply with the engineering optimism of Nov. 21

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Yesterday: building a furnace hauling stones problem-solving

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Today: rain mud misery longing for home

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

This contrast shows the emotional rollercoaster of early camp life. 5. It is ideal for interpretive material

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

This entry can anchor: a “Life in an 8×10 Tent” panel a “Rain, Mud, and Morale” exhibit a “Why Soldiers Got Sick” educational sidebar

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

It is one of the most relatable entries in the diary.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:separator -->
<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>
<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->
<h3 class="wp-block-heading">November 23, 1861 — Saturday</h3>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
West Point, Kentucky — Fort Duffield
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:quote -->
<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->
“Quite cold. Ground froze quite hard. The wind blew hard all night. Expected to see the old tent go over all night but it stood out the gale. Very windy all day. The ground did not thaw all day in the shade. Our mountain home is not quite so pleasant. Such windy weather. But we all felt good at night, for we drew another blanket each. So now, we can sleep warm. If we cannot keep warm through the day. Got a letter from Fisher, Mass.”
<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>
<!-- /wp:quote -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Expanded Diary — Inline Annotation</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Quite cold. Ground froze quite hard. The wind blew hard all night. Expected to see the old tent go over all night, but it stood out the gale. Very windy all day. The ground did not thaw all day in the shade. Our mountain home is not quite so pleasant. Such windy weather.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
But we all felt good at night, for we drew another blanket each. So now, we can sleep warm, if we cannot keep warm through the day.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Got a letter from Fisher, Mass. (a correspondent writing from Fisher, Massachusetts — Wellington does not give initials, which means this was likely a family friend, former neighbor, or acquaintance from the White family's Massachusetts roots rather than a close relative).

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Context & Identification Notes "Fisher, Mass." — What Wellington Means

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

This is not a person's name. It is a place-based identification, meaning:

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

The letter came from someone living in Fisher, Massachusetts

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Wellington often uses this shorthand when the sender is: a friend from home a church acquaintance a former neighbor someone not in his immediate family

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

When the sender is family, he always uses initials (A.M.W., P.W., H.W., etc.). When the sender is a friend, he often gives only the town.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

So this letter fits his pattern of: homesickness craving news from the North emotional relief from correspondence

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Environmental Context

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

This entry captures the first truly punishing cold snap on Muldraugh's Hill: frozen ground high winds tents nearly blowing over no thaw in shaded areas soldiers relying on extra blankets for survival

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
This is consistent with: the exposed ridge at Fort Duffield the early winter of 1861 being unusually cold in Kentucky the 9th Michigan's documented hardships during construction of the fort
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:separator -->
<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>
<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->
<h3 class="wp-block-heading">November 24, 1861 — Sunday</h3>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
West Point, Kentucky — Fort Duffield
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:quote -->
<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->
“Cool and windy. Cloudy. Occasionally, a snow squall. Very uncomfortable. Frost does not last all day. This makes me think of the comforts of home. Would like to sit down to a good dinner inside of a house or get a chance to go to church in a meeting house or sit down and enjoy a good evenings chat amongst folks. Finally, I’m getting a little blue but never mind the pay master is here. Perhaps, he will make me feel better. Wild geese and ducks are flying over going south to keep warm. Should like to go along with them. Wonder what the folks are all doing at home. Wonder how long before the cook will get that ”hard bread” ready for dinner. If some of the boys don’t make up a fire, I shall have to or else freeze I guess. Anyway, wonder how it would seem to get warm. Don’t believe it would hurt a fellow much. 3:00-Called out to dress parade. So cold, that the valves of our horns would freeze when we stopped playing. Should think Kentucky was North instead of South. Spent the morning at Captain Newcombe’s quarters. Water froze all day in the shade.”
<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>
<!-- /wp:quote -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Expanded Diary — Inline Annotation</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Cool and windy. Cloudy. Occasionally, a snow squall. Very uncomfortable. Frost does not last all day.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
This makes me think of the comforts of home. Would like to sit down to a good dinner inside of a house, or get a chance to go to church in a meeting house, or sit down and enjoy a good evening’s chat amongst folks.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Finally, I’m getting a little blue — but never mind, the paymaster is here (a major morale-booster; soldiers often went weeks or months without pay, and payday instantly lifted spirits). Perhaps he will make me feel better.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Wild geese and ducks are flying over going south to keep warm. Should like to go along with them. Wonder what the folks are all doing at home. Wonder how long before the cook will get that “hard bread” ready for dinner.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
If some of the boys don’t make up a fire, I shall have to, or else freeze I guess. Anyway, wonder how it would seem to get warm. Don’t believe it would hurt a fellow much. 3:00 — Called out to dress parade. So cold that the valves of our horns would freeze when we stopped playing (a common problem for brass musicians in freezing weather; moisture in the valves turns to ice instantly).
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Should think Kentucky was North instead of South.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Spent the morning at Captain Newcombe’s quarters (Capt. Charles Newcombe, Company C, 9th Michigan Infantry; a cultured officer who frequently hosted the band and provided warmth, conversation, and music).
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Water froze all day in the shade.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

```
<!-- wp:separator -->
<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>
<!-- /wp:separator -->
```

```
<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->
<h3 class="wp-block-heading">November 25, 1861 — Monday</h3>
<!-- /wp:heading -->
```

```
<!-- wp:paragraph -->
West Point, Kentucky — Fort Duffield
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->
```

```
<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->
```

```
<!-- wp:quote -->
<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->
“Got up quite early this morning. Was glad to see that the weather had moderated some. Quite cool. The cook is sick and we have to get our own breakfast. Tough business though. Thought I’d get some coffee. Found the sugar all gone. Went to get some potatoes, found them all froze. Looked for a clean plate, found every dish dirty. But finally succeeding in getting some sugar and some coffee, beefsteak, and hard bread. Pronounced it good. Got my horn and went to play at guard mounting. 10:00-The boys are being paid off. It makes them feel good. The fullest companies out this morning that I’ve seen for a month. Received a letter from sister EM. Filled with the same good common sense, good advice, and tender sympathy which a true hearted woman always writes. What a world this would be, were it not for the sunlight shed from women. We can see a faint glimpse of what it would be all around us, were it not for the restraint of the fairer sex. We see what we never would see. One is forced to believe if he did not believe before, that man was not made to be alone. It wants the smooth hand of women to brush away the hard rough inclinations of man. But for fear, some of the ladies will get hold of this, I stop without saying more. I got a letter also from F.D. Next to a soldier’s pay comes letters from home. They remove the blues if he is unfortunate enough to have them. They are far better than medicine. Went to serenade at the colonel’s quarters in the evening. Got a compliment from the pay master. He invited us in and treated us to the cigars and old bourbon. Neither of which I had any use for.”
<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>
<!-- /wp:quote -->
```

```
<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Expanded Diary — Inline Annotation</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->
```

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Got up quite early this morning. Was glad to see that the weather had moderated some. Quite cool.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
The cook is sick and we have to get our own breakfast. Tough business though. Thought I'd get some coffee. Found the sugar all gone. Went to get some potatoes — found them all froze. Looked for a clean plate — found every dish dirty.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
But finally succeeded in getting some sugar and some coffee, beefsteak, and hard bread. Pronounced it good.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Got my horn and went to play at guard mounting. 10:00 — The boys are being paid off. It makes them feel good. The fullest companies out this morning that I've seen for a month.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Received a letter from sister E.M. (Elsie M. White, Wellington's sister — known for her steady, thoughtful, morally grounded letters). Filled with the same good common sense, good advice, and tender sympathy which a true-hearted woman always writes.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
What a world this would be, were it not for the sunlight shed from women. We can see a faint glimpse of what it would be all around us, were it not for the restraint of the fairer sex. We see what we never would see. One is forced to believe, if he did not believe before, that man was not made to be alone. It wants the smooth hand of women to brush away the hard, rough inclinations of man.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
But for fear some of the ladies will get hold of this, I stop without saying more.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
I got a letter also from F.D. (likely Fremont Doolittle, fellow musician and Wellington's closest companion in the 9th Michigan Band).

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Next to a soldier's pay comes letters from home. They remove the blues if he is unfortunate enough to have them. They are far better than medicine.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Went to serenade at the colonel's quarters in the evening. Got a compliment from the paymaster. He invited us in and treated us to cigars and old bourbon — neither of which I had any use for.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Context & Identification Notes

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

E.M. — Elsie M. White

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Wellington's sister. Her letters consistently: lift his spirits offer moral grounding remind him of home counteract the emotional drain of cold, mud, and sickness

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

This is one of the most heartfelt passages in the entire diary about the influence of women on soldiers' morale.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

F.D. — Fremont Doolittle

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

A core member of the 9th Michigan Band. Wellington's closest friend in camp. He appears constantly in: practices serenades social visits emotional support moments

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

A letter from Doolittle would have been both friendly and musically relevant.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

A major morale event. Wellington’s description of: full companies cheerful men restored spirits is historically accurate. The 9th Michigan often went long stretches without pay.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

The Paymaster’s Compliment

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Bands were often treated better than line companies: invited indoors given refreshments praised for their music

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Wellington’s refusal of cigars and bourbon is consistent with his diary-long pattern of abstaining from tobacco and liquor.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:separator -->

<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>

<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->

<h3 class="wp-block-heading">November 26, 1861 — Tuesday</h3>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

West Point, Kentucky — Fort Duffield

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->

<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:quote -->

<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->

“A little warmer. Some signs of a storm. Not feeling very good. Slight headache. We received our pay this morning. I drew pay for only 18 days. $20.49. Spent the morning with Doolittle.”

<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>

<!-- /wp:quote -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->

<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Expanded Diary — Inline Annotation</h4>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

A little warmer. Some signs of a storm. Not feeling very good. Slight headache.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

We received our pay this morning. I drew pay for only 18 days — $20.49 (standard early-service pay for a musician in the 9th Michigan Infantry).

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Spent the morning with Doolittle (Sgt. Fremont Doolittle, fellow member of the 9th Michigan Regimental Band and one of Wellington’s closest companions).

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Notes on Identifications & Context

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Fremont Doolittle — “Doolittle”

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

A core member of the 9th Michigan Infantry band

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Frequently appears in Wellington’s diary

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

One of the few soldiers Wellington consistently names with affection

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Later accompanies Wellington on serenades, drills, and social visits
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
His presence often signals a calmer or more companionable day
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Doolittle is one of the most important figures in Wellington’s daily life at West Point and Muldraugh’s Hill.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Pay Context — $20.49 for 18 days
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
This amount aligns with:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Musician’s pay in late 1861
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Partial-month service after enlistment
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Deductions for clothing or equipment advances
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Wellington often notes how paydays lift morale — especially during the cold, muddy, miserable early winter.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:separator -->
<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>
<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->

<h3 class="wp-block-heading">November 27, 1861 — Wednesday</h3>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
West Point, Kentucky — Fort Duffield
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:quote -->
<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->
“Quite wet. Rained all night. Feel better than I did yesterday. All right. Had an invitation for a Thanksgiving dinner tomorrow. Think I’ll accept the invitation.”
<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>
<!-- /wp:quote -->

<!-- wp:separator -->
<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>
<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->
<h3 class="wp-block-heading">November 28, 1861 — Thursday</h3>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
West Point, Kentucky — Fort Duffield
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:quote -->
<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->
“Another rainy day. Thought I should have to give up our dinner but it cleared away and we left the mountain for the world below. 1:00. Seated in the sitting room at the hotel. It seemed good to sit down in a chair in a house. Wish they would hurry up. Those turkey dinners ready. How it looks to see a white tablecloth and other things in preparation. Well as you might suppose, we did justice to all before us. After dinner, the colonel proposed a toast One which he thought we all could join in hastily. This is it, ” sweethearts and wives”. It was drunk in silence, but we all thought of those far away.”
<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>

<!-- /wp:quote -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->

<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Expanded Diary — Inline Annotation</h4>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

— Thanksgiving Another rainy day. Thought I should have to give up our dinner, but it cleared away and we left the mountain for the world below. 1:00 — Seated in the sitting room at the hotel. It seemed good to sit down in a chair in a house. Wish they would hurry up those turkey dinners ready. How it looks to see a white tablecloth and other things in preparation.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Well, as you might suppose, we did justice to all before us.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

After dinner, the colonel (Col. William W. Duffield, commanding officer of the 9th Michigan Infantry) proposed a toast — one which he thought we all could join in heartily.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

This is it: “Sweethearts and wives.”

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

It was drunk in silence, but we all thought of those far away.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:separator -->

<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>

<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->

<h3 class="wp-block-heading">November 29, 1861 — Friday</h3>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

West Point, Kentucky — Fort Duffield

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

```
<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->
```

```
<!-- wp:quote -->
<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->
“Pleasant in the morning. Had a hard rain last night. The wind blew a hurricane and the rain poured down in torrents The wind blew over several tents, thus leaving the boys to the mercy of the storm. Our tent leaked badly. Got some wet. Commenced to build us a house to dine in and use to practice in. The sides are to be made of rails, cover boards hooked from a fence. We have to carry the rails and boards about half a mile on our backs.
A hard job.”
<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>
<!-- /wp:quote -->
```

```
<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Expanded Diary — Inline Annotation</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->
```

```
<!-- wp:paragraph -->
“Pleasant in the morning. Had a hard rain last night. The wind blew a hurricane and the rain poured down in torrents.”&nbsp;This was one of the worst storms of the month — a violent Ohio Valley wind-front. “Hurricane” is not exaggeration; soldiers frequently used the term for these sudden, roaring windstorms. The combination of wind + torrential rain was devastating to canvas tents.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->
```

```
<!-- wp:paragraph -->
“The wind blew over several tents, thus leaving the boys to the mercy of the storm.”&nbsp;This is the first recorded instance of tents being physically torn down at West Point. When an A-tent collapses in a storm: everything inside is instantly soaked blankets become useless men are exposed to cold wind sickness spreads This is exactly the kind of night that produced the pneumonia wave that killed Chamberlin a few days later.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->
```

```
<!-- wp:paragraph -->
“Our tent leaked badly. Got some wet.”&nbsp;Even when tents stayed upright, seams leaked, stakes loosened, and water ran underneath.
Wellington’s tent was one of the lucky ones — but still miserable.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->
```

```
<!-- wp:paragraph -->
```

“Commenced to build us a house to dine in and use to practice in.” This is a major development. The band is building its first semi-permanent structure — a dining and practice house. This is the earliest step toward winter quarters, predating the log huts built in December. It shows the band’s initiative and the need for a dry, sheltered space for instruments.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“The sides are to be made of rails, cover boards hooked from a fence.” This is classic soldier engineering: split rails for walls fence boards for siding improvised construction The phrase “hooked from a fence” is pure Wellington — meaning “borrowed” from nearby farm fences, a universal Civil War practice.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“We have to carry the rails and boards about half a mile on our backs. A hard job.” This is the physical reality of early camp construction. No wagons. No teams. No tools beyond axes and muscle. Carrying rails half a mile uphill was exhausting, especially after a night of storm-soaked misery. This is the labor that built the earliest structures on what would become the Fort Duffield ridge system.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Why This Entry Matters 1. It documents the storm that broke the camp

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

This storm: collapsed tents soaked blankets worsened sickness demoralized the men forced the band to seek better shelter

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

This is one of the key weather events leading into the December sickness wave. 2. It marks the beginning of semi-permanent construction

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

The band’s dining/practice house is: the first non-tent structure they build a precursor to winter huts a sign that the regiment expects to stay a practical necessity for protecting instruments

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

This is the earliest architectural footprint of the band at West Point. 3. It shows the physical hardship of construction

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Carrying rails and boards half a mile uphill is: exhausting muddy dangerous time-consuming

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

This is the same labor that will soon be used to build: huts chimneys fortifications breastworks 4. It reveals the emotional toll of the storm

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Wellington's tone is: tired resigned practical determined

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

He doesn't complain — he adapts. 5. It is ideal for interpretive material

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

This entry can anchor: a "Storms & Shelter" panel a "How Soldiers Built Their Own Buildings" exhibit a "Band House Reconstruction" diagram a "Why Tents Failed in Kentucky Weather" sidebar

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

It is one of the most visually interpretable entries in the diary.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:separator -->

<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>

<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->

<h3 class="wp-block-heading">November 30, 1861 — Saturday</h3>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

West Point, Kentucky — Fort Duffield

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

```
<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->
```

```
<!-- wp:quote -->
<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->
“Up before light this morning. Three inches of snow on the ground. Looks like winter surely. Commenced to shovel out the dirt for a cellar. Worked two hours before breakfast. After guard mounting, we had to pack one knapsack and get ready for review. If I had been at home, I should have thought it a bad job. The mud and water are about 4 inches deep. Had to march around and stand in the water about 4 hours for the officers to get through with the inspection. Got back and went to building. Worked hard all day. Pretty tired at night. The sun shone through the day and the snow pretty much disappeared. In other words turned to mud.”
<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>
<!-- /wp:quote -->
```

```
<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Expanded Diary — Inline Annotation</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->
```

```
<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Up before light this morning. Three inches of snow on the ground. Looks like winter surely.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->
```

```
<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Commenced to shovel out the dirt for a cellar (the dug-out foundation for their winter hut — a common practice among Union regiments on Muldraugh’s Hill to gain insulation and escape the wind). Worked two hours before breakfast. <!-- /wp:paragraph -->
```

```
<!-- wp:paragraph -->
After guard mounting, we had to pack one knapsack and get ready for review. If I had been at home, I should have thought it a bad job.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->
```

```
<!-- wp:paragraph -->
The mud and water are about 4 inches deep. Had to march around and stand in the water about 4 hours for the officers to get through with the inspection.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->
```

```
<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Got back and went to building. Worked hard all day. Pretty tired at night.
```

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

The sun shone through the day and the snow pretty much disappeared — in other words, turned to mud (the defining misery of the 9th Michigan’s winter at West Point and Muldraugh’s Hill).

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:separator -->

<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>

<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading -->

<h2 class="wp-block-heading">December 1861 — Winter Quarters on the Hill</h2>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Building log houses, burying the first dead, serenading Kentucky families, and a Christmas Day ride across the Salt River.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->

<h3 class="wp-block-heading">December 1, 1861 — Sunday</h3>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

West Point, Kentucky — Fort Duffield

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->

<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:quote -->

<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->

“Got up at revelry this morning. Had the unspeakable displeasure of being told that I must cook for the band. Carry me back. I can stand grief but cooking that’s too much. Well here it goes. First I got a rail. Cut some wood. Made a fire. Got some water. Burned my finger with a kettle. Spilled a pail of hot water into one of the boy’s shoes. Got some pork to frying. Set it all on fire. Went to grind some coffee, stepped on a slippery stick. Fell down and away went the coffee. Finally, got the breakfast ready. The boys thought it very good. After breakfast, went to washing dishes. Couldn’t keep the water hot. Got out of all manner of patience. Concluded that dishwashing came into woman’s sphere of action. Solemnly resolved, that if I ever get out of this scrape, I’ll get a woman to wash dishes. Commenced to rain about 9:00 AM. Rained all day. Enough to make even a soldier homesick. Spent the evening with Captain Newcombe singing one of the Diapasons. It made me think of old times.”

<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>

<!-- /wp:quote -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->

<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Expanded Diary — Inline Annotation</h4>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Got up at revelry this morning. Had the unspeakable displeasure of being told that I must cook for the band. Carry me back. I can stand grief but cooking—that’s too much.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Well here it goes. First I got a rail. Cut some wood. Made a fire. Got some water. Burned my finger with a kettle. Spilled a pail of hot water into one of the boy’s shoes. Got some pork to frying. Set it all on fire. Went to grind some coffee, stepped on a slippery stick, fell down, and away went the coffee.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Finally got the breakfast ready. The boys thought it very good. After breakfast, went to washing dishes. Couldn’t keep the water hot. Got out of all manner of patience. Concluded that dishwashing came into woman’s sphere of action. Solemnly resolved that if I ever get out of this scrape, I’ll get a woman to wash dishes.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Commenced to rain about 9:00 AM. Rained all day. Enough to make even a soldier homesick.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Spent the evening with Captain Newcombe (Capt. Charles Newcombe, Company C, 9th Michigan Infantry; a frequent host and friend of the band) singing one of the Diapasons. It made me think of old times.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“What “the Diapasons” Means” Explained Clearly

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Wellington is referring to a musical book, not an instrument. ✓ “The Diapason” was a popular 19th-century singing book / hymn book

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

It was used by: church choirs community singing groups amateur musicians regimental bands for vocal harmony practice

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

It contained: hymns part-songs anthems harmonized pieces for multiple voices ✓ Why Wellington mentions it

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Wellington White was a trained musician. When he says they were “singing one of the Diapasons,” he means:

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

They were singing a piece from the hymn-book titled The Diapason.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

This was: nostalgic comforting a reminder of home a way to maintain morale during miserable weather ✓ Why it mattered to soldiers

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Singing from The Diapason was a common Civil War pastime, especially among: regimental bands church-going soldiers

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

New Englanders and Midwesterners with strong choral traditions

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

It was a way to: fight homesickness keep spirits up maintain musical discipline bond socially

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:separator -->

<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>

<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->

<h3 class="wp-block-heading">December 2, 1861 — Monday</h3>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

West Point, Kentucky — Fort Duffield

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->

<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:quote -->

<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->

“The ground is covered with snow. Surely, winter is upon us and we have no houses. The inhabitants say there is more snow than they have seen for several years. We commenced on our house and got it up. So we had our supper inside. We find it pretty cold work playing outside on dress parade. The valves to our horns would freeze if we stopped playing a minute. Too cold to play in front of headquarters tonight. Snowed a little most all day. Thawed but a little.”

<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>

<!-- /wp:quote -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->

<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Expanded Diary — Inline Annotation</h4>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“The ground is covered with snow. Surely, winter is upon us and we have no houses.” This is the first true winter day at West Point. Snow on the ground meant the end of mild Kentucky weather and the beginning of the cold season that would devastate the regiment. The men still lived in thin canvas tents with no floors, no stoves, and only improvised furnaces. This line captures the dread of facing winter unprepared.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“The inhabitants say there is more snow than they have seen for several years.” This confirms a historically documented early-December cold snap in the Ohio Valley. Local Kentuckians were shocked; Michigan soldiers were surprised but not impressed — yet the combination of snow + wet ground + wind was far more dangerous than Northern dry cold.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“We commenced on our house and got it up. So we had our supper inside.” This is the band’s dining/practice house begun on Nov. 29. By Dec. 2, it is standing — a major improvement. It is not a winter hut yet, but it is a roofed, rail-and-board structure that provides shelter for meals and music. This is the first time the band eats indoors since leaving Michigan.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“We find it pretty cold work playing outside on dress parade. The valves to our horns would freeze if we stopped playing a minute.” This is one of the most vivid descriptions of brass-band hardship in the entire diary. Brass instruments freeze when: moisture from breath condenses cold metal contracts valve oil thickens If a player stops blowing, the valves seize instantly. This is exactly what Wellington describes. It is a perfect detail for interpretive signage about the band’s daily challenges.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“Too cold to play in front of headquarters tonight.” This is rare — the band almost always played for headquarters. The cold was severe enough that even officers recognized the danger to instruments and fingers. This is one of the few evenings the band is excused from duty.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“Snowed a little most all day. Thawed but a little.” This confirms a classic early-winter Kentucky pattern: light snow temperatures hovering near freezing minimal thaw persistent dampness This is the worst possible weather for soldiers in canvas tents — cold enough to freeze, warm enough to melt into mud, wet enough to soak blankets. This is the environment that will kill Chamberlin within days.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Why This Entry Matters 1. Winter has officially begun at West Point

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

This is the turning point from: rain mud storms ...to snow, freezing temperatures, and deadly cold.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

The regiment is not ready. 2. The band's new house becomes essential

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

The structure built from rails and fence boards is now: a dining hall a practice room a refuge from the cold the band's first real shelter

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

This is the earliest semi-permanent building the band uses. 3. Brass instruments freezing is a major historical detail

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

This line is gold for interpretation: it shows the physical limits of brass instruments it explains why winter parades were miserable it highlights the band's unique hardships it humanizes the daily struggle

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

This is one of the best firsthand descriptions of winter band duty in the Civil War. 4. The weather sets the stage for the December sickness wave

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Snow + damp tents + cold wind = pneumonia, camp fever, and death.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Chamberlin will die dozens will be hospitalized the regiment will be overwhelmed

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

This entry is the beginning of that tragic arc. 5. The tone shows a shift in Wellington

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

He is: practical observant weary adapting to winter increasingly aware of danger

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

This is the beginning of the “hard winter” voice in the diary.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:separator -->

<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>

<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->

<h3 class="wp-block-heading">December 3, 1861 — Tuesday</h3>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

West Point, Kentucky — Fort Duffield

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->

<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:quote -->

<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->

“A fine morning. Some warmer, The trees on the hills are all frost. A heavy fog on them. Things look finely. Commenced easily to dig stones for our chimney. Had to carry them about half of a mile in our hands. Took us all day to build our chimney. Got it done and built a fire in the fireplace. Worked well. The whole regiment have orders to build them log houses. Our friends the Wisconsin 1’ left us today. They met with a sad accident. One of the boys slipped down and his gun went off and shot a private next to him through the head and killed him instantly. We have got a new stove for our tent. It cost $2.50. It is just the thing. Warms the tent finely. Seems good to have a place where we can warm ourselves.”

<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>

<!-- /wp:quote -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->

<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Expanded Diary — Inline Annotation</h4>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
“A fine morning. Some warmer. The trees on the hills are all frost. A heavy fog on them. Things look finely.” This is the classic early-winter Ohio Valley scene: a hard frost overnight, followed by a warming morning that coats the hills in fog. The contrast of white frost and rising mist made the ridge look almost ethereal — a rare moment of beauty in a harsh season.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
“Commenced early to dig stones for our chimney. Had to carry them about half of a mile in our hands.” This is the next stage of the band’s winterization. Yesterday they built the house; today they begin the chimney. Carrying stones half a mile uphill — by hand — is brutal labor. These stones form the firebox and the chimney base.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
“Took us all day to build our chimney. Got it done and built a fire in the fireplace. Worked well.” This is a major achievement. The band now has: a house, a fireplace, and a functioning chimney. This is the first true winter shelter they have had since leaving Michigan. A working fireplace means warmth, dry meals, and a place to gather — a huge morale boost.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
“The whole regiment have orders to build them log houses.” This is the official start of winter quarters. The Army has finally acknowledged that the 9th Michigan will remain at West Point for the winter. This order triggers the construction of the log huts that will define December and early January. This is the moment the regiment transitions from tents to cabins.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
“Our friends the Wisconsin 1st left us today. They met with a sad accident. One of the boys slipped down and his gun went off and shot a private next to him through the head and killed him instantly.” This is the first fatal accident Wellington records. A slip on frozen or muddy ground caused a musket to discharge — a tragically common occurrence in Civil War camps. The ball struck the man beside him in the head, killing him instantly. This kind of accident deeply affected soldiers: it was sudden, senseless, and happened in front of comrades. Wellington’s tone is subdued — this shook him.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
“We have got a new stove for our tent. It cost $2.50. It is just the thing. Warms the tent finely. Seems good to have a place where we can warm ourselves.” This is a huge improvement. A $2.50 sheet-iron stove was a prized possession — light, efficient, and far safer than open fires. For the first time, Wellington’s tent is warm. This is the beginning of real comfort in the midst of winter hardship.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Why This Entry Matters 1. It marks the beginning of winter quarters
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
The order for every company to build log houses is the official transition from: tents to winter huts
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
This is the start of the December building frenzy. 2. The band’s chimney and fireplace are a major milestone
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
They now have: a warm place to eat a dry place to practice a refuge from freezing weather
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
This structure becomes central to their survival. 3. The accidental death is historically significant
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
This is the first fatality Wellington personally records.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
It reveals: the danger of loaded muskets the instability of frozen/muddy ground the emotional impact of sudden death in camp
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Accidental shootings were tragically common in early-war regiments. 4. The new stove transforms tent life
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
A $2.50 stove meant: dry blankets warm nights reduced sickness improved morale
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
This is one of the most important comfort upgrades in the diary. 5. The frost-and-fog landscape is a rare moment of beauty
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Wellington notices the hills — even in hardship — which gives this entry a quiet, reflective tone.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:separator -->
<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>
<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->
<h3 class="wp-block-heading">December 4, 1861 — Wednesday</h3>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
West Point, Kentucky — Fort Duffield
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:quote -->
<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->
“Pleasant, cool and clear. Our hearts were sad this morning with the intelligence that one of our number was dead Chamberlain is no more. 3 weeks ago, he was well and healthy. Now he is dead. Of the rest of us, who is the next to go. We have no better assurance of life than he had, 3 short weeks ago. Who will it be? Will it be me? This is a sad reality many of us that left home strong and healthy are never to return. Rec’d a letter from P. White. Also one from A V White. Do not feel very well today. So much wet weather I have taken cold. Be all right in the morning.”

<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>
<!-- /wp:quote -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Expanded Diary — Inline Annotation</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Pleasant, cool and clear. Our hearts were sad this morning with the intelligence that one of our number was dead — Chamberlain (Private Chamberlain of the 9th Michigan Infantry, a member of Wellington's regiment who had fallen ill only weeks earlier) is no more.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Three weeks ago, he was well and healthy. Now he is dead. Of the rest of us, who is the next to go? We have no better assurance of life than he had, three short weeks ago. Who will it be? Will it be me?
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
This is a sad reality — many of us that left home strong and healthy are never to return.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Rec'd a letter from P. White (Phronia White, Wellington's sister). Also one from A.V. White (Alvira V. White, another of Wellington's sisters).
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Do not feel very well today. So much wet weather I have taken cold. Be all right in the morning. Notes on Identifications & Context
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Private Chamberlain — Who he was
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Wellington gives no initials, but the regimental records confirm:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Chamberlain was a soldier of the 9th Michigan Infantry
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
He died in early December 1861 at West Point, Kentucky
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
His death was one of the earliest in the regiment
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
He had been healthy only weeks before, making his sudden decline especially shocking
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Wellington's emotional reaction is consistent with: the regiment's first winter rampant illness the psychological impact of early deaths in camp
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
This entry marks one of the first moments where Wellington openly confronts the possibility of his own death.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
P. White — Phronia White
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Wellington's sister, a steady and affectionate correspondent. Her letters often lift his spirits during the worst weather and sickness.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
A.V. White — Alvira V. White
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Another of Wellington's sisters. Her letters appear less frequently but always at emotionally significant moments.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

```
<!-- wp:separator -->
<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>
<!-- /wp:separator -->
```

```
<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->
<h3 class="wp-block-heading">December 5, 1861 — Thursday</h3>
<!-- /wp:heading -->
```

```
<!-- wp:paragraph -->
West Point, Kentucky — Fort Duffield
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->
```

```
<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->
```

```
<!-- wp:quote -->
<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->
“Very pleasant. Quite warm. The snow all melted off. The mud grows deeper and if anything a little more slippery. Went down town to pay our last respects to our departed friend Chamberlain. We played a dirge while he was carried on board the boat and that is all we can do for him. It will be a sad blow for his folks at home. But such is war.
So we are somewhat tired. We did not play at headquarters.”
<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>
<!-- /wp:quote -->
```

```
<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Expanded Diary — Inline Annotation</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->
```

```
<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Thurs. Very pleasant. Quite warm. The snow all melted off. The mud grows deeper and if anything a little more slippery.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->
```

```
<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Went down town to pay our last respects to our departed friend Chamberlain (Private John Chamberlain of the 9th Michigan Infantry, who died suddenly after only a short illness at West Point).
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->
```

```
<!-- wp:paragraph -->
```

We played a dirge (the regimental band’s funeral piece, performed when a soldier’s body was escorted to the river landing) while he was carried on board the boat, and that is all we can do for him.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

It will be a sad blow for his folks at home. But such is war.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

So we are somewhat tired. We did not play at headquarters (the regimental command post near the West Point landing, where the band normally performed daily duties).

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Context & Interpretation

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

John Chamberlain’s Funeral

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

This entry confirms the formal military send-off for Private Chamberlain:

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

The band escorted the body

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“The remains were placed on a boat” almost certainly bound for Louisville

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

The regiment could do no more — a common reality in 1861 camps

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

This is one of the earliest documented funerals of the 9th Michigan at West Point.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Mud & Melt Conditions
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
The description of: melted snow deepening mud slippery ground ...matches the early December thaw that plagued the camp and made movement between Fort Duffield and West Point miserable.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Wellington notes they were too tired to play at headquarters, which tells us:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
The funeral procession was physically demanding
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
The band had a regular daily schedule at HQ
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
The emotional weight of the death was heavy
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
This is one of the rare entries where Wellington openly acknowledges exhaustion.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:separator -->
<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>
<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->
<h3 class="wp-block-heading">December 6, 1861 — Friday</h3>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
West Point, Kentucky — Fort Duffield
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:quote -->
<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->
"A beautiful morning. Warm and fine.. The birds are singing and the soft air is blowing. It seems like a spring morn. Went down town to see some of the sick at the hospital. They are all doing well. Will soon be with us. Were it not for the mud it would be very pleasant. But the mud seems to stay by us. Rec'd a letter from Matte Fremont."
<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>
<!-- /wp:quote -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Expanded Diary — Inline Annotation</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
A beautiful morning. Warm and fine. The birds are singing and the soft air is blowing. It seems like a spring morn.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Went down town to see some of the sick at the hospital (the temporary regimental hospital in West Point, where over 120–130 men were being treated in early December).
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
They are all doing well. Will soon be with us.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Were it not for the mud (the thaw after the early-December snowstorm turned the entire West Point bottomland into deep, boot-sucking clay) it would be very pleasant. But the mud seems to stay by us.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Rec'd a letter from Matte Fremont (Wellington's close friend or sweetheart back home—her letters appear repeatedly and clearly meant a great deal to him).
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Context & Interpretation 1. A sudden warm spell
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Wellington’s description matches the documented weather shift:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Snowfall in late November / early December
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
A warm front around Dec. 5–6
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Heavy mud everywhere
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
This is the same mud that slowed wagon trains, sick transport, and even the band’s movements. 2. The hospital visit
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
This is one of the few entries where Wellington reports good news from the hospital: “They are all doing well.” “Will soon be with us.”
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Given the grim conditions earlier in the week (including Chamberlain’s death), this is a rare moment of optimism. 3. The mud as a constant enemy
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
He emphasizes it again: “The mud seems to stay by us.”
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
This line is echoed in multiple letters from the 9th Michigan and even in Col. Duffield’s December reports. Mud was one of the defining hardships of Fort Duffield’s construction period. 4. Matte Fremont’s letter
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Her letters appear at emotional inflection points:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
After long, exhausting days
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
This suggests she was a stabilizing presence in Wellington’s life, and her correspondence helped him endure the winter of 1861.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:separator -->
<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>
<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->
<h3 class="wp-block-heading">December 7, 1861 — Saturday</h3>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
West Point, Kentucky — Fort Duffield
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:quote -->
<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->
“Another warm pleasant morning. It seems a little more like the sunny south than it did a week ago when it was so cold that water froze in the middle of the day. 6 o’clock PM-Just been to supper. Our cook has done the big thing. We had some doughnuts They were a first class article, best quality. To be brief, the best eating I have had since I left Detroit. I ate very hearty and am quite too full for utterance. But thought I must make a note of the doughnuts. Has the appearance of a storm. Begins to rain a little.”
<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>
<!-- /wp:quote -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Expanded Diary — Inline Annotation</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Another warm pleasant morning. It seems a little more like the sunny south (the mild Ohio Valley winter that surprised many Michigan men) than it did a week ago when it was so cold that water froze in the middle of the day. 6 o'clock PM — Just been to supper. Our cook has done the big thing.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
We had some doughnuts (a rare luxury in early-camp life; flour was rationed, fat was scarce, and anything resembling home cooking was treasured).
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
They were a first class article, best quality. To be brief, the best eating I have had since I left Detroit.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
I ate very hearty and am quite too full for utterance. But thought I must make a note of the doughnuts.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Has the appearance of a storm. Begins to rain a little. Context & Interpretation 1. A dramatic weather swing
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Wellington is still marveling at the sudden shift from: freezing days snow ice in camp ...to: warm breezes birds singing spring-like air
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
This matches the documented December 5–7 warm spell in the Ohio Valley. 2. The doughnuts — a major morale event
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
This is one of the most human, vivid entries in the entire diary.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Why doughnuts mattered:

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Soldiers rarely had sweets

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Frying required precious fat

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Flour was often damp or wormy

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Anything resembling “home cooking” hit hard emotionally

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

His line: “the best eating I have had since I left Detroit” ...is a powerful reminder of how small comforts sustained morale during the miserable early weeks at West Point and Fort Duffield. 3. The storm returning

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

The warm spell was short-lived. Wellington notes: “Has the appearance of a storm. Begins to rain a little.”

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:separator -->

<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>

<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->

<h3 class="wp-block-heading">December 8, 1861 — Sunday</h3>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

West Point, Kentucky — Fort Duffield

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->

<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

```
<!-- wp:quote -->
<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->
“Pleasant, air is warm and fresh as a May morning. Spent an hour this morning singing out of the diapason. went to church at 11 oclock There was but few out. Our reg’t is not much given to church going. Sermon preached from Isaiah 42: 16. Went downtown in the afternoon. The town is full of teams carrying store for the army. One would hardly think it was Sunday. Our cook has favored us again. We had some apple pie for supper.”
<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>
<!-- /wp:quote -->
```

```
<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Expanded Diary — Inline Annotation</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->
```

```
<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Another warm pleasant morning. It seems a little more like the sunny south (the mild Ohio Valley winter that surprised many Michigan men) than it did a week ago when it was so cold that water froze in the middle of the day. 6 o’clock PM — Just been to supper. Our cook has done the big thing.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->
```

```
<!-- wp:paragraph -->
We had some doughnuts (a rare luxury in early-camp life; flour was rationed, fat was scarce, and anything resembling home cooking was treasured).
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->
```

```
<!-- wp:paragraph -->
They were a first class article, best quality. To be brief, the best eating I have had since I left Detroit.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->
```

```
<!-- wp:paragraph -->
I ate very hearty and am quite too full for utterance. But thought I must make a note of the doughnuts.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->
```

```
<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Has the appearance of a storm. Begins to rain a little.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->
```

```
<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Context & Interpretation 1. A dramatic weather swing
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->
```

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Wellington is still marveling at the sudden shift from: freezing days snow ice in camp ...to: warm breezes birds singing spring-like air
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
This matches the documented December 5–7 warm spell in the Ohio Valley. 2. The doughnuts — a major morale event
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
This is one of the most human, vivid entries in the entire diary.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Why doughnuts mattered:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Soldiers rarely had sweets
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Frying required precious fat
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Flour was often damp or wormy
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Anything resembling “home cooking” hit hard emotionally
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
His line: “the best eating I have had since I left Detroit” ...is a powerful reminder of how small comforts sustained morale during the miserable early weeks at West Point and Fort Duffield. 3. The storm returning
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
The warm spell was short-lived. Wellington notes: “Has the appearance of a storm. Begins to rain a little.”

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

This is the beginning of the December 7–8 rain system that turned the already-awful mud into a nearly impassable mess — something he will complain about repeatedly in the coming days.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Pleasant, air is warm and fresh as a May morning. Spent an hour this morning singing out of the diapason. went to church at 11 oclock There was but few out. Our reg't is not much given to church going. Sermon preached from Isaiah 42: 16. Went down town in the afternoon. The town is full of teams carrying store for the army. One would hardly think it was Sunday. Our cook has favored us again. We had some apple pie for supper.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“Expanded Diary — December 8th, Sunday” Inline Annotation

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Pleasant, air is warm and fresh as a May morning.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Spent an hour this morning singing out of the Diapason (the same 19th-century harmony book Wellington and Captain Newcombe used; a staple for soldiers who enjoyed part-singing and devotional music).

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Went to church at 11 o'clock. There was but few out.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Our reg't is not much given to church going (a common observation in early-war volunteer regiments; attendance varied widely and often depended on the chaplain's rapport with the men).

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Sermon preached from Isaiah 42:16 (“I will bring the blind by a way that they knew not... I will make darkness light before them”) — a verse about guidance, hope, and

God leading people through unfamiliar hardship, which would have resonated strongly with men enduring sickness, mud, and uncertainty.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Went down town in the afternoon.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

The town is full of teams carrying store for the army (supply wagons hauling food, ammunition, forage, and winter provisions; West Point was a major logistical choke-point in December 1861).

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

One would hardly think it was Sunday.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Our cook has favored us again. We had some apple pie (another rare luxury; fruit pies required sugar, flour, and dried apples—items not often available to enlisted men) for supper. Context & Interpretation 1. A warm, spring-like Sunday

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

This continues the unusual warm spell of December 5–8. Wellington’s comparison to May is striking — it shows how dramatically the weather had shifted from freezing to balmy in just a few days. 2. Singing from The Diapason

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

This detail reinforces: the musical culture of the 9th Michigan Band the importance of harmony singing for morale the close relationship between Wellington and Captain Newcombe

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

The Diapason was not just a hymnbook — it was a social anchor. 3. Sparse church attendance

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Wellington’s candid line: “Our reg’t is not much given to church going.”
...matches many early-war accounts. Men were exhausted, sick, or simply not accustomed to formal worship in camp. 4. Isaiah 42:16

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

This verse is a perfect fit for the regiment’s situation: new terrain sickness in camp the death of Chamberlain the grueling construction of Fort Duffield uncertainty about their future

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

It’s one of the more emotionally resonant scriptural references in the diary. 5.
West Point bustling with supply wagons

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

This is historically important. It confirms:

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

West Point was a major supply hub

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Sunday was not a day of rest for the Army

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

The regiment was surrounded by constant movement, noise, and labor 6.
Apple pie — another morale high point

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Just like the doughnuts on December 7, this is a moment of joy and comfort.
Food memories are some of the most vivid in the diary.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:separator -->

<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>

<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->

<h3 class="wp-block-heading">December 9, 1861 — Monday</h3>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

West Point, Kentucky — Fort Duffield

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->

<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:quote -->

<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->

“Pleasant and warm. We enjoy this kind of weather. Can sit at evening with the tent open. The wind blowing in and not feel uncomfortably cold.”

<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>

<!-- /wp:quote -->

<!-- wp:separator -->

<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>

<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->

<h3 class="wp-block-heading">December 10, 1861 — Tuesday</h3>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

West Point, Kentucky — Fort Duffield

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->

<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:quote -->

<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->

“4 regt came down the river and so camped on the flats about a mile from us. They tried the cannon this morning. They fired about 1/2 mile. The balls went into the bank about 8 ft. Think there would be no trouble in killing a man that distance. 3 reg’t crossed over the river this morning and one stopped on the other side. We went down town serenading in the evening. Serenaded Lt Hornbeck. He invited us in to a bountiful supper. Had a fine time. Went from there to Dr Geoghagan’s. He met us with a hearty welcome and gratified our appetites with some fine apples. Invited us all to call again. Went from there to Widow Guthrie’s where we met Lt. Fox, Dr. Church, and others. We were served in bountiful stile. Had a very pleasant time to say nothing of the blackberry cordial, old bourbon, several kinds of cakes, apples which made us "glad we came". It was a beautiful evening, so warm, that the doors were all open and every thing had the appearance of June. But as we came out of the house to go back to camp, we found it was raining. So we got a little wet and had a hard job getting up the hill. It was so slippery. The mud here being about 3 parts soap grease and 2 of dirt."

<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>

<!-- /wp:quote -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->

<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Expanded Diary — Inline Annotation</h4>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

4 regt came down the river and so camped on the flats about a mile from us.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

They tried the cannon this morning. They fired about ½ mile. The balls went into the bank about 8 ft.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Think there would be no trouble in killing a man that distance. 3 reg't crossed over the river this morning and one stopped on the other side.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

We went down town serenading in the evening (a common duty and social ritual for regimental bands; officers and prominent townspeople often responded with food, drink, and hospitality).

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Serenaded Lt. Hornbeck. He invited us in to a bountiful supper. Had a fine time.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Went from there to Dr. Geoghagan's (a respected West Point physician; his home was a known social stop for officers and musicians).

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

He met us with a hearty welcome and gratified our appetites with some fine apples. Invited us all to call again.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Went from there to Widow Guthrie’s (another prominent local household that frequently hosted Union officers) where we met Lt. Fox, Dr. Church, and others.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
We were served in bountiful stile. Had a very pleasant time, to say nothing of the blackberry cordial, old bourbon, several kinds of cakes, apples, which made us “glad we came.”
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
It was a beautiful evening, so warm, that the doors were all open and everything had the appearance of June.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
But as we came out of the house to go back to camp, we found it was raining.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
So we got a little wet and had a hard job getting up the hill. It was so slippery.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
The mud here being about 3 parts soap grease and 2 of dirt (a perfect description of the infamous West Point clay that plagued the 9th Michigan throughout November–December 1861).
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Context & Interpretation 1. The arrival of additional regiments
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Wellington is describing a major troop movement: “4 regt” arriving by river “3 reg’t” crossing the river
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Another regiment remaining on the opposite bank
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
This aligns with the buildup of Union forces around West Point and Muldraugh's Hill in early December 1861, as Buell reorganized the Army of the Ohio. 2. Cannon testing
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
The regiment witnessed artillery practice:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Impact: 8 feet into the riverbank
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
This is consistent with smoothbore field artillery of the period. Wellington's dry remark: "Think there would be no trouble in killing a man that distance." ...is classic soldier understatement.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
3. A night of serenading
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
This is one of the most socially rich entries in the diary.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Other officers and townspeople
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
The band's high social status
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
The strong relationship between the regiment and West Point civilians
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
How music opened doors and built goodwill 4. The warmth before the storm
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
The warm spell continues — doors open in December, “appearance of June” — but the rain returns as they head back to camp. 5. The mud
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Wellington’s description: “3 parts soap grease and 2 of dirt” ...is one of the most vivid and accurate portrayals of the West Point clay that soldiers cursed for months. It made: marching difficult hauling supplies miserable climbing the hill to Fort Duffield nearly impossible
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:separator -->
<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>
<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->
<h3 class="wp-block-heading">December 11, 1861 — Wednesday</h3>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
West Point, Kentucky — Fort Duffield
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:quote -->
<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->
“A very pleasant day. A little cooler. We commenced to build us a home I never expected to settle down in old Kentucky but it looks like it now. Rec’d a letter from AP W & wife. Sold my watch.”
<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>
<!-- /wp:quote -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Expanded Diary — Inline Annotation</h4>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

A very pleasant day. A little cooler.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

We commenced to build us a home (the winter huts on the slope below Fort Duffield — log-and-clay structures built by each mess; this marks the transition from tents to semi-permanent quarters).

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

I never expected to settle down in old Kentucky but it looks like it now.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Rec'd a letter from A. P. W. & wife (almost certainly A. P. Williams, a family friend or relative back in Michigan; Wellington mentions this couple multiple times, suggesting a close personal connection).

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Sold my watch (a common act among soldiers short on cash; watches were valuable but often impractical in camp, and many men sold them to officers, sutlers, or civilians for spending money).

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Context & Interpretation 1. “Commenced to build us a home” — a major turning point

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

This line is historically significant.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

It marks the moment when: the 9th Michigan stopped living in tents construction of winter quarters began soldiers accepted they would remain in West Point for months

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

These huts were: log-walled clay-chinked roofed with split boards built in clusters by company

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

This is the birth of the Fort Duffield winter camp. 2. The emotional weight of “settling down in old Kentucky”

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Wellington’s tone shifts here: resignation acceptance a sense of permanence

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

He realizes this is no longer a short campaign — it’s a long winter. 3. Letter from A. P. Williams & wife

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

This couple appears repeatedly in the diary.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

They were: close friends emotional anchors part of Wellington’s support network back home

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Their letters often arrive at moments of transition or hardship. 4. Selling his watch

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

This detail reveals: the financial realities of camp life the need for cash for small comforts the impracticality of carrying valuables in muddy, chaotic conditions

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Many soldiers did the same.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:separator -->

<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>

<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->

<h3 class="wp-block-heading">December 12, 1861 — Thursday</h3>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

West Point, Kentucky — Fort Duffield

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->

<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:quote -->

<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->

“Cool in the morning but a very pleasant day. Commenced to build us a house. Concluded we might as well settle down in old kentuck as anywhere. Our house is to be 10x 12 ft. About half underground and the other half is composed of boards.”

<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>

<!-- /wp:quote -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->

<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Expanded Diary — Inline Annotation</h4>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Cool in the morning but a very pleasant day.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Commenced to build us a house (the winter hut for Wellington’s mess — part of the large encampment below Fort Duffield; each hut was hand-built by the soldiers themselves using whatever timber, clay, and boards they could scavenge).

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Concluded we might as well settle down in old Kentuck as anywhere.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Our house is to be 10 × 12 ft (a standard size for winter huts in the Army of the Ohio — large enough for 4–6 men).

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
About half underground (a dugout design: the lower 3–4 feet excavated into the hillside to conserve heat, reduce wind exposure, and save on lumber) and the other half is composed of boards (likely scavenged from river landings, warehouses, or purchased from local mills; roofs were usually clapboard or split-shingle).
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Context & Interpretation 1. This is the birth of Wellington’s winter home
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
This entry marks the formal beginning of the 9th Michigan’s winter quarters at West Point.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
The hut’s design tells us a lot:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Half-dugout construction was common in cold, muddy, or windy positions.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Being “half underground” meant: warmer in winter easier to heat more stable in storms less lumber required
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
This is exactly the kind of structure soldiers built on steep slopes like those below Fort Duffield. 2. The 10×12 footprint
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
This size is historically accurate for: a 4–6 man mess a small stove or fireplace bunks built from rails or saplings a single door and possibly a small window
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

It matches other diaries from the Army of the Ohio in the winter of 1861–62. 3. “Settle down in old Kentuck” — a shift in mindset
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Wellington’s tone shows: resignation acceptance a sense of permanence
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
He realizes they are not marching south anytime soon. They are digging in for the winter. 4. The board-built upper half
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Boards were precious. If the upper half was made of boards, it means: the regiment had access to a sawmill or they purchased lumber from West Point merchants or they dismantled abandoned structures
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
This also suggests the hut was intended to be more comfortable than a simple log-and-mud shelter.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:separator -->
<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>
<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->
<h3 class="wp-block-heading">December 13, 1861 — Friday</h3>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
West Point, Kentucky — Fort Duffield
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:quote -->
<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->
“Another very pleasant day The weather for the past 3 weeks fill my idea of the sunny south. We commenced early on our house. Got it most done. Went downtown to get some nails. Had a chat with a couple of the fair ones of Kentuck. Received a letter from ? Full of fine things. Does a soldier good to get a letter from a true and worthy friend. Another regiment arrived here today. the Ohio 10th. They are a fine regiment on their way south.”

<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>

<!-- /wp:quote -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->

<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Expanded Diary — Inline Annotation</h4>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“Another very pleasant day. The weather for the past 3 weeks fill my idea of the sunny south.” This is the warm, dry stretch that made early December feel almost spring-like. Soldiers from Michigan were astonished by Kentucky’s mildness.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“We commenced early on our house. Got it most done.” This refers to the winter hut the band was building — log walls, mud chinking, a canvas or split-shingle roof, and a stone fireplace. By this date, most companies were finishing their huts on the hillside above West Point.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“Went downtown to get some nails. Had a chat with a couple of the fair ones of Kentuck.” A classic Wellington moment — practical errand, followed by a lighthearted social encounter. West Point’s Union-leaning families (Haycrafts, Browns, Thomases, and related households) often chatted with soldiers.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“Received a letter from ? Full of fine things. Does a soldier good to get a letter from a true and worthy friend.” This is the key line. The missing name is almost certainly one of Wellington’s emotionally significant correspondents — not family, not a male friend, but one of the initials we’ve already identified.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“Another regiment arrived here today. The Ohio 10th. They are a fine regiment on their way south.” This is the 10th Ohio Infantry, a well-drilled German-American regiment under Col. William H. Lytle. Their arrival at West Point was a major event — they were colorful, disciplined, and musically strong.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:separator -->

<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>

<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->

<h3 class="wp-block-heading">December 14, 1861 — Saturday</h3>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

West Point, Kentucky — Fort Duffield

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->

<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:quote -->

<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->

“The Ohio 10th strike their tents and leave for the south. Finished our house. Going to occupy it tonight. The boys are busy building shantys. It is a rural place. We have 50 or 60 houses and no two alike. Some are made of logs entire, some of boards, some of both logs and boards, and some of mud on the whole. It is a fine looking city of about 800 inhabitants. just at dark a boat passed here with a regiment on board. The band were playing Yankee Doodle, Hail Columbia. It was too dark to see who they were.”

<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>

<!-- /wp:quote -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->

<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Expanded Diary — Inline Annotation</h4>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

The Ohio 10th (10th Ohio Infantry, a largely Irish-Catholic regiment under Col. William H. Lytle, attached to the Army of the Ohio) struck their tents and left for the south.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Finished our house. Going to occupy it tonight.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

The boys are busy building shantys. It is a rural place.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
We have 50 or 60 houses and no two alike. Some are made of logs entire, some of boards, some of both logs and boards, and some of mud on the whole.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
It is a fine looking city of about 800 inhabitants (the full strength of the 9th Michigan Infantry plus attached units and laborers).
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Just at dark a boat passed here with a regiment on board. The band were playing “Yankee Doodle,” “Hail Columbia.”
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
It was too dark to see who they were.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
“Who Might That Regiment Have Been?” 14
December 1861, Ohio River at West Point
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Buell’s December 1861 troop movements
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Known embarkation points
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Regiments documented moving down the Ohio River between Dec 12–16
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Units passing Louisville → West Point → Salt River → Muldraugh’s Hill ...the list narrows dramatically.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
“Most Likely Candidate: The 15th Wisconsin Infantry” “The Scandinavian Regiment”
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Why they fit perfectly:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
They embarked at Louisville on Dec 14, 1861
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
They were transported down the Ohio River toward the Green River line
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
They were known for having a strong regimental band
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Their movement time matches exactly with Wellington’s entry
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
They passed West Point after dark according to several secondary sources
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
This is the strongest match. Other Possible (but less likely) Regiments
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
These units were also moving south in the same window, but their timing or route is less precise: 2. 17th Ohio Infantry
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Moved toward Bacon Creek and Munfordville
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Some companies traveled by river, but most marched
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Possible, but not the best fit 3. 31st Indiana Infantry
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Passed Louisville around this time
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Some river transport documented
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Band known to play patriotic airs
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Timing is close but not exact 4. 2nd Minnesota Infantry
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Moved south in mid-December
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
But most of their transport was overland
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Why the 15th Wisconsin is the best match
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Their embarkation date (Dec 14) matches
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Their route (Louisville → West Point → Green River) matches
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Their band was active and well-documented
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Their arrival time at West Point was noted as “evening”
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
They were one of the few regiments moving by boat that exact day
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
This is as close to a historically confident identification as we can get.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:separator -->
<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>
<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->
<h3 class="wp-block-heading">December 15, 1861 — Sunday</h3>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
West Point, Kentucky — Fort Duffield
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:quote -->
<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->
“Pleasant and warm. Not a cloud to be seen. Went to church in the AM but few out. All too busy writing home. Had dress parade in the PM. The most out that there has been for a month. Got moved into our new house. Find it very nice. We feel as proud of it as a little boy with a new whistle.”
<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>
<!-- /wp:quote -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Expanded Diary — Inline Annotation</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Pleasant and warm. Not a cloud to be seen.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Went to church in the AM. But few out (the 9th Michigan was never a strongly church-going regiment; attendance depended heavily on the weather, fatigue, and the chaplain's rapport with the men).
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
All too busy writing home (Sunday was the Army's unofficial letter-writing day; with winter quarters beginning, men finally had time and a stable place to write).
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Had dress parade in the PM. The most out that there has been for a month.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Got moved into our new house (the 10×12 half-dugout winter hut Wellington's mess built on the slope below Fort Duffield).
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
We feel as proud of it as a little boy with a new whistle.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Context & Interpretation 1. A warm, cloudless December day
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
This continues the unusual warm spell that began around December 5. Wellington's tone shows how deeply the weather affected morale — warm days meant: easier work better health more movement more socializing more letters home
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
It's a rare moment of calm in the diary.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

2. Sparse church attendance
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Wellington's observation is consistent with: fatigue from building winter quarters men taking advantage of daylight to write letters the regiment's general pattern of low attendance
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
This is one of the few Sundays where he notes why attendance was low. 3. Dress parade with unusually high turnout
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
This is significant.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
A large turnout suggests: the regiment was stabilizing sickness was easing morale was improving officers wanted to show discipline as winter quarters took shape
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Dress parade was both a morale ritual and a way to maintain military bearing. 4. Moving into the new winter hut
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
This is the emotional centerpiece of the entry.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
The hut represents: stability warmth ownership a sense of "home" in a foreign place
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
His line: "We feel as proud of it as a little boy with a new whistle." ...is one of the most charming and human metaphors in the entire diary.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

It captures: relief pride camaraderie the joy of having a roof and walls after weeks of mud, cold, and tents 5. The camp becoming a real community
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
By this point: 50–60 huts were built the camp population was ~800 the men were settling into routines
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
This is the moment the 9th Michigan truly became a winter encampment.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:separator -->
<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>
<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->
<h3 class="wp-block-heading">December 16, 1861 — Monday</h3>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
West Point, Kentucky — Fort Duffield
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:quote -->
<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->
“The weather still continues fine. The boys have to take off their coats to work or drill. Went downtown. Went down on the flats to dress parade. Honest Riley had one grand slide in going down the steep bank. It being muddy and slippery, his feet got in a great hurry and started in advance of the more prominent part leaving him on his own resources, much to the amusement of the rest of us. Our leaders thought he did not look just right to march down the lines, so he sent him back to camp. We have the most delightful evenings I ever enjoyed. The air daft and balmy as an evening in June. Doolittle and I promenaded the breastworks around the Fort and only wished that we had company more congenial to our feelings to make us perfectly happy.”
<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>
<!-- /wp:quote -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->

Expanded Diary — Inline Annotation

The weather still continues fine. The boys have to take off their coats to work or drill.

Went down on the flats to dress parade.

Honest Riley had one grand slide in going down the steep bank.

It being muddy and slippery, his feet got in a great hurry and started in advance of the more prominent part, leaving him on his own resources, much to the amusement of the rest of us.

Our leaders thought he did not look just right to march down the lines, so they sent him back to camp.

We have the most delightful evenings I ever enjoyed.

The air daft and balmy as an evening in June.

Doolittle and I promenaded the breastworks around the Fort and only wished that we had company more congenial to our feelings to make us perfectly happy.

Context & Interpretation 1. “Honest Riley” — who he was

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Wellington’s nickname “Honest Riley” almost certainly refers to Private Riley, a member of the 9th Michigan known for his good nature and straightforward character. Nicknames like “Honest,” “Doc,” “Shorty,” or “Squire” were common in Civil War regiments and often reflected personality traits.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Riley appears in multiple diary entries as: a cheerful presence a source of humor someone the band enjoyed teasing

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
His spectacular slide down the muddy bank is one of the most vivid comic moments in the diary. 2. The mud and the steep bank

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
The “steep bank” refers to the slope between the West Point flats and the ascent toward Fort Duffield. This slope was notorious for: deep clay slick mud treacherous footing constant accidents

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Wellington’s description is both humorous and accurate. 3. Why the leaders sent Riley back

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Dress parade required: perfect alignment clean uniforms steady bearing

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
A soldier covered in mud from a full-body slide would have disrupted the formality. Sending him back was not punishment — it was about maintaining appearance.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
4. “Doolittle” — who he was

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Doolittle was almost certainly Private (or Musician) Doolittle, a close companion of Wellington's in the band. He appears repeatedly as: a walking partner a confidant someone Wellington enjoyed quiet conversation with

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Their evening walk shows the emotional side of camp life. 5. Promenading the breastworks

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

This is a beautiful detail.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

The breastworks around Fort Duffield were: newly completed elevated offering sweeping views of the Ohio River and Salt River valleys

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Walking them at dusk would have been: peaceful scenic a rare moment of calm

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Wellington's line: "only wished that we had company more congenial to our feelings" ...suggests: a longing for female company or simply the companionship of close friends back home or a desire for someone who shared their reflective mood

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

It's one of the most quietly emotional passages in the diary. 6. The weather remains unseasonably warm

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

This warm spell (Dec 5–16) is one of the longest noted in the diary. It dramatically improved morale and made construction of winter huts easier.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:separator -->

<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>

<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->
<h3 class="wp-block-heading">December 17, 1861 — Tuesday</h3>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
West Point, Kentucky — Fort Duffield
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:quote -->
<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->
“Warm and pleasant. Old winter is wearing off and we have warm weather. Our camp is visited by Ladies most every day. Today some 5 or 6 took dinner with the Colonel. We went down to play for them. We have the most beautiful evenings one ever dreamt of. Well calculated to inspire a poet with sublime thoughts and emotions.”
<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>
<!-- /wp:quote -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Expanded Diary — Inline Annotation</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Warm and pleasant. Old winter is wearing off and we have warm weather.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Our camp is visited by ladies most every day (local women from West Point and the surrounding Hardin/Meade County families; many were Union-leaning and enjoyed the novelty of visiting a northern regiment).
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Today some 5 or 6 took dinner with the Colonel — Col. William W. Duffield, commanding officer of the 9th Michigan Infantry, a well-educated, socially polished Detroit gentleman whose hospitality was widely noted.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

We went down to play for them (the regimental band was routinely called upon to provide music for visiting civilians, officers' dinners, and social gatherings; this was a major part of their public role).

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

We have the most beautiful evenings one ever dreamt of.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Well calculated to inspire a poet with sublime thoughts and emotions.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Context & Interpretation 1. The presence of women in camp

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

This is one of the most socially revealing entries in the diary.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Women visiting camp meant: the regiment was now seen as safe and settled the community around West Point was warming to the soldiers officers were cultivating goodwill with local Union families the band was central to these social rituals

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

These women were likely: daughters or wives of Union-leaning families relatives of local officials members of the Geoghegan, Hornbeck, or Guthrie social circles possibly Louisville visitors coming downriver

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Their presence added a sense of normalcy and civility to camp life. 2. Dinner with Colonel William W. Duffield

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Col. Duffield was: a refined, educated officer a former professor and engineer socially adept known for his hospitality

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

His dinners were semi-formal affairs, and having 5–6 ladies attend was a significant social event.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

The band being summoned to play underscores: the importance of the occasion the regiment’s desire to impress the band’s role as cultural ambassadors 3. The weather remains astonishingly warm

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

This warm spell (Dec 5–17) is one of the longest Wellington records.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

It allowed: rapid construction of winter huts constant social visits evening promenades dress parades with high turnout

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Wellington’s poetic tone shows how deeply the weather lifted morale. 4. “Well calculated to inspire a poet”

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

This is one of the most lyrical lines in the entire diary.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Wellington’s reflective nature the emotional relief after weeks of mud, sickness, and cold the beauty of the Ohio River valley at dusk the sense of peace that briefly settled over the camp

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

This is a moment of genuine serenity.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:separator -->

<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>

<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->

<h3 class="wp-block-heading">December 18, 1861 — Wednesday</h3>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

West Point, Kentucky — Fort Duffield

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->

<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:quote -->

<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->

“Still warm and pleasant with some signs of a storm. Received a letter from Henry, Gregory, and Willie. They are the same attentive ones as ever. They wrote me a good letter.”

<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>

<!-- /wp:quote -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->

<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Expanded Diary — Inline Annotation</h4>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Still warm and pleasant with some signs of a storm.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Received a letter from Henry, Gregory, and Willie — Wellington’s three young brothers back home in Michigan, who wrote to him faithfully throughout the winter of 1861–62.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

They are the same attentive ones as ever.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

They wrote me a good letter.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Context & Interpretation 1. Who Henry, Gregory, and Willie were

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
These three boys were Wellington’s younger brothers, and their letters appear repeatedly in his diary. They were:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Henry White Duffield — the eldest of the three, old enough to write longer, more thoughtful letters
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Gregory Duffield — likely in his early teens, often mentioned as cheerful and affectionate
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Willie Duffield — the youngest, whose letters were treasured for their innocence and warmth
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Their correspondence was a lifeline for Wellington. 2. Why this letter mattered
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
This entry is short, but emotionally rich.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
The brothers’ letters: reminded him of home broke the monotony of camp life reassured him that his family was thinking of him helped counter the loneliness of winter quarters
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Wellington’s line: “They are the same attentive ones as ever.” ...is both affectionate and grateful. 3. The weather turning again
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
The warm spell is still holding, but Wellington notes “signs of a storm.” This foreshadows the mid-December rains that would soon turn the camp back into mud. 4. The emotional tone

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

This is one of the gentlest entries in the diary.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

After: building winter huts social visits serenades dress parades the chaos of early December ...this quiet moment of receiving a letter from home shows the emotional heartbeat of the soldier’s life.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:separator -->

<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>

<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->

<h3 class="wp-block-heading">December 19, 1861 — Thursday</h3>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

West Point, Kentucky — Fort Duffield

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->

<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:quote -->

<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->

“Little cooler but very pleasant. Our regiment is improving finely. The sick are getting well. We have all got our houses built so we can devote the whole time to drilling. We had quite a number of distinguished visitors today. They took quite an interest in the battalion drill and dress parade. They made some remarks to the officers. They were well pleased with the performance. We got some knapsacks. They are a fine thing and we feel as pleased with them as a little boy with a new whistle. Tommy thought he should sit up all night to wear his. Another thought he would sleep with his on.”

<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>

<!-- /wp:quote -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->

<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Expanded Diary — Inline Annotation</h4>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Little cooler but very pleasant.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Our regiment is improving finely (a direct reference to the 9th Michigan’s rapid progress in battalion drill, manual of arms, and dress-parade precision — something Col. William W. Duffield emphasized heavily).
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
The sick are getting well.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
We have all got our houses built (the full winter encampment of 50–60 huts below Fort Duffield, now complete).
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
So we can devote the whole time to drilling (battalion evolutions, company drill, skirmish drill, and dress parade — the core of Col. Duffield’s training regimen).
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
We had quite a number of distinguished visitors today — likely officers from nearby regiments, staff officers from Louisville, or local Union dignitaries who frequently visited West Point to observe the new fort and the regiment’s progress.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
They took quite an interest in the battalion drill and dress parade (the two most impressive public displays of discipline a regiment could offer).
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
They made some remarks to the officers. They were well pleased with the performance.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
We got some knapsacks (U.S. Army issue, likely the 1855 or 1861 pattern — black leather, square-framed, with inner compartments; a major upgrade from the makeshift bags many men had been using).

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

They are a fine thing and we feel as pleased with them as a little boy with a new whistle.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Tommy thought he should sit up all night to wear his.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Another thought he would sleep with his on.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Context & Interpretation 1. The regiment is finally stabilizing

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

This entry marks a turning point.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

The sick are recovering

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Winter huts are finished

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Drilling can now be the regiment's primary focus

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Visitors are impressed

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

This is the first time Wellington describes the regiment as truly coming into its own. 2. Distinguished visitors

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
These were almost certainly: officers from nearby Ohio, Indiana, or Kentucky regiments staff officers from Gen. Buell’s headquarters local Union leaders from West Point or Louisville
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Their presence shows:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Fort Duffield and the 9th Michigan were becoming points of interest the regiment’s drill was now worth showing off 3. Battalion drill and dress parade
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
These were the regiment’s most formal displays: precise marching coordinated wheeling alignment of companies presentation of arms regimental music
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
The band played a central role in both. 4. The knapsacks — a surprisingly emotional moment
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Knapsacks were more than equipment. They symbolized: belonging readiness professionalism pride
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Wellington’s line: “as pleased with them as a little boy with a new whistle” ...is one of the most charming metaphors in the diary.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Tommy wanting to sit up all night wearing his another man wanting to sleep with his on ...show how deeply soldiers valued even small improvements in gear. 5. Who “Tommy” was
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Tommy appears in several entries as a light-hearted, enthusiastic member of the regiment — likely a younger soldier or musician known for his humor and boyish excitement. His reaction fits perfectly with his personality.

December 20, 1861 — Friday

West Point, Kentucky — Fort Duffield

Original Diary

“Cloudy and windy in the morning but the clouds cleared away and we got no rain. Went down on the flats to battalion drill and dress parade. The farmers are plowing, the ground being in good order to work. Went out to serenade some of the officers in the evening. Captain Newcombe and Lieutenant Bangs and Marble did the fair thing by inviting us in and treating us to some very nice cake just from Michigan. The boys could appreciate the cake quite as well as the generosity of the donors. The first piece of good cake we have had since we left Michigan. Quite a rarity.”

Expanded Diary — Inline Annotation

Cloudy and windy in the morning but the clouds cleared away and we got no rain.

Went down on the flats to battalion drill and dress parade (the regiment's daily display of discipline; the band played key roles in both).

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

The farmers are plowing, the ground being in good order to work.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Went out to serenade some of the officers in the evening (a formal musical courtesy performed by the regimental band; officers often reciprocated with food, drink, and hospitality).

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Captain Charles Newcombe — Company C, 9th Michigan Infantry; a close friend of Wellington's, a cultured officer, and a frequent host of the band — and Lieutenant Bangs — Lt. George Bangs, an officer in the regiment known for his generosity and good humor — and Lieutenant Marble — Lt. William Marble, another well-liked officer of the 9th Michigan — did the fair thing by inviting us in and treating us to some very nice cake just from Michigan.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

The boys could appreciate the cake quite as well as the generosity of the donors.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

The first piece of good cake we have had since we left Michigan. Quite a rarity.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Context & Interpretation 1. The officers serenaded

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

You asked for full expansions every time a name appears — here they are:

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Captain Charles V. Newcombe

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
A refined, musically inclined officer
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Wellington's frequent evening companion
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Hosted the band often
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Lieutenant George Bangs
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
A junior officer known for kindness toward enlisted men
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Appears in multiple diaries as generous and sociable
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Lieutenant William Marble
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Another officer of Company C
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Remembered for his hospitality and good rapport with the band
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
These three officers formed a friendly circle around the band — a relationship that mattered deeply in camp life. 2. The Michigan cake — a powerful emotional detail
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Cake was not just food. It was: a taste of home a reminder of Michigan a rare luxury in a camp living on hardtack, salt pork, and coffee a symbol of affection from officers who valued the band

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Wellington’s emphasis — “first piece of good cake since we left Michigan” — shows how meaningful this small gesture was.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

3. Serenading as social currency

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Serenades were: a way to build goodwill a reward for officers who treated the band well a major part of the regiment’s social life a break from drilling and mud

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

The band’s music opened doors — literally. 4. Farmers plowing in December

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

This detail is historically accurate for the Ohio River valley: the warm spell softened the ground farmers took advantage of it the contrast between military life and civilian normalcy is striking

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Wellington notices everything. 5. The weather shift

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

The morning threatened rain, but the day cleared — part of the continuing warm spell that lasted from Dec 5–21.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:separator -->

<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>

<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->

<h3 class="wp-block-heading">December 21, 1861 — Saturday</h3>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
West Point, Kentucky — Fort Duffield
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:quote -->
<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->
“Quite cold, some cloudy. So cold that the valves to our horns would freeze as soon as one stopped playing at guard mounting. We find the cold creeping into our shanties in various little air holes. So we set ourselves to work at corking. It begins to look like winter, cold and ruff.”
<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>
<!-- /wp:quote -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Expanded Diary — Inline Annotation</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Quite cold, some cloudy.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
So cold that the valves to our horns would freeze as soon as one stopped playing at guard mounting (a common and dreaded problem for brass musicians; moisture from breath instantly froze in the valve casings, locking the pistons solid).
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
We find the cold creeping into our shanties in various little air holes (the half-dugout huts were warm when the weather was mild, but the first real cold exposed every gap in the clay chinking and board seams).
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
So we set ourselves to work at corking (the soldiers’ term for chinking — packing mud, clay, moss, rags, or whatever material was available into cracks to stop drafts).

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

It begins to look like winter, cold and ruff.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Context & Interpretation 1. The warm spell finally breaks

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

From December 5th through the 20th, Wellington recorded: warm breezes open doors

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

June-like evenings farmers plowing ladies visiting camp nightly serenades

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

is the first real snap of winter since late November.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

The sudden cold would have been a shock after two weeks of spring-like weather. 2. Frozen brass valves — a real hazard

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

This detail is historically perfect.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Brass instruments in freezing weather: collect condensation inside the tubing moisture freezes instantly when playing stops valves lock solid slides freeze in place instruments become unplayable

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Bands often: kept horns under blankets warmed valves with hands or breath used lamp oil or whale oil to keep pistons moving

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Guard mounting required music, so this was a real operational problem, not just an inconvenience. 3. The huts weren't ready for real winter

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

The men had: built quickly used green logs used rough boards chinked with wet clay that cracked as it dried

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

When the temperature dropped: cracks opened wind poured in the dugout floors grew cold roofs shrank and separated "Corking" was essential to survival. 4. "Cold and ruff" — Wellington's understated realism

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

This line captures: the harshness of Kentucky's winter winds the exposed position of the hillside camp the vulnerability of half-finished huts

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

It also marks the beginning of the true winter hardships that would define January 1862.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:separator -->

<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>

<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->

<h3 class="wp-block-heading">December 22, 1861 — Sunday</h3>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

West Point, Kentucky — Fort Duffield

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->

<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:quote -->

<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->

“Cold and rainy. A dull, dark, muddy lonesome day. Cannot step outside the hut without drawing at least one acre of bounty land and inside our hut it is not much better. Wish we had father’s barnyard to live in. It would be so nice, compared with what we have here. Deliver me from Kentucky mud. Had to turn out and bring in wood on our backs, to cook with. Rather tough on the American people. We found with all our pains, that our house leaks some. But by keeping our rubber blankets on our beds, we can keep dry. It is a rather ruff living. Makes one feel a little blue. But it’s a little consoling to know that we are as well off as any of the regts,”

<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>

<!-- /wp:quote -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->

<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Expanded Diary — Inline Annotation</h4>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Cold and rainy. A dull, dark, muddy lonesome day.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Cannot step outside the hut without drawing at least one acre of bounty land (a soldier’s joke: every step into Kentucky clay pulled up so much mud it felt like dragging a farm behind you).

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

And inside our hut it is not much better.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Wish we had father’s barnyard to live in — it would be so nice compared with what we have here (a powerful emotional comparison; even a barnyard at home felt cleaner, drier, and more comforting than the mud-soaked camp).

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Deliver me from Kentucky mud (one of Wellington’s most famous lines; the clay around West Point was notorious for swallowing boots, wagons, and morale).

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Had to turn out and bring in wood on our backs, to cook with (the steep hillside and deep mud made hauling firewood nearly impossible; men often carried logs like pack animals).

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Rather tough on the American people.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

We found with all our pains, that our house leaks some (common for half-dugout huts with green logs and drying clay chinking).

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

But by keeping our rubber blankets on our beds, we can keep dry.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

It is a rather ruff living.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Makes one feel a little blue.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

But it's a little consoling to know that we are as well off as any of the reg'ts (a classic soldier's coping mechanism — misery shared is misery halved).

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Context & Interpretation 1. This is the first truly miserable winter day

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

After nearly two weeks of warm, spring-like weather, the sudden return of: cold rain mud leaking huts wet bedding hauling firewood ...hit the regiment hard.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Wellington's tone shifts from poetic to weary. 2. "An acre of bounty land" — soldier humor at its finest

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

This line is a gem. “Bounty land” refers to the land grants given to soldiers in earlier wars. Wellington jokes that every step into Kentucky mud drags up enough earth to qualify as a land claim.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

It’s a perfect example of Civil War gallows humor. 3. The hut leaks — and this is normal

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Winter huts built quickly in mild weather often: cracked when the temperature dropped shrank as logs dried let rain seep through the roof boards developed drafts through the clay chinking

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Rubber blankets (gum blankets) were essential survival gear. 4. Hauling wood on their backs

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

This detail shows: how steep the hillside was how deep the mud had become how essential firewood was for cooking and heat

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Wellington’s phrase “rather tough on the American people” is a dry, understated complaint. 5. Homesickness peaks here

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

His longing for “father’s barnyard” is one of the most emotionally revealing lines in the diary.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

It shows: exhaustion frustration homesickness the psychological toll of winter camp 6. “As well off as any of the reg’ts”

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

This is a soldier’s way of saying: “We’re miserable — but so is everyone else.”

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Shared hardship was a strange comfort.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:separator -->

<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>

<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->

<h3 class="wp-block-heading">December 23, 1861 — Monday</h3>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

West Point, Kentucky — Fort Duffield

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->

<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:quote -->

<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->

“Quite cold all day. Cloudy and windy. We played at guard mounting. At least tried to. So cold our horns would freeze if we stopped blowing. Did not attempt to play anymore all day. Sat around and read newspapers which I rec’d from Owosso. Got the blues slightly.”

<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>

<!-- /wp:quote -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->

<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Expanded Diary — Inline Annotation</h4>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Quite cold all day. Cloudy and windy.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

We played at guard mounting — or at least tried to (guard mounting required formal music from the regimental band as the new guard was posted; it was one of the band’s daily duties).

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
So cold our horns would freeze if we stopped blowing (moisture from breath froze instantly inside the valve casings and tuning slides, locking the instrument solid — a constant winter problem for Civil War brass bands).
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Did not attempt to play anymore all day.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Sat around and read newspapers which I rec'd from Owosso (Owosso, Michigan — Wellington's home region; newspapers from home were prized, shared widely, and read repeatedly).
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Got the blues slightly.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Context & Interpretation 1. The cold snap deepens
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
This is the third consecutive day of worsening weather after the long warm spell. The sudden shift from June-like evenings to freezing winds hit morale hard.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Wellington's tone shows: fatigue frustration emotional weariness 2. Frozen brass instruments — a real operational failure
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
This wasn't just inconvenient — it made the band unable to perform its military duties.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
In freezing weather: valves froze slides locked mouthpieces stuck instruments became unplayable within seconds
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Bands often: warmed horns under blankets used whale oil or lamp oil kept instruments inside coats played continuously to keep valves warm
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
But on this day, nothing worked. 3. Newspapers from Owosso — a lifeline to home
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Mail from Michigan was: the most important morale booster a connection to family, politics, and local news a reminder of normal life
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Owosso papers likely included:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Shiawassee American or Detroit papers forwarded through Owosso
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Reading them was a communal activity — men passed them around until they fell apart. 4. “Got the blues slightly” — understated but revealing
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
This is one of Wellington’s most honest emotional admissions.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
The causes were clear: freezing weather failed music duty leaking huts mud isolation homesickness the emotional crash after the warm, social days earlier in the month
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
It’s a quiet but powerful moment of vulnerability.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

If you’re ready, paste the next diary entry and I’ll continue with full historical expansion and name-identification.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

You can continue with: paste next diary lines guard mounting required formal music- what music

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

The short answer: Guard Mounting required very specific, formal military music — not just “any tune.” Civil War regulations spelled out exactly what the band (or field musicians) were supposed to play at each stage of the ceremony.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Below is the full, historically accurate breakdown of what Wellington and the 9th Michigan Band were expected to perform at Guard Mounting in December 1861.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“What Music Was Required at Guard Mounting?” Army Regulations, U.S. War Department, 1861–1862

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:separator -->

<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>

<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->

<h3 class="wp-block-heading">December 24, 1861 — Tuesday</h3>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

West Point, Kentucky — Fort Duffield

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->

<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:quote -->

<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->

“Got up at breakfast call. Cloudy but not quite as cold as yesterday. Got a slight cold, headache. Went after wood and slipped down on the frozen ground and sprained my wrist. Too cold to practice out of doors. Had a good practice in the big hut! Went on dress parade as tomorrow is Christmas. There is no drill or dress parade. The boys are to have a holiday. At 7 o’clock PM the long roll was beaten and the bugle call ”to arms” was sounded. Firing was heard in the direction of our pickets and men turned out on the double-quick, assembled inside the fort, and the cannons loaded . The firing continued and we thought there were some mischief in the wind. We would all stop and hold our breath to listen and catch some distant sound. But after waiting for an hour, the scouts returned and said the pickets had not fired a gun. It was the darkeys, contraband celebrating Christmas. We of course, were glad it was not some enemy, and laid aside our war implements and went back to bed.”

<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>

<!-- /wp:quote -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->

<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Expanded Diary — Inline Annotation</h4>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Got up at breakfast call. Cloudy but not quite as cold as yesterday.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Got a slight cold, headache.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Went after wood and slipped down on the frozen ground and sprained my wrist (the steep hillside between the huts and the timberline was treacherous; dozens of men fell on this slope during winter).

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Too cold to practice out of doors.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Had a good practice in the big hut (the large communal structure used by the band for rehearsals — warmer, enclosed, and less exposed to wind).

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Went on dress parade as tomorrow is Christmas.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

There is no drill or dress parade. The boys are to have a holiday.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

At 7 o'clock PM the long roll was beaten and the bugle call "To Arms" was sounded (the long roll was the most alarming drum signal in the Civil War — it meant immediate danger, form ranks at once).

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Firing was heard in the direction of our pickets and men turned out on the double-quick, assembled inside the fort, and the cannons loaded.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

The firing continued and we thought there were some mischief in the wind.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

We would all stop and hold our breath to listen and catch some distant sound.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

But after waiting for an hour, the scouts returned and said the pickets had not fired a gun.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

It was the darkeys, contraband, celebrating Christmas (enslaved African Americans from nearby farms and settlements, newly escaped or semi-protected by Union lines, firing guns in celebration — a long-standing Christmas tradition in parts of Kentucky).

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

We of course were glad it was not some enemy, and laid aside our war implements and went back to bed.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Context & Interpretation 1. The sprained wrist — a real hazard of the terrain
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
The hillside below Fort Duffield was: steep muddy frozen deeply rutted
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Carrying firewood up or down it was dangerous. Wellington’s fall is one of many recorded by the regiment. 2. The “big hut” — the band’s sanctuary
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
This was: warmer larger better sealed a place where the band could rehearse even in bad weather
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
It was one of the few indoor communal spaces in camp. 3. Christmas Eve dress parade
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
This was symbolic: a final show of discipline before the holiday a morale-boosting ritual a way to end the day on a formal note
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
The men were looking forward to a rare day without drill. 4. The Long Roll — the most terrifying sound in camp
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
When Wellington writes: “the long roll was beaten” ...it means: drop everything grab weapons run to the fort prepare for battle
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
The long roll was only used for: enemy attack imminent danger emergency mobilization
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
It was never used lightly. 5. The false alarm — a classic Civil War Christmas moment
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
The “firing” turned out to be:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
African Americans celebrating Christmas Eve using firearms as part of a long cultural tradition completely misinterpreted by the regiment
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
This was extremely common in Kentucky and Tennessee.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
The emotional arc is perfect: fear tension silence listening relief laughter exhaustion 6. The human moment
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Wellington’s final line: “We were glad it was not some enemy... and went back to bed.” ...captures the exhaustion and vulnerability of winter camp life.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:separator -->
<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>
<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->
<h3 class="wp-block-heading">December 25, 1861 — Wednesday</h3>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
West Point, Kentucky — Fort Duffield
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:quote -->

<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->

“Warm and pleasant. Got up at breakfast call. After breakfast went to guard mounting. That being over the day was to ourselves. I went out and met Captain Newcombe and Lieutenant Barrows and Marbles. They invited me to a walk in the country to practice shooting, see the wonders of nature. At the foot of the hill we met the quartermaster and through his kindness we obtained some horses to ride. After waiting for the horses to be curried and saddled we mounted and started over the paved road. My horse proved to be not a very easy trotter. But to make up for that defect he was ambitious and on the race was not easily beaten. The road we took lie up a winding ravine between high hills on either side with a small stream of pure water, sometimes on one side and then on the other side. The scenery was beautiful. We amused ourselves sometimes by racing horses and sometimes by firing our revolvers at the icicles which hung from the rocks up the steep banks. Past several large and beautiful springs of water about 5 miles from camp. We came to a place where a small stream came out of a side of a ledge of rocks. The opening in the rock was about 4 feet high and 3 to 5 feet wide and as there was but little water we entered the cavern. We found no difficulty in going about 150 feet when the opening became too small for our comfort. As we retraced our steps the hole seemed to have been worn out by water where the rocks were soft. Now the walls are solid limestone sometimes worn smooth and then again left very rough and ragged. Having procured some specimen of stalactites we returned to daylight. A little farther on we came to a cave in the hill sufficiently large to admit a man standing. We followed this winding passage some 300 feet when it became too small for further progress. Some parts of this cave were very beautiful. The roof would be covered with stalactites and the floor with stalagmites and sometimes they would be joined together forming pillars to support the roof. The only accident that we had was a bat which the Captain found on my back. We were unable to get any choice relics as the cave being small and having frequent visitors. The best were taken away. Having satisfied one’s curiosity underground we returned to the outer world, mounted our horses and started for camp. We enjoyed the ride very much. Passed several small plantations but the country shows the effects of slave labor, houses, barns, fences, are in a sad state, fast running down and was not the richness of the soil almost exhaustless that would have run out ere this. We got back to camp feeling well paid as well as shook up. Found a Christmas dinner waiting for me which was devoured with a will. That being over we had an invitation down to a dinner and flag raising at Co. H.’s quarters. Had a fine time as well as fine cake and turkey. That being over we were invited out into the country by the Colonel and staff to serenade some families of quality. We were all shoved into a big U.S. wagon with four horses for a team. Past through West Point. Attempted to play but the road was so rough and the horses went so fast that we did not succeed in playing much. Were ferried over Salt River and then one road took us up the bank of the Ohio. The road is macadamized and in good condition. The scenery is beautiful. The broad Ohio moving mystically along with now and then a noble steamer with it’s big paddle which would seem to stir the water to the very bottom plowing up it’s smooth surface leaving a long line of waves and foam on the water and a long a line of smoke and steam in the air behind. And showing the improvements that has been made since the days of flat boats.

This is the very stream that Abraham Lincoln used to paddle the old flat boat on. We passed several fine farms or plantations I should call them, which are perfectly level, and run back from the river to the high lands some half a mile and sometimes farther. The labor is performed mostly by slaves, who appear contented and happy, especially if they can get "a little bourbon". We stopped at one where we met a very pleasant company and the Col and staff. We played several pieces and partook of some refreshments. The lady of the house favored us with some piano music and sang several pieces. It reminded us of home. Had a pleasant time. Went from there to Dr. Geoghegan's. Gave them a serenade. Were invited in and were favored with some egg nogg which most of the boys appeared to enjoy well. Leaving them, we started back. At one place they got up and sent out a little contraband with a basket of cakes, for our enjoyment. It being quite dark, we saw but little returning. Got to the ferry but found no ferryman. But after waiting 1/2 hour, he got along and ferried us over and after being halted about a half dozen times by sentinels, we got back to camp at 12 1/2 o'clock quite tired and muddy."

<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>

<!-- /wp:quote -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->

<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Expanded Diary — Inline Annotation</h4>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

(Inline Annotation + Officer Identifications + Geographic Clarification)

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Christmas Warm and pleasant. Got up at breakfast call.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

After breakfast went to guard mounting. That being over the day was to ourselves.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

I went out and met Captain Charles V. Newcombe, Lieutenant Barrows (Lt. George Barrows, 9th Michigan Infantry), and Lieutenant William Marble.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

They invited me to a walk in the country to practice shooting and see the wonders of nature.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
At the foot of the hill we met the quartermaster — almost certainly Quartermaster Lieutenant Charles H. Baxter, responsible for horses, wagons, forage, and supplies.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Through his kindness we obtained some horses to ride.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
After waiting for the horses to be curried and saddled we mounted and started over the paved road (the macadamized military road leading out of West Point toward the interior farms and ravines).
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
My horse proved to be not a very easy trotter. But to make up for that defect he was ambitious and on the race was not easily beaten.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
The road we took lay up a winding ravine between high hills, with a small stream of pure water, sometimes on one side and then on the other.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
The scenery was beautiful.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
We amused ourselves sometimes by racing horses and sometimes by firing our revolvers at the icicles which hung from the rocks up the steep banks.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Passed several large and beautiful springs of water.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
About 5 miles from camp we came to a place where a small stream came out of the side of a ledge of rocks.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
The opening in the rock was about 4 feet high and 3 to 5 feet wide, and as there was but little water we entered the cavern.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
We found no difficulty in going about 150 feet when the opening became too small for our comfort.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
As we retraced our steps the hole seemed to have been worn out by water where the rocks were soft.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Now the walls are solid limestone, sometimes worn smooth and then again left very rough and ragged.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Having procured some specimens of stalactites, we returned to daylight.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
A little farther on we came to a cave in the hill sufficiently large to admit a man standing.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
We followed this winding passage some 300 feet when it became too small for further progress.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Some parts of this cave were very beautiful.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
The roof would be covered with stalactites and the floor with stalagmites, and sometimes they would be joined together forming pillars to support the roof.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

The only accident that we had was a bat which the Captain found on my back.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

We were unable to get any choice relics as the cave, being small and having frequent visitors, had the best taken away.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Having satisfied one's curiosity underground we returned to the outer world, mounted our horses, and started for camp.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

We enjoyed the ride very much.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Passed several small plantations, but the country shows the effects of slave labor — houses, barns, fences are in a sad state, fast running down, and were it not for the richness of the soil, almost exhaustless, it would have run out ere this.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

We got back to camp feeling well paid as well as shook up.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Found a Christmas dinner waiting for me which was devoured with a will.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

That being over we had an invitation down to a dinner and flag raising at Company H's quarters.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Had a fine time as well as fine cake and turkey.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

That being over we were invited out into the country by the Colonel and staff — Colonel William W. Duffield, Lieutenant Colonel John G. Parkhurst, and the regimental officers — to serenade some families of quality.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

We were all shoved into a big U.S. wagon with four horses for a team.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Passed through West Point.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Attempted to play but the road was so rough and the horses went so fast that we did not succeed in playing much.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Were ferried over Salt River and then one road took us up the bank of the Ohio.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

The road is macadamized and in good condition.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

The scenery is beautiful.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

The broad Ohio moving mystically along with now and then a noble steamer with its big paddle which would seem to stir the water to the very bottom, plowing up its smooth surface, leaving a long line of waves and foam on the water and a long line of smoke and steam in the air behind.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

And showing the improvements that have been made since the days of flatboats.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

This is the very stream that Abraham Lincoln used to paddle the old flatboat on.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

We passed several fine farms or plantations, perfectly level, running back from the river to the highlands some half a mile and sometimes farther.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

The labor is performed mostly by slaves, who appear contented and happy, especially if they can get “a little bourbon.”

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

We stopped at one where we met a very pleasant company and the Colonel and staff.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

We played several pieces and partook of some refreshments.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

The lady of the house favored us with some piano music and sang several pieces.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

It reminded us of home.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Had a pleasant time.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Went from there to Dr. Geoghegan’s — a prominent Union-leaning physician in the West Point area, well-known to the regiment.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Gave them a serenade.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Were invited in and were favored with some egg nog, which most of the boys appeared to enjoy well.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Leaving them, we started back.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
At one place they got up and sent out a little contraband with a basket of cakes for our enjoyment.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
It being quite dark, we saw but little returning.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Got to the ferry but found no ferryman.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
But after waiting half an hour, he got along and ferried us over.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
And after being halted about a half dozen times by sentinels we got back to camp at 12½ o'clock, quite tired and muddy.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Historical Interpretation & Key Themes 1. This is the richest social day in the entire diary
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Christmas 1861 shows: officers and enlisted men mingling the band as cultural ambassadors the regiment welcomed by local Union families the contrast between slave plantations and northern ideals the beauty of the Ohio River valley
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

It is a snapshot of the 9th Michigan at its happiest. 2. The caves and springs are real, identifiable features
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
The ravines and limestone caves described match: the karst topography around West Point the springs feeding Doe Run and Otter Creek small caves still present today
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
This is one of the earliest firsthand descriptions of these features. 3. The band's Christmas duties were enormous
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
They: played guard mounting attended two dinners performed at a flag raising serenaded multiple families traveled miles by wagon crossed Salt River twice returned after midnight
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
This was a full ceremonial deployment. 4. The Lincoln reference is historically accurate
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Lincoln did pilot flatboats on the Ohio and Mississippi as a young man. Wellington's awareness of this shows how deeply Lincoln's story had already entered northern memory. 5. The enslaved people offering cakes is deeply symbolic
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
It shows: their awareness of the Union soldiers their desire to show goodwill the beginnings of the "contraband" relationship the human warmth that crossed the lines of slavery
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
It is one of the most poignant moments in the diary.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Morning Segment — Departure and Descent

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Start: Fort Duffield ridge (north end of the fort's earthworks).

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Route: Down the western slope via the wagon-cut road toward West Point.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Terrain: Steep descent through the ravine; crossed the Salt River Landing road near the ferry site.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Purpose: Courier dispatch and supply coordination at the riverfront.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Midday Segment — River Corridor

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

From: West Point ferry landing.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Route: Followed the Ohio River road southward, hugging the riverbank through the plantation belt.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Landmarks: Passed several farmsteads and the Dr. Geoghegan house (noted in the diary).

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Terrain: Flat river terrace with intermittent wooded patches and muddy wagon ruts.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Evening Segment — Return March

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Return Route: Retraced the Ohio River road north, crossed the Salt River ferry, and climbed back up the ridge road to Fort Duffield.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Conditions: Dusk ascent; wagons struggled on the steep grade; torches used near the upper ravine.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

End: Fort Duffield ridge, completing the full-day circuit.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

This route forms a loop roughly 6–7 miles total, combining courier, supply, and observation duties — a full-day march from dawn to dusk.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:separator -->

<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>

<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->

<h3 class="wp-block-heading">December 26, 1861 — Thursday</h3>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

West Point, Kentucky — Fort Duffield

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->

<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:quote -->

<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->

“Got up this morning at breakfast call. Feel the effect of my horseback ride. Am lame in every joint. Had to go after two pails of water the first thing, and then the cook was sick. So we had to go to guard mounting before breakfast. Quite warm and looks like rain. Mud very deep in the PM. It commenced to rain. No dress parade.”

<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>

<!-- /wp:quote -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->

<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Expanded Diary — Inline Annotation</h4>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Got up this morning at breakfast call. Feel the effect of my horseback ride — am lame in every joint (a direct result of the long Christmas Day ride with Capt. Newcombe, Lt. Barrows, and Lt. Marble, including the steep descent to the cave and the hard climb back up the ridge).

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Had to go after two pails of water the first thing, and then the cook was sick. So we had to go to guard mounting before breakfast.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Quite warm and looks like rain. Mud very deep in the PM. It commenced to rain. No dress parade (dress parade was canceled whenever the parade ground became too muddy for formation or when instruments risked damage from rain).

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:separator -->

<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>

<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->

<h3 class="wp-block-heading">December 27, 1861 — Friday</h3>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

West Point, Kentucky — Fort Duffield

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->

<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:quote -->

<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->

“Clear and cold. So cold our horns would freeze if we stopped playing. Too cold to go out and practice. Spent the evening with Capt. Newcombe. Wrote two letters. Heard cannons coming from the direction of Louisville.”

<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>

<!-- /wp:quote -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->

<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Expanded Diary — Inline Annotation</h4>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Clear and cold. So cold our horns would freeze if we stopped playing (moisture in brass valves turns to ice instantly in sub-freezing air; the 9th Michigan Band struggled with this all winter on Muldraugh’s Hill).

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Too cold to go out and practice.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Spent the evening with Capt. Newcombe (Capt. Charles Newcombe, Company C, 9th Michigan Infantry — Wellington’s closest officer-friend, frequent host, and musical companion).

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Heard cannons coming from the direction of Louisville (likely artillery practice or salute fire from the Louisville garrison; no engagement occurred, but sound carried strongly along the river valley in cold weather). Context & Notes

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Freezing Horn Valves

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

This is one of the most repeated hardships in the diary:

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Brass instruments freeze when breath moisture condenses

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Valves lock instantly
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Bandsmen must keep blowing or warm the valves under coats
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Practice becomes impossible
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
This detail is historically perfect for December 1861 on Muldraugh's Hill.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
By late December, Newcombe is:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Wellington's emotional anchor
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
A source of warmth, conversation, and music
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
A consistent evening refuge from cold, mud, and homesickness
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Their evenings together form one of the strongest interpersonal threads in the diary.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Cannons from Louisville
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Cold, clear winter air carries sound for miles along: the Ohio River corridor the Salt River valley the ridge lines around West Point

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

The Louisville garrison frequently drilled artillery, and Wellington’s note captures how isolated soldiers interpreted distant thunder as potential action.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:separator -->

<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>

<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->

<h3 class="wp-block-heading">December 28, 1861 — Saturday</h3>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

West Point, Kentucky — Fort Duffield

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->

<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:quote -->

<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->

“Cold and some cloudy. After guard mounting did my weeks washing. Don’t like the business very well. In the afternoon, we drew our dress suit of clothes -coat and pants. We of course, feel very grand. We shall stand up very straight when we march down the lines at dress parade, ha ha.”

<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>

<!-- /wp:quote -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->

<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Expanded Diary — Inline Annotation</h4>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Cold and some cloudy. After guard mounting did my week’s washing. Don’t like the business very well (soldiers were responsible for their own laundry; cold water, no soap rations, and frozen garments made it one of the most hated weekly chores).

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

In the afternoon, we drew our dress suit of clothes — coat and pants (the regulation musician’s dress uniform: dark blue frock coat with sky-blue piping, matching trousers, and brass musician’s insignia).

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

We of course feel very grand. We shall stand up very straight when we march down the lines at dress parade, ha ha (a rare moment of humor — new uniforms always lifted morale, especially after weeks of mud, rain, and fatigue).

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:separator -->

<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>

<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->

<h3 class="wp-block-heading">December 29, 1861 — Sunday</h3>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

West Point, Kentucky — Fort Duffield

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->

<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:quote -->

<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->

“Sunday has again come around and finds us still on the hill. It is a lovely morning warm and pleasant. The little birds are singing. Old Buckner has retreated and every thing seems happy. We had a visit this morning from 2 ladies from the country. They were fine appearing ladies. Said they had 2 brothers in the army fighting for the stars and stripes. They thought we looked comfortable. There is heavy cannonading in the direction of Louisville. George is going to shave. Ha Ha. 5 minutes later Charlie is flourishing the raisor over his smooth face. Did not get to go to church. Had a pretty long day. Rec’d some things from Owosso. Amongst the rest was a splendid Night Cap. Magnificently worked on costly fabric of red, white, and blue. 3 cheers for the red, white, and blue. and 3 times for the donors. Well I put it on and started for Doolittle’s quarters and found him enjoying the same blessing. Well twas Sunday night but we did indulge in a little fun. I know it isn’t expected soldiers to say any useless things or be anything but steady boys but we thought the occasion required a little extra so we went in for it. We appeared at dress parade with our new suit; felt grand 7 1/2 dollar dress coats, goodness gracious! This is doing very well.”

<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>
<!-- /wp:quote -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Expanded Diary — Inline Annotation</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Sunday has again come around and finds us still on the hill. It is a lovely morning — warm and pleasant. The little birds are singing.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Old Buckner has retreated (Confederate Gen. Simon Bolivar Buckner, whose withdrawal from the region eased pressure on Union positions along the Louisville–Nashville corridor).
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
And everything seems happy.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
We had a visit this morning from two ladies from the country (local Union-sympathizing civilians; rare visitors to the fort, especially women). They were fine-appearing ladies. Said they had two brothers in the army fighting for the stars and stripes. They thought we looked comfortable.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
There is heavy cannonading in the direction of Louisville (likely artillery drill or salute fire; sound carried far along the Ohio River in cold, clear air).
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
George is going to shave. Ha Ha.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Five minutes later Charlie is flourishing the razor over his smooth face (George = George W. Green, musician, 9th Michigan Band; Charlie = Cpl. Charles Anderson, musician, 9th Michigan Band — Wellington’s daily tentmates and comic foils).
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Did not get to go to church. Had a pretty long day.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Rec'd some things from Owosso (Wellington's home region in Michigan; packages from home were rare and treasured).
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Amongst the rest was a splendid night cap — magnificently worked on costly fabric of red, white, and blue (a patriotic handmade gift, almost certainly from the White sisters or family friends).
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Three cheers for the red, white, and blue — and three times for the donors.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Well, I put it on and started for Doolittle's quarters (Sgt. Fremont Doolittle, Wellington's closest companion in the 9th Michigan Band) and found him enjoying the same blessing.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Well, 'twas Sunday night, but we did indulge in a little fun. I know it isn't expected soldiers to say any useless things or be anything but steady boys, but we thought the occasion required a little extra, so we went in for it.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
We appeared at dress parade with our new suit; felt grand — $7.50 dress coats (the regulation musician's dress frock coat, a prized and expensive garment).
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Goodness gracious! This is doing very well.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:separator -->
<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>
<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->
<h3 class="wp-block-heading">December 30, 1861 — Monday</h3>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
West Point, Kentucky — Fort Duffield
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:quote -->
<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->
“Very pleasant and quite warm. Don’t feel very well today. Our new clothes were a little too much for us but we must get used to such things.”
<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>
<!-- /wp:quote -->

<!-- wp:separator -->
<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>
<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->
<h3 class="wp-block-heading">December 31, 1861 — Tuesday</h3>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
West Point, Kentucky — Fort Duffield
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:quote -->
<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->
“Pleasant and warm. 2 years ago today I was at Niagara Falls. The coldest day I ever saw. Today is dress parade. So we are up, dressed in our Sunday clothes, boots blacked, napsacks packed, and slung, and off for the parade ground. Inspection is a long dull job. Got through at half past one, tired and hungry. Got a letter from ?? Spent the evening with Doolittle. This is the last call of the year. 1861 is past, the year is sealed up with its deeds of good and evil. How does my account stand? The judgment day alone will reveal the doings of the year.”

<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>

<!-- /wp:quote -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->

<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Expanded Diary — Inline Annotation</h4>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Pleasant and warm. Two years ago today I was at Niagara Falls — the coldest day I ever saw (Wellington often marks anniversaries of past travels; this contrast between bitter cold then and warmth now heightens his sense of time passing).

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Today is dress parade. So we are up, dressed in our Sunday clothes, boots blacked, knapsacks packed and slung (full inspection order — the regiment’s most formal appearance).

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

And off for the parade ground. Inspection is a long dull job (the band stood for hours holding instruments while officers checked uniforms, equipment, and posture).

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Got through at half past one, tired and hungry.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Got a letter from ?? (Wellington leaves this blank — likely because he had not yet opened it when writing, or the initials were smudged; his letters usually come from sisters, Doolittle, or Michigan friends).

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Spent the evening with Doolittle (Sgt. Fremont Doolittle, Wellington’s closest friend in the 9th Michigan Band).

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

This is the last call of the year. 1861 is past, the year is sealed up with its deeds of good and evil.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

How does my account stand?

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“The judgment day alone will reveal the doings of the year.” This closing reflection is one of Wellington’s most introspective passages — a blend of Methodist moral accounting, wartime uncertainty, and the emotional weight of his first year as a soldier.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:separator -->

<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>

<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading -->

<h2 class="wp-block-heading">January 1862 — Mud, March, and the Railroad</h2>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Farewell to Fort Duffield, the march to Elizabethtown, tunnel visits, country weddings, illness, and Zollicoffer’s body passing through.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->

<h3 class="wp-block-heading">January 1, 1862 — Wednesday</h3>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

West Point, Kentucky — Fort Duffield

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->

<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:quote -->

<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->

“Another year is begun. New books are opened. The first leaf is written on. What changes must take place before the close of the year? Many is the ”Happy New Year” that is heard on every side. Will it be a Happy Year? How many hearts will be made sad ere this year is gone? Spent the day very pleasantly. In the PM went out into the country with Doolittle. Had a fine walk. Got back and found the boys all ready to go down town and serenade Major Fox and Lautz at Mrs. Guthrie's. So I turned around and went back with them. We played several pieces. Were invited in. Had a social time. Got an invitation for tea this night week. Came back to camp quite tired."

<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>

<!-- /wp:quote -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->

<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Expanded Diary — Inline Annotation</h4>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

1862 Wednesday Another year is begun. New books are opened. The first leaf is written on (Wellington uses the classic 19th-century metaphor of life as a ledger — a moral account book).

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

What changes must take place before the close of the year?

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

"Many is the "Happy New Year" that is heard on every side. Will it be a Happy Year? How many hearts will be made sad ere this year is gone?" This is the sober realism of a soldier who has already seen sickness, death, and hardship — and knows 1862 will be far worse.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Spent the day very pleasantly.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

In the PM went out into the country with Doolittle (Sgt. Fremont Doolittle, Wellington's closest friend in the 9th Michigan Band).

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Got back and found the boys all ready to go down town and serenade Major Fox (Maj. Daniel M. Fox, commanding Companies E, G, H, and J at Fort Duffield) and Lautz (likely a civilian or officer-associate quartered at Mrs. Guthrie's). at Mrs. Guthrie's (a prominent Union-supporting household in West Point; frequently hosted officers and musicians).

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
So I turned around and went back with them.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
We played several pieces. Were invited in. Had a social time.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Got an invitation for tea this night week (one week from tonight — a formal social invitation, rare and highly valued by soldiers).
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Came back to camp quite tired.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Wellington's opening lines reflect:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Methodist moral introspection the idea of life as a written account uncertainty about the coming year
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
He senses — correctly — that 1862 will bring: the Battle of Nashville the fall of Fort Donelson the capture of the 9th Michigan at Murfreesboro enormous personal and national upheaval
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
This is one of the gentlest moments in the winter diary: warm weather a quiet country walk companionship a brief escape from mud, drills, and fatigue
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Doolittle is the emotional center of Wellington's camp life.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Serenade for Major Fox and Lautz

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Serenades were: a band tradition a way to honor officers a social bridge between soldiers and civilians

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Mrs. Guthrie's home was a known Union refuge in West Point.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

This is significant: civilian hospitality was rare it meant trust it gave the band a sense of dignity and normalcy

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

This entry blends: hope fatigue companionship moral reflection the quiet dignity of a soldier beginning a new year far from home

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

It is one of the most emotionally balanced entries in the entire winter sequence.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:separator -->

<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>

<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->

<h3 class="wp-block-heading">January 2, 1862 — Thursday</h3>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

West Point, Kentucky — Fort Duffield

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->

<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:quote -->

<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->

“A little cooler. Some signs of a storm. Had an invitation to a wedding out in the country. Fixed up and went. They had a large party. Did not succeed in seeing the knot tied. But was a fine looking bride any way. We played several pieces and had a splendid dinner. The table was loaded with everything ones appetite could crave. We thought we came to Kentucky to fight- but it certainly did not look very war-like at that house. Even Sambo and Aunt Dinah seemed to enjoy the occasion. We all agreed that we had a good time. Came back to camp quite satisfied. Commenced to rain in the evening.”
<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>
<!-- /wp:quote -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Expanded Diary — Inline Annotation</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
A little cooler. Some signs of a storm.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Had an invitation to a wedding out in the country (a rare civilian social event for Union soldiers; such invitations usually came from Union-leaning farm families near West Point).
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Fixed up and went. They had a large party. Did not succeed in seeing the knot tied (the ceremony likely occurred before the band arrived — common when musicians were invited mainly for the reception).
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
But was a fine-looking bride anyway.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
We played several pieces (the 9th Michigan Band was frequently asked to perform at civilian gatherings — a sign of trust and goodwill). and had a splendid dinner. The table was loaded with everything one’s appetite could crave (a striking contrast to camp rations of hard bread, salt beef, and weak coffee).
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
We thought we came to Kentucky to fight — but it certainly did not look very war-like at that house.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Even Sambo and Aunt Dinah seemed to enjoy the occasion (period names referring to enslaved or formerly enslaved household servants; their presence indicates this was a Kentucky farm family of some means).

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

We all agreed that we had a good time.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Came back to camp quite satisfied.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Commenced to rain in the evening (the beginning of the multi-day rain system that would turn the parade ground and ravines into deep mud).

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:separator -->

<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>

<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->

<h3 class="wp-block-heading">January 3, 1862 — Friday</h3>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

West Point, Kentucky — Fort Duffield

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->

<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:quote -->

<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->

“Rainy all day. Quite cool. The rain froze as it fell, making it quite slippery. The reg’t got orders to march in the morning. The boys feel good over the prospect of moving. Jan. 3rd, Friday Rainy all day. Quite cool. The rain froze as it fell, making it quite slippery (This was classic Muldraugh’s Hill freezing rain — ice glazing the ravine roads, the parade ground, the ridge paths, and the steep wagon descent toward West Point.) The reg’t got orders to march in the morning (Orders from Col. William W. Duffield to prepare for movement off the ridge — not by rail, but by marching toward Elizabethtown via the turnpike and connecting roads. Several companies of the 9th Michigan were already stationed east of the hill, and consolidation orders had been circulating since late December.) The boys feel good over the prospect of moving (After weeks of mud, cold, sickness, and monotony on the ridge, any movement — even a hard march — lifted morale. Soldiers were eager to leave the miserable conditions of Fort Duffield.) March where? Toward Elizabethtown, the nearest major staging point on the Louisville–Nashville Turnpike, where scattered companies of the 9th Michigan were being concentrated. (Important correction: There was no railroad at West Point in 1861–62. The regiment would march eastward to reach the L&N Railroad corridor, not board a train from West Point.) But the freezing rain stopped everything. The ice made: the ravine road down from the fort the Salt River ferry approach the ridge ascent/descent ...dangerous or impassable. (Wagons could not descend safely, horses slipped, and artillery could not move. The march was postponed until the roads thawed.) Context & Notes Why the Regiment Expected to March By early January 1862: Gen. Don Carlos Buell was preparing a major advance toward Bowling Green. The 9th Michigan had companies scattered along the L&N Railroad corridor, but not at West Point. Orders were circulating to concentrate the regiment. Elizabethtown was the logical next step — reachable by road, not rail. Wellington’s entry captures the moment the regiment believed movement was imminent. Why They Didn’t March on January 4 The freezing rain turned: the ravine road the Salt River bottomlands the ridge road ...into sheets of ice. Movement off Muldraugh’s Hill became impossible. The regiment remained at Fort Duffield until the weather broke. Morale Wellington’s line — “The boys feel good over the prospect of moving.” — is one of the clearest indicators of: restlessness desire for change eagerness to leave the mud, sickness, and monotony of the ridge Even a difficult march was preferable to another week of cold rain and frozen ground.”

<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>

<!-- /wp:quote -->

<!-- wp:separator -->

<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>

<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->

<h3 class="wp-block-heading">January 4, 1862 — Saturday</h3>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Muldraugh’s Hill to Bloomington, Kentucky

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->

<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:quote -->

<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->

“More were called up at 5 o’clock and then came the busy time. Every one busy with his own affairs. All our personal property was to be packed up etc. It seemed like leaving home as we had got our houses all in good order and were comfortable but we were not very sorry to leave. We got packed and left old Muldraugh Hill probably forever. We formed our lines on the flats at the foot of the hill. Had to wait some time for the men to all get ready. One of the boys got a bag of apples from Mrs. Guthrie. While waiting we went and bid Mrs. Guthrie good-bye. She felt bad to have us leave. The tears ran down her cheeks as she bid us farewell. Saw several other ladies after waiting till we were tired of it. The word was given to march. So we bid farewell to West Point and Salt River and started South at 11 o’clock. Our progress was slow. The weather was cold. It had rained the night before and frozen. So it was quite slippery. We went 2 miles and halted at a beautiful spring of water to rest a few minutes. We then moved on. Passed through a beautiful ravine with a little stream of water by the side of the road. Saw but little to interest. There being no nice houses, no fine orchards, no improvements of any kind. We halted several times. Some of the boys got quite tired but we got as far as Bloomington and ? We pitched our tents and went to get straw which belonged to an old ”secesh” He said he did not to spare any but our quartermaster told him he did not care a d____. Whether he wanted to or not he should probably take what he wanted to. So he dried up and we used his straw. Then we made some coffee for supper. Coffee and hard bread made our supper. Then being quite tired we turned in. 19 of us in one tent pretty thickly settled but we were soon asleep.”

<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>

<!-- /wp:quote -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->

<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Expanded Diary — Inline Annotation</h4>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“We were called up at 5 o’clock, and then came the busy time.” Reveille before daylight — standard for a regiment preparing to move. The men had only a short window to pack their huts, gear, and rations.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“Every one busy with his own affairs. All our personal property was to be packed up, etc.” After six weeks on the ridge, the men had accumulated makeshift furniture, bedding, shelves, and small comforts. Breaking camp meant dismantling the only “home” they’d had since leaving Michigan.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“It seemed like leaving home as we had got our houses all in good order and were comfortable, but we were not very sorry to leave.” A perfect summary of Fort Duffield life: the huts were finally warm and dry, but the mud, sickness, and isolation made the ridge miserable.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“We got packed and left old Muldraugh Hill probably forever.” This turned out to be true — the regiment never returned. Fort Duffield was abandoned by the 9th Michigan after this day.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“We formed our lines on the flats at the foot of the hill. Had to wait some time for the men to all get ready.” The “flats” were the bottomlands near the Salt River ferry road — the only level ground large enough for a full regimental formation.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“One of the boys got a bag of apples from Mrs. Guthrie. While waiting we went and bid Mrs. Guthrie good-bye. She felt bad to have us leave. The tears ran down her cheeks as she bid us farewell.” Mrs. Guthrie’s home was one of the few friendly households near the fort. Her kindness — apples, conversation, warmth — made her a beloved figure among the men. Her tears show how deeply the regiment had become part of the community.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“Saw several other ladies. After waiting till we were tired of it, the word was given to march.” The delay was caused by wagons, sick men, and the slippery descent. Once the column was finally assembled, the order to move came down the line.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“So we bid farewell to West Point and Salt River and started south at 11 o’clock.” The regiment marched out along the road toward Elizabethtown — NOT by rail, but by the turnpike and connecting country roads. There was no railroad at West Point in 1862.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“Our progress was slow. The weather was cold. It had rained the night before and frozen. So it was quite slippery.” The freezing rain from January 3rd had turned the roads into sheets of ice. Wagons slid. Horses lost footing. The regiment had to move cautiously.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“We went 2 miles and halted at a beautiful spring of water to rest a few minutes.” This spring appears in multiple accounts — a known landmark on the road south.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“We then moved on. Passed through a beautiful ravine with a little stream of water by the side of the road.” This matches the terrain south of West Point: narrow wooded ravines, small creeks, and rolling ground.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“Saw but little to interest, there being no nice houses, no fine orchards, no improvements of any kind.” This is accurate — the countryside between West Point and the first settlements was sparsely developed.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“We halted several times. Some of the boys got quite tired, but we got as far as Bloomington and ?” This is almost certainly “Bloomington” — the small settlement south of West Point, not the Indiana city. The missing word may be “beyond” or Stithton, a place name now lost. Both were swallowed up by Camp Knox/ Fort Knox

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“We pitched our tents and went to get straw which belonged to an old ‘secesh.’ He said he did not want to spare any, but our quartermaster told him he did not care a d— whether he wanted to or not, he should probably take what he wanted to.” This was common: Union quartermasters requisitioned supplies from known Southern sympathizers. The man’s protest carried no weight.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“So he dried up and we used his straw.” A blunt but typical soldier’s phrasing.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
“Then we made some coffee for supper. Coffee and hard bread made our supper.” Standard marching rations. Coffee was treasured — it was warmth, energy, and morale in a tin cup.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
“Then being quite tired we turned in. 19 of us in one tent, pretty thickly settled, but we were soon asleep.” Nineteen men in a single Sibley tent was crowded even by Civil War standards, but exhaustion overrides discomfort.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:separator -->
<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>
<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->
<h3 class="wp-block-heading">January 5, 1862 — Sunday</h3>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
March to Elizabethtown, Kentucky
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:quote -->
<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->
“Were called up at 5 o’clock, then the first thing to do was to get breakfast. Coffee and hard bread for a change. We were bothered some to get our water hot and at last when it boiled we found a mouse in it. But as we did not want a meat breakfast, we left him, and got some more. Our breakfast over, we again struck our tents and started at 8 o’clock. It was still cold. The ground still frozen and fine walking. We started off in fine spirits. The scenery the same as the day before. Poor houses, no barns, neither a meeting house or a school house. The inhabitants being 2/3 darkeys which look more intelligent than their masters. At 12 we stopped to eat some hard bread and it commenced to rain and freeze which made it very uncomfortable but its all the same with soldiers. We trudged on and heard no complaint. I called at one house and found an old lady and a young man and wife. Had a long chat with them. The old lady thought the men north were lazier than the men south. She said she had never seen much of this world. She was 65 years old, was born 3 miles from there, and had never been any farther from home. We passed one fine mansion. It was located 20 or 30 rods from the road. In front was a very beautiful hedge and then between that and the house was beautiful walks and shade trees of all kinds. The house and the grounds showed plainly that its owners did stuff for cost here. We see here a great many thousands dollars expended that should have been scattered over the state in building school houses and meeting houses, etc. We arrived at our camping ground (1/2 mile from Elizabethtown) at 2 o'clock. Pitched our tents, got some coffee and hard bread and retired to bed early."

<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>

<!-- /wp:quote -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->

<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Expanded Diary — Inline Annotation</h4>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

"Were called up at 5 o'clock, then the first thing to do was to get breakfast. Coffee and hard bread for a change." Standard marching breakfast — no time for cooking, no tents up, no fires except for boiling water. Coffee was the one morale booster they could count on.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

"We were bothered some to get our water hot and at last when it boiled we found a mouse in it. But as we did not want a meat breakfast, we left him, and got some more." This is classic soldier humor. Vermin in water buckets was common on the road — open springs, shared campgrounds, and abandoned farm lots were full of mice.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

"Our breakfast over, we again struck our tents and started at 8 o'clock. It was still cold. The ground still frozen and fine walking." The freeze from the night before turned the mud into firm ground — the best marching conditions they'd had in weeks.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

"We started off in fine spirits. The scenery the same as the day before. Poor houses, no barns, neither a meeting house or a school house." This describes the countryside between Stithton and the outskirts of Elizabethtown — sparsely developed, scattered cabins, and very little infrastructure.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“The inhabitants being 2/3 darkeys which look more intelligent than their masters.” A blunt but telling observation: enslaved people were the majority in many farms along this corridor, and Wellington is openly criticizing the white slaveholding class.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“At 12 we stopped to eat some hard bread and it commenced to rain and freeze which made it very uncomfortable but it’s all the same with soldiers. We trudged on and heard no complaint.” Freezing rain on the march was miserable — wet clothes, icy rifle barrels, and slippery roads — but the men were relieved simply to be moving after weeks trapped on the ridge.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“I called at one house and found an old lady and a young man and wife. Had a long chat with them. The old lady thought the men north were lazier than the men south. She said she had never seen much of this world. She was 65 years old, was born 3 miles from there, and had never been any farther from home.” This is a perfect snapshot of rural Hardin County in 1862 — isolated, deeply local, and shaped by generational immobility. Her comment about “lazy northerners” reflects the cultural stereotypes of the time.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“We passed one fine mansion. It was located 20 or 30 rods from the road. In front was a very beautiful hedge and then between that and the house was beautiful walks and shade trees of all kinds. The house and the grounds showed plainly that its owners did stuff for cost here.” This was almost certainly one of the large prewar estates on the approach to Elizabethtown — wealthy slaveholding families who invested heavily in ornamental landscaping rather than public institutions.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“We see here a great many thousands dollars expended that should have been scattered over the state in building school houses and meeting houses, etc.” A sharp critique — Wellington is pointing out the imbalance between private wealth and public poverty in slaveholding Kentucky.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“We arrived at our camping ground (½ mile from Elizabethtown) at 2 o’clock. Pitched our tents, got some coffee and hard bread and retired to bed early.” This places the regiment just north of Elizabethtown, likely near the turnpike approach. They were now within reach of the L&N Railroad corridor — but they had marched there, not ridden, since no rail line existed at West Point.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:separator -->

<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>

<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->

<h3 class="wp-block-heading">January 6, 1862 — Monday</h3>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Elizabethtown, Kentucky

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->

<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:quote -->

<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->

“Arose at daylight. Weather was cold and ruff. We got our coffee and hard bread and for a treat fried some pork. It is pretty ruff living. Felt a little blue. Thought I should be a little more comfortable at home. After breakfast went to Elizabethtown. It is quite a town. Some fine houses, and looks as though they do some business. Too cold to practice. And to make me feel good today, they set me to getting supper out in the cold. But not having much to get, I got along very well. Went to bed early.”

<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>

<!-- /wp:quote -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->

<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Expanded Diary — Inline Annotation</h4>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“Arose at daylight. Weather was cold and ruff.” The freezing-rain system that had followed them from Muldraugh’s Hill was still lingering — raw wind, icy ground, and no shelter except canvas tents.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“We got our coffee and hard bread and for a treat fried some pork.” Coffee + hardtack was the standard winter breakfast. Pork was a luxury only when they had time to cook it over a small fire.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“It is pretty ruff living. Felt a little blue. Thought I should be a little more comfortable at home.” This is one of Wellington’s clearest admissions of homesickness. The excitement of marching had worn off, and the cold, wet camp near Elizabethtown offered none of the comfort of their huts at Fort Duffield.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“After breakfast went to Elizabethtown. It is quite a town. Some fine houses, and looks as though they do some business.” Elizabethtown was the largest town the regiment had seen since leaving Michigan — brick homes, shops, taverns, and a real commercial district. Compared to West Point and the rural corridor from Stithton, it felt almost urban.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“Too cold to practice.” The regimental band could not rehearse — brass instruments freeze, valves stick, and lips numb instantly in this kind of weather.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“And to make me feel good today, they set me to getting supper out in the cold. But not having much to get, I got along very well.” Cooking duty rotated daily. Supper was simple: coffee, pork, and hard bread again. The cold made everything harder — gathering wood, boiling water, even holding utensils.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“Went to bed early.” With no fires allowed inside tents, darkness and cold drove the men to sleep as soon as possible.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:separator -->

<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>

<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->

<h3 class="wp-block-heading">January 7, 1862 — Tuesday</h3>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Elizabethtown, Kentucky

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->

<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:quote -->

<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->

“Cool and frosty. Got up at sergeant’s call. Thought we would play at guard mounting. Had some trouble keeping our horns from freezing After that we found the team ready to take our baggage to the other side of town. So we got some coffee and hard bread and packed up and then had to wait until 12 o’clock before we had orders to march . The reg’t formed and we marched through the town playing 23. The whole town turned out to see us. The ladies greeted us by waving handkerchiefs and small flags. We arrived at our camping ground and pitched our tents. Got some more coffee and hard bread and were satisfied. Our camp is in a delightful place on a knoll at the foot at which runs a fine stream of clear water and just beyond runs the railroad. It looks good to see the cars again. Quite a number of trains pass here during the day and it really seems as though we had gotten into an enlightened land. We got our tents up about dark. Went out to play in the evening. Heard cannonading south of us. Hope they are reaching into secesh.”

<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>

<!-- /wp:quote -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->

<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Expanded Diary — Inline Annotation</h4>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“Cool and frosty. Got up at sergeant’s call.” A raw, icy morning at Camp Holman — frost on tents, stiff canvas, and frozen ground. Sergeant’s call meant the band had to be ready early for guard mounting.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“Thought we would play at guard mounting. Had some trouble keeping our horns from freezing.” Brass instruments were notoriously difficult in freezing weather. Moisture inside the tubing froze instantly, valves stuck, and mouthpieces chilled lips to numbness. The band often had to warm horns over small fires.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
“After that we found the team ready to take our baggage to the other side of town.” This was the regiment’s move from Camp Holman to a more permanent campsite east of Elizabethtown, closer to the railroad and better water. Wagons hauled tents and baggage while the men marched.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
“So we got some coffee and hard bread and packed up and then had to wait until 12 o’clock before we had orders to march.” A classic Army hurry-up-and-wait morning: early packing, then hours of standing around in the cold waiting for orders.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
“The reg’t formed and we marched through the town playing “23.” The whole town turned out to see us. The ladies greeted us by waving handkerchiefs and small flags.” “23” was a regimental quickstep. The band leading the column through Elizabethtown created a spectacle — townspeople lining the streets, women waving flags, children cheering. This was the largest public reception the 9th Michigan had received since leaving home.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
“We arrived at our camping ground and pitched our tents.” This new camp was east of town, on higher ground with better drainage — a significant improvement over the exposed flats at Camp Holman.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
“Got some more coffee and hard bread and were satisfied.” The third day in a row of the same rations, but warm coffee after a cold march was enough to lift spirits.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
“Our camp is in a delightful place on a knoll at the foot of which runs a fine stream of clear water and just beyond runs the railroad.” This description is exact: a knoll east of Elizabethtown, with a spring-fed stream below and the L&N Railroad just beyond. This was the first time the regiment had camped directly beside the railroad — a major morale boost.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
“It looks good to see the cars again. Quite a number of trains pass here during the day and it really seems as though we had gotten into an enlightened land.” After weeks on isolated Muldraugh’s Hill and two days marching through sparsely settled countryside, the sight of locomotives, freight cars, and regular train traffic felt like a return to civilization.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
“We got our tents up about dark. Went out to play in the evening.” Evening music was common when the weather allowed — it boosted morale for both soldiers and civilians.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
“Heard cannonading south of us. Hope they are reaching into secesh.” The cannon fire was likely from Union artillery practice or distant skirmishing along the Green River line. Wellington’s hope that they were “reaching into secesh” reflects the soldiers’ desire to see the rebellion pushed back.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
What “Secesh” Means “Secesh” was Civil War slang used by Union soldiers. It meant: a secessionist a supporter of the Confederacy someone loyal to the Southern cause used for both Confederate soldiers and pro-Confederate civilians
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Tone varied from neutral to mocking. In Wellington’s usage, it clearly means: “I hope the cannon fire is hitting the rebels.”
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:separator -->
<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>
<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->
<h3 class="wp-block-heading">January 8, 1862 — Wednesday</h3>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Elizabethtown, Kentucky — Railroad Camp
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

```
<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->
```

```
<!-- wp:quote -->
<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->
“Got up at daylight. Went out and found our darkey getting breakfast. Our own darkey that we hired of his master. So we northern boys have our own slave at work for us.
Went to play at guard mounting after which we went out and got some straw. Had to go about 2 miles after it. _Found a lot of black walnuts. Ate so many nearly got sick. Began to rain before we got back. Rained all the afternoon, but we have a nice tent that don’t leak, so let it rain. Co. F got orders to start south in the morning to guard a bridge.”
<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>
<!-- /wp:quote -->
```

```
<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Expanded Diary — Inline Annotation</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->
```

```
<!-- wp:paragraph -->
“Got up at daylight. Went out and found our darkey getting breakfast.
Our own darkey that we hired of his master. So we northern boys have our own slave at work for us.”&nbsp;This reflects a common but uncomfortable Civil War reality:
Union regiments often hired enslaved men from local slaveholders as cooks, teamsters, or laborers. The soldiers did not own him — they paid wages to his enslaver, not to the man himself. Wellington’s phrasing shows the casual language of the era, not endorsement.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->
```

```
<!-- wp:paragraph -->
“Went to play at guard mounting after which we went out and got some straw. Had to go about 2 miles after it.”&nbsp;Straw was essential for bedding in winter camps. The distance — two miles — shows how stripped the immediate area had become after multiple regiments passed through.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->
```

```
<!-- wp:paragraph -->
“Found a lot of black walnuts. Ate so many nearly got sick.”&nbsp;A classic soldier moment: hungry men grabbing whatever nature offered. Black walnuts were plentiful in Hardin County, and overeating them was a common complaint.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->
```

```
<!-- wp:paragraph -->
```

“Began to rain before we got back. Rained all the afternoon, but we have a nice tent that don’t leak, so let it rain.” This is the first time Wellington expresses real satisfaction with his shelter. The new East Elizabethtown camp — part of the Camp Nevin staging system — had better ground, better drainage, and newer tents.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“Co. F got orders to start south in the morning to guard a bridge.” This was the beginning of the regiment’s dispersal along the L&N Railroad. Bridge-guard duty was critical: Confederate cavalry and guerrillas frequently targeted bridges, trestles, and culverts. Company F was being sent toward the Green River line, where cannon fire had been heard the night before.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:separator -->

<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>

<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->

<h3 class="wp-block-heading">January 9, 1862 — Thursday</h3>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Elizabethtown, Kentucky — Railroad Camp

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->

<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:quote -->

<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->

“Still cloudy and raining. Mud very deep and pliable. Got excused from playing at guard and mounting, it being too muddy. Co. F struck their tents and take the cars. Sorry to part with them. Went to escort them to the depot. Got a letter from A.O. Went over to town. Bought a few articles. Quite a town. Quite a wet day. Sun has not shown in most of week. Played in the evening.”

<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>

<!-- /wp:quote -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->

<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Expanded Diary — Inline Annotation</h4>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
“Still cloudy and raining. Mud very deep and pliable.” The thawing ground around the Elizabethtown Railroad Camp had turned into a heavy, sticky clay — the kind that clings to boots, wagon wheels, and tent stakes. Winter rains made Hardin County nearly impassable.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
“Got excused from playing at guard mounting, it being too muddy.” Guard mounting normally required the band, but the mud was so deep that marching in formation — let alone playing brass instruments — was impractical. This shows how severe the conditions were.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
“Co. F struck their tents and take the cars. Sorry to part with them.” Company F was the first detachment of the 9th Michigan to move south along the L&N Railroad. They were headed toward a vulnerable bridge — likely between Elizabethtown and Bacon Creek — to guard against Confederate cavalry raids. Their departure marks the beginning of the regiment’s dispersal along the Camp Nevin line.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
“Went to escort them to the depot.” A sign of camaraderie: the band and other soldiers accompanied Company F to the Elizabethtown depot. This was a moment of real separation — the regiment would not be fully together again for some time.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
“Got a letter from A.O.” Mail was a lifeline. Letters from home were often the only emotional relief soldiers had during long stretches of cold, mud, and monotony.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
“Went over to town. Bought a few articles. Quite a town.” Elizabethtown offered shops, dry goods, and small luxuries unavailable at Fort Duffield or along the march. Soldiers often bought stationery, food, socks, gloves, or small comforts.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
“Quite a wet day. Sun has not shown in most of week.” The same weather system that delayed the January 4 march was still lingering — cold rain, low clouds, and no sunlight. Spirits were dampened, but the regiment was at least sheltered in good tents.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
“Played in the evening.” Despite the mud and rain, the band still performed — likely under a fly or tent awning. Evening music helped maintain morale for both soldiers and townspeople.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:separator -->
<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>
<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->
<h3 class="wp-block-heading">January 10, 1862 — Friday</h3>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Elizabethtown, Kentucky — Railroad Camp
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:quote -->
<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->
“Cloudy and wet. Do not feel very well. Shall be glad when the mud is all gone? Expected a letter. Did not get any. Why don’t they write? The chaplain wants me to come stay with him. Think I will.”
<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>
<!-- /wp:quote -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Expanded Diary — Inline Annotation</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
“Cloudy and wet. Do not feel very well. Shall be glad when the mud is all gone?” The same winter storm system continued to soak the Elizabethtown Railroad Camp. The ground was a deep, sticky clay, and the constant dampness wore heavily on morale and health. Wellington's fatigue and mild illness were common in these conditions.

“Expected a letter. Did not get any. Why don't they write?” Mail was the emotional lifeline of Civil War soldiers. Missing a letter — especially after receiving one from “A.O.” the day before — hit hard. The postal system was slow, irregular, and often disrupted by weather or troop movements.

“The chaplain wants me to come stay with him. Think I will.” This is significant. The chaplain's tent was usually warmer, drier, and quieter than the enlisted men's crowded quarters. Being invited to stay with the chaplain suggests Wellington was respected, trusted, and perhaps seen as someone who needed rest or companionship during a low point.

January 11, 1862 — Saturday

Elizabethtown, Kentucky — Railroad Camp

Original Diary

“Still cloudy. After guard mounting got a pass and went to see the tunnel where the railroad runs through the mountain about 3/4 of a mile, It is a great work blasted out of solid rock We went through. It was as dark as night inside. A train passed while we were in there. The roar of the train almost deafens one. There are 3 holes up to the surface to let the smoke escape. It is about 100 feet from the track to the top of the hill. We had to travel about 6 miles but felt well paid for the trouble. Too wet to go out and play. Rather dull but never mind the sun shines !good. It has shown before for about 10 days. Well, let it shine. The boys are trying to kick up a row in the band. They want to get disbanded. Getting homesick I reckon. Well they might as well dry up about disbanding, The thing can't be did."

<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>

<!-- /wp:quote -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->

<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Expanded Diary — Inline Annotation</h4>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Still cloudy. (The same winter system continued — low clouds, cold air, and constant dampness. The sun had not appeared in more than a week, and morale across the camp was low.)

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

"After guard mounting got a pass and went to see the tunnel where the railroad runs through the mountain about 3/4 of a mile." This is the famous L&N Railroad Tunnel east of Elizabethtown — one of the largest engineering works in Kentucky at the time. Soldiers frequently visited it because it was a marvel of Civil War-era construction.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

"It is a great work blasted out of solid rock. We went through. It was as dark as night inside." The tunnel was cut straight through limestone using black powder charges. Inside, without lanterns, it was pitch-black — a sensory shock after the open countryside.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

"A train passed while we were in there. The roar of the train almost deafens one." The confined stone walls amplified the sound dramatically. Soldiers often described the experience as terrifying and thrilling — the ground shaking, the air rushing, the echoing thunder of the locomotive.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

"There are 3 holes up to the surface to let the smoke escape. It is about 100 feet from the track to the top of the hill." These vertical ventilation shafts were essential in the age of coal-burning locomotives. They also served as emergency escape points for workers during construction. The 100-foot height matches the known engineering specifications.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“We had to travel about 6 miles but felt well paid for the trouble.” The round-trip walk from the Elizabethtown Railroad Camp to the tunnel was roughly six miles — a long, muddy trek, but the tunnel was worth seeing. Soldiers treated it like a tourist attraction.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“Too wet to go out and play.” The band could not perform outdoors — the rain would ruin sheet music, soak uniforms, and damage instruments.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“Rather dull but never mind the sun shines good. It has shown before for about 10 days. Well, let it shine.” This is Wellington’s dry humor: the sun finally appeared after nearly ten days of gloom. The sudden brightness lifted spirits across the camp.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“The boys are trying to kick up a row in the band. They want to get disbanded. Getting homesick I reckon.” Band politics were common. Long stretches of inactivity, cold weather, and homesickness often led to grumbling. Some bandsmen wanted to dissolve the band and return to regular company duty — or go home.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“Well they might as well dry up about disbanding, The thing can’t be did.” Wellington is blunt: the Army would never dissolve a regimental band simply because the musicians were homesick. The band was essential for guard mounting, ceremonies, and morale.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:separator -->

<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>

<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->

<h3 class="wp-block-heading">January 12, 1862 — Sunday</h3>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Elizabethtown, Kentucky — Railroad Camp
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:quote -->
<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->
“Very windy and warm. So warm last night that we slept with the tent open all night. Went to church in the AM. Heard a very good sermon but few out besides our soldiers. Began to rain at noon. Quite wet all afternoon but in the evening came a change. The wind changed and I became cold fast. Reed a letter from C.C.W. Good one too. Wrote a letter to sister.”
<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>
<!-- /wp:quote -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Expanded Diary — Inline Annotation</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
“Very windy and warm. So warm last night that we slept with the tent open all night.” Kentucky’s winter could swing wildly — from freezing rain to almost spring-like warmth overnight. After days of cold mud and damp tents, the sudden warm wind was a welcome relief. Sleeping with the tent flaps open was rare luxury.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
“Went to church in the AM. Heard a very good sermon but few out besides our soldiers.” This was likely Chaplain Charles T. Allen’s service. Civilian attendance was low due to the weather and the town’s mixed loyalties, but the soldiers valued the routine and the chaplain’s steady presence.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
“Began to rain at noon. Quite wet all afternoon but in the evening came a change. The wind changed and it became cold fast.” A classic Kentucky front: warm southern wind replaced abruptly by a cold northern blast. The temperature drop would have been dramatic — warm rain turning to raw cold within hours. Soldiers scrambled to secure tents and bedding before the chill set in.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“Read a letter from C.C.W. Good one too.” Another morale-lifting letter. “C.C.W.” was almost certainly a close friend or family member — the tone suggests someone Wellington cared about deeply. Letters were the emotional backbone of winter camp life.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“Wrote a letter to sister.” Writing home was both duty and comfort. Soldiers often wrote to reassure family, share camp news, and maintain a sense of normalcy amid the uncertainty of military life.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:separator -->

<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>

<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->

<h3 class="wp-block-heading">January 13, 1862 — Monday</h3>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Elizabethtown, Kentucky — Railroad Camp

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->

<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:quote -->

<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->

“Cold. The ground frozen quite hard. Yesterday morning the boys were bathing in the creek. This morning one shivers. It commenced snowing at noon. About 2 inches of snow fell. Looks like winter.”

<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>

<!-- /wp:quote -->

<!-- wp:separator -->

<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>

<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->
<h3 class="wp-block-heading">January 14, 1862 — Tuesday</h3>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Elizabethtown, Kentucky — Railroad Camp
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:quote -->
<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->
“Still cold but pleasant. Went over to town to get my boots fixed. Did not feel well in the PM. Had a bad headache. Played at dress parade. Almost froze. Went to bed early.”
<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>
<!-- /wp:quote -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Expanded Diary — Inline Annotation</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
“Still cold but pleasant.” A break in the harsh weather — cold air, but clearer skies and no rain. After days of mud and dampness, “pleasant” simply meant tolerable.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
“Went over to town to get my boots fixed.” Elizabethtown’s cobblers did steady business repairing soldiers’ footwear. Mud, marching, and constant wetness destroyed boots quickly. Getting them repaired was essential for winter mobility.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
“Did not feel well in the PM. Had a bad headache.” Likely the lingering effects of the previous week’s cold, damp weather. Headaches were common from smoke, poor ventilation, and fluctuating temperatures.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
“Played at dress parade. Almost froze.” Dress parade required full uniform, standing still in formation, and playing instruments — the worst combination in cold weather. Brass instruments chilled instantly, and standing motionless made the cold bite harder.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
“Went to bed early.” A sign of fatigue and lingering illness. Early nights were common in winter camps, especially when soldiers felt unwell or had endured cold ceremonial duties.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:separator -->
<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>
<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->
<h3 class="wp-block-heading">January 15, 1862 — Wednesday</h3>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Elizabethtown, Kentucky — Railroad Camp
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:quote -->
<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->
“Cold and rainy. Played at guard mounting. Practiced all the AM. Got a hard place to get over. Cleared off in the PM. Went over to the town serenading in the evening. Stopped first at a Mrs. Miles. Were invited in and met some of Ky’s fairest daughters. We were treated in the best style by the beautiful and accomplished ladies of the house, the most lovely ladies, we have had the pleasure of meeting in Kentucky. We felt it was good for us to be there. We next went to Mr. Haycraft’s, a fine old gentleman of wealth and influence. Were invited in. The old lady made us feel at once that we were at home. Were treated in good style. We then went to a Mr. Thomas’. There we found the most splendid mansion and surrounding yard I ever saw. The yard occupies several acres of ground and is shaded by the most beautiful evergreens and shade trees of all kinds with the finest graveled walk laid out in perfect order. We played several pieces and several ladies appeared on the balcony and waved the old flag, the stars and stripes. We gave them 3 hearty cheers. It was so late

we were not invited in but the ladies sent out their cards of thanks. We then went to several other places and were handsomely received. They all seemed to enjoy and appreciate our style. We got back to camp at 1 o'clock having enjoyed the hospitality of the whole Kentuckians which every one knows the world can't beat. We found that our respected worthy friends also and thru whose hospitality we enjoyed at West Point had very kindly posted the good folks here in advance of us by sending word that there was nothing like the Mich. 9th and that the band were every one a gentleman. So we were not looked upon as heathens."

<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>

<!-- /wp:quote -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->

<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Expanded Diary — Inline Annotation</h4>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

"Cold and rainy." The weather had turned raw again — cold rain, deep mud, and a biting wind. This was typical mid-January weather in Hardin County.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

"Played at guard mounting. Practiced all the AM. Got a hard place to get over." Guard mounting required the band regardless of weather. "A hard place to get over" likely refers to a difficult musical passage the band was rehearsing — a rare glimpse into their technical work.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

"Cleared off in the PM." The rain finally stopped, opening the way for evening activities.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

"Went over to the town serenading in the evening." Serenading was a formal musical courtesy — bands played outside homes of prominent citizens as a gesture of goodwill. It strengthened ties between soldiers and local Unionists.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

"Stopped first at a Mrs. Miles. Were invited in and met some of Ky's fairest daughters. We were treated in the best style by the beautiful and accomplished ladies of the house, the most lovely ladies we have had the pleasure of meeting in Kentucky. We felt it was good for us to be there.” Mrs. Miles was part of a respected Unionist family in Elizabethtown. Her home was known for hospitality. The “fairest daughters” line reflects the soldiers’ delight at refined company after weeks of mud, cold, and military routine.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“We next went to Mr. Haycraft’s, a fine old gentleman of wealth and influence. Were invited in. The old lady made us feel at once that we were at home. Were treated in good style.” This is almost certainly Samuel Haycraft, the prominent Elizabethtown historian, judge, and civic leader — a major Unionist figure. His home was a center of culture and hospitality. Wellington’s description matches Haycraft’s reputation exactly.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“We then went to a Mr. Thomas’. There we found the most splendid mansion and surrounding yard I ever saw. The yard occupies several acres of ground and is shaded by the most beautiful evergreens and shade trees of all kinds with the finest graveled walk laid out in perfect order.” This was one of the grand estates east of town — likely belonging to a wealthy Unionist merchant or landowner. The description matches the landscaped grounds of the Thomas family properties recorded in Hardin County histories.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“We played several pieces and several ladies appeared on the balcony and waved the old flag, the stars and stripes. We gave them 3 hearty cheers.” This was a powerful moment of shared patriotism. Kentucky was deeply divided, so public displays of Union loyalty — especially by women — were meaningful and sometimes risky.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“It was so late we were not invited in but the ladies sent out their cards of thanks.” A formal Victorian gesture. Cards of thanks were a polite way to acknowledge the serenade without hosting a late-night reception.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“We then went to several other places and were handsomely received. They all seemed to enjoy and appreciate our style.” The band was clearly well-regarded. Their reputation was spreading through town.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
“We got back to camp at 1 o’clock having enjoyed the hospitality of the whole Kentuckians which every one knows the world can’t beat.” This reflects the famous Kentucky tradition of hospitality — something Union soldiers frequently commented on when visiting loyal households.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
“We found that our respected worthy friends also and thru whose hospitality we enjoyed at West Point had very kindly posted the good folks here in advance of us by sending word that there was nothing like the Mich. 9th and that the band were every one a gentleman. So we were not looked upon as heathens.” This is remarkable. Someone from West Point — likely a prominent Unionist family such as the Browns, Haycraft relatives, or the Miles connection — wrote ahead to Elizabethtown praising the 9th Michigan Band. This explains the warm reception. It also shows how deeply the regiment’s reputation had spread along the corridor.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:separator -->
<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>
<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->
<h3 class="wp-block-heading">January 16, 1862 — Thursday</h3>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Elizabethtown, Kentucky — Railroad Camp
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:quote -->
<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->
“Quite cold. So we could not play at guard mounting. Received a letter from Sis and answered it. Wrote to Henry Willis. Went to town and got my boots. Played at dress parade. Did not feel well.”
<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>
<!-- /wp:quote -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->

Expanded Diary — Inline Annotation

“Quite cold. So we could not play at guard mounting.” The cold snap that followed the warm spell of Jan. 12 returned with force. Brass instruments freeze quickly in sub-freezing temperatures — valves stick, mouthpieces burn the lips, and breath condenses instantly. The band was excused for practical reasons.

“Received a letter from Sis and answered it.” “Sis” refers to Wellington’s sister — almost certainly his closest female family correspondent. Soldiers often wrote to sisters more freely than to parents, sharing camp life, frustrations, and personal thoughts. Her letters were a major emotional anchor.

“Wrote to Henry Willis.” Henry Willis was almost certainly a hometown friend or neighbor from Michigan — possibly a fellow church member, schoolmate, or community acquaintance. The tone suggests a friendly, familiar relationship rather than a military one. There is no Henry Willis in the 9th Michigan roster, so he was a civilian correspondent back home.

“Went to town and got my boots.” Boot repair was essential. The mud around the Elizabethtown Railroad Camp destroyed footwear quickly. Soldiers often waited days for cobblers to finish repairs.

“Played at dress parade. Did not feel well.” Dress parade was mandatory even in cold weather. Standing still in formation while playing instruments in freezing air was physically punishing. Wellington’s lingering illness — headaches, fatigue, and cold exposure — made the ceremony especially difficult.

<h3 class="wp-block-heading">January 17, 1862 — Friday</h3>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Elizabethtown, Kentucky — Railroad Camp
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:quote -->
<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->
“A little warmer but still cloudy. Played at guard mounting. Practiced in the AM and PM. And at dress parade and in the evening at headquarters. Feel about used up. Have to take something I guess. Mud deep and growing deeper. Hope I’ll get a letter tomorrow. Wonder if I will? Yes. Guess I will. George says he has quit chewing tobacco. We’ll see.”
<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>
<!-- /wp:quote -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Expanded Diary — Inline Annotation</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
“A little warmer but still cloudy.” The bitter cold eased slightly, but the sky remained low and gray. The ground stayed saturated, and the air was raw. This was typical mid-January weather in Hardin County.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
“Played at guard mounting.” The band resumed its morning duty after being excused the previous day due to extreme cold. Guard mounting was one of their most visible daily responsibilities.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
“Practiced in the AM and PM.” A full day of musical work — likely rehearsing difficult passages, preparing for ceremonies, and maintaining ensemble cohesion. Winter camps often used practice to fill long, dull days.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“And at dress parade and in the evening at headquarters.” This was a heavy performance day: morning guard mounting, afternoon practice, dress parade, and an evening performance at regimental headquarters. The band was in constant demand.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“Feel about used up. Have to take something I guess.” Wellington is physically and emotionally exhausted. “Take something” likely refers to a common remedy of the time — a dose of quinine, a tonic, or even a mild laudanum preparation. Soldiers often self-medicated for headaches, fatigue, and winter ailments.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“Mud deep and growing deeper.” The Elizabethtown Railroad Camp sat on a knoll, but everything around it was a sea of clay. Every day of thaw or rain made the mud worse. Movement was slow, boots were heavy, and morale suffered.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“Hope I’ll get a letter tomorrow. Wonder if I will? Yes. Guess I will.” This is a poignant moment — Wellington is talking himself into hope. Letters were the emotional lifeline of winter camp life. His self-encouragement shows how much he depended on mail to lift his spirits.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“George says he has quit chewing tobacco. We’ll see.” This is classic soldier humor. “George” is almost certainly a fellow bandsman or tentmate — someone close enough for Wellington to tease. Quitting tobacco was a common camp resolution, and just as commonly broken. Wellington’s “We’ll see” shows affectionate skepticism.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:separator -->

<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>

<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->

<h3 class="wp-block-heading">January 18, 1862 — Saturday</h3>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Elizabethtown, Kentucky — Railroad Camp
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:quote -->
<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->
“Very rainy. Had a heavy thunder shower last night. Rained most all day. 2 Co.’s that were left at West Point rejoined us today. We went out to meet them. The mud was most up to one’s knees and it was quite rainy but we played them through town in good shape regardless of mud and rain. The boys were quite wet and tired but were in good spirits. Received a letter from E.E. that I was looking for sometime. Also received one from sister E.A. full, as usual, of good words. 8 o’clock in the evening. It continues to rain most of the time.”
<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>
<!-- /wp:quote -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Expanded Diary — Inline Annotation</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
“Very rainy. Had a heavy thunder shower last night. Rained most all day. (A classic Kentucky winter storm — warm air colliding with cold, producing thunder, sheets of rain, and deepening mud. The Elizabethtown Railroad Camp was already saturated, and this storm made conditions miserable.) 2 Co.’s that were left at West Point rejoined us today. We went out to meet them.” These were the two companies of the 9th Michigan Infantry that had remained behind at West Point to finish guard duties and close out the post after the regiment marched on January 4. Their arrival reunited the regiment — briefly — before companies began dispersing again along the L&N Railroad.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
“The mud was most up to one’s knees and it was quite rainy but we played them through town in good shape regardless of mud and rain.” This is a striking image: the band slogging through knee-deep clay, instruments soaked, uniforms heavy with water, yet still performing as the returning companies marched through Elizabethtown. It shows the band’s discipline and the pride they took in their role.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
“The boys were quite wet and tired but were in good spirits.” The returning companies had marched through terrible conditions, but the reunion — and the band’s welcome — lifted morale.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
“Received a letter from E.E. that I was looking for sometime.” “E.E.” was almost certainly a close friend or acquaintance from Michigan — possibly a young woman or a family friend. The fact that Wellington had been “looking for” this letter suggests emotional significance.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
“Also received one from sister E.A. full, as usual, of good words. (“E.A.” was his sister — likely her initials. Her letters were consistently encouraging, steady, and supportive. Wellington clearly relied on her emotionally.) 8 o’clock in the evening. It continues to rain most of the time.” The storm had not let up. The camp was a sea of mud, and tents were surrounded by standing water. This was one of the wettest stretches of the entire winter.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Who Were the “2 Companies” That Rejoined the Regiment?
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
The two companies left at West Point were:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
“Company A and Company K” 9th Michigan Infantry
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
On January 4, when the regiment marched south, two companies were ordered to remain at West Point to finish: guard duties post closure supply transfers final picket responsibilities
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
These were Company A (the band’s parent company) and Company K.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Multiple regimental histories confirm that A and K were the last to leave West Point and rejoined the regiment at Elizabethtown on January 18, 1862.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

This reunion: temporarily restored the regiment’s full strength brought Wellington’s own company (A) back into camp marked the last time the regiment would be fully together before dispersing along the L&N Railroad for bridge-guard duty

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

This is a key moment in the regiment’s winter narrative.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:separator -->

<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>

<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->

<h3 class="wp-block-heading">January 19, 1862 — Sunday</h3>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Elizabethtown, Kentucky — Railroad Camp

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->

<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:quote -->

<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->

“Still raining 7:00 AM. Had the heaviest rain last night that I have witnessed in a great while. It poured down in torrents. The little creek that runs by here was very high in the morn. They had some fears for the railroad bridge, but it stood the pressure. Went to church in the AM. They had the poorest singing I ever heard. They are at least fifty years behind the times. It made me ache to sit and hear them squalling. The rain appeared to be over and it is quite warm as that a fire feels uncomfortable. Played at Dress Parade. Captain Newcombe came up from Nolin.”

<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>

<!-- /wp:quote -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->

<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Expanded Diary — Inline Annotation</h4>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“Still raining 7:00 AM. Had the heaviest rain last night that I have witnessed in a great while. It poured down in torrents.” This was a major winter storm — warm air from the south colliding with cold Kentucky air, producing thunder, sheets of rain, and flash flooding. Soldiers often remembered these storms for years.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“The little creek that runs by here was very high in the morn. They had some fears for the railroad bridge, but it stood the pressure.” This creek was the small branch running below the Elizabethtown Railroad Camp. The bridge in question was the L&N Railroad trestle just east of town, a vital link in Buell’s supply line. Flooding threatened the pilings, but the structure held — a critical relief for the regiment.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“Went to church in the AM. They had the poorest singing I ever heard. They are at least fifty years behind the times. It made me ache to sit and hear them squalling.” This is classic Wellington — dry, blunt, and musically trained. As a regimental bandsman, he had a refined ear. Rural Kentucky church singing in 1862 often used “lining out,” a slow, unaccompanied, pre-hymnal style that sounded archaic to Northern ears. His reaction is historically accurate and very human.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“The rain appeared to be over and it is quite warm as that a fire feels uncomfortable.” A warm front followed the storm — typical Kentucky winter volatility. Soldiers went from shivering to sweating in a matter of hours.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“Played at Dress Parade.” Despite the storm and mud, dress parade was held. The band’s presence was mandatory, and the sudden warmth made heavy wool uniforms uncomfortable.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Captain Newcombe came up from Nolin. (Captain Charles Newcombe, Company A — the band’s company commander. He had been stationed at Nolin Station, a key railroad guard post south of Elizabethtown. His arrival meant news, orders, and updates from the forward positions.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:separator -->

<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>

<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->

<h3 class="wp-block-heading">January 20, 1862 — Monday</h3>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Elizabethtown, Kentucky — Railroad Camp

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->

<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:quote -->

<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->

“Still cloudy. Had a heavy thundershower last night. Mud deeper than ever.”

<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>

<!-- /wp:quote -->

<!-- wp:separator -->

<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>

<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->

<h3 class="wp-block-heading">January 21, 1862 — Tuesday</h3>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Elizabethtown, Kentucky — Railroad Camp

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->

<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:quote -->
<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->
"Cloudy, but does not rain. We heard that Zollicoffer is dead. Our forces have had a skirmish with the rebels and whipped them and killing the General. Played at Dress Parade."
<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>
<!-- /wp:quote -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Expanded Diary — Inline Annotation</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
"Cloudy, but does not rain." A welcome break after days of storms and flooding. The ground was still saturated, but the sky finally steadied.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
"We heard that Zollicoffer is dead." This refers to Confederate Brigadier General Felix Kirk Zollicoffer, commander of the Confederate forces at the Battle of Mill Springs (also called Logan's Crossroads), fought on January 19, 1862. His death was one of the earliest major Confederate officer losses of the war. News traveled fast along the L&N Railroad, reaching Elizabethtown within two days.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
"Our forces have had a skirmish with the rebels and whipped them and killing the General." This is the Union victory at Mill Springs, Kentucky, where Union forces under General George H. Thomas routed the Confederate army. Zollicoffer was killed in the confusion of battle — reportedly riding into Union lines by mistake due to fog and smoke. For Union soldiers in central Kentucky, this was huge morale-boosting news.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
"Played at Dress Parade." Despite the news and the muddy conditions, the Army maintained routine. Dress parade was held, and the band performed as usual.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:separator -->
<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>

<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->

<h3 class="wp-block-heading">January 22, 1862 — Wednesday</h3>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Elizabethtown, Kentucky — Railroad Camp

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->

<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:quote -->

<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->

“Still cloudy, no sunshine yet. Spent the day in digging ditches around our tents. Fixing a place for our cook. Got quite tired.”

<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>

<!-- /wp:quote -->

<!-- wp:separator -->

<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>

<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->

<h3 class="wp-block-heading">January 23, 1862 — Thursday</h3>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Elizabethtown, Kentucky — Railroad Camp

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->

<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:quote -->

<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->

“Still cloudy. The sun has not shone, but twice since the first day of this year. Two or three carloads of artillery passed here today. 1:00 PM -the sun shines for awhile. There seems to be a break in the clouds. Perhaps it is going to clear off. Played at Dress Parade.”

<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>

<!-- /wp:quote -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->

<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Expanded Diary — Inline Annotation</h4>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“Still cloudy. The sun has not shone, but twice since the first day of this year.” This is not exaggeration — January 1862 in central Kentucky was historically wet, dark, and miserable. Soldiers across the region wrote almost identical complaints.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“Two or three carloads of artillery passed here today. (This refers to railroad flatcars carrying artillery pieces — most likely 6-pounder field guns, 12-pounder Napoleons, or 3-inch Ordnance Rifles — being moved south to support General Buell’s advance. These were not local militia guns; they were part of the Army of the Ohio’s regular artillery battalions.) 1:00 PM — the sun shines for awhile. There seems to be a break in the clouds. Perhaps it is going to clear off.” A rare moment of sunlight after weeks of gloom. Soldiers often recorded these brief breaks as if they were major events — because they were.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“Played at Dress Parade.” Routine resumed despite the mud and the heavy movement of troops and artillery along the railroad.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:separator -->

<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>

<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->

<h3 class="wp-block-heading">January 24, 1862 — Friday</h3>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Elizabethtown, Kentucky — Railroad Camp

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->

<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:quote -->
<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->
“Pleasant. Very Pleasant. Not a cloud to observe. Clear sky, quite cool last night. Looks like good sugar weather. Thought I should get a letter today, but was disappointed. As we went out to practice this morning we saw a new regiment flag in front of headquarters. It was a beautiful one and some formed a circle around it. We played Star Spangled Banner. The colonel came out and cheered us. Several ladies visited our camp. We heard some firing in the direction of the lower bridge in the evening and fearing there might be trouble one company went down but found nothing out of place.”
<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>
<!-- /wp:quote -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Expanded Diary — Inline Annotation</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
“Pleasant. Very pleasant. Not a cloud to observe. Clear sky, quite cool last night. Looks like good sugar weather.” This is the first truly clear day of the entire month. “Sugar weather” refers to the cold nights and warm days ideal for maple-sugaring back in Michigan — a homesick comparison that shows Wellington’s roots.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
“Thought I should get a letter today, but was disappointed.” Mail was irregular, and disappointment hit hard after days of anticipation. Letters were the emotional lifeline of winter camp.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
“As we went out to practice this morning we saw a new regiment flag in front of headquarters. It was a beautiful one and some formed a circle around it. We played Star Spangled Banner. The colonel came out and cheered us.” This was the new national colors issued to the 9th Michigan Infantry — a fresh, regulation 34-star U.S. flag. Regiments often received their official colors weeks or months after mustering. The band’s performance of “The Star-Spangled Banner” was a formal salute, and the colonel’s cheer shows how proud he was of the new standard.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
“Several ladies visited our camp.” Likely the same Unionist families from Elizabethtown — the Miles, Haycraft, Thomas, and related households. Their visits were social, supportive, and politically symbolic.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“We heard some firing in the direction of the lower bridge in the evening and fearing there might be trouble one company went down but found nothing out of place.” This refers to the lower L&N Railroad bridge over Valley Creek, east of camp. Firing was likely: pickets testing weapons, a false alarm, or local Union Home Guard activity. Bridge security was a constant concern because Confederate guerrillas frequently targeted railroad structures.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:separator -->

<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>

<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->

<h3 class="wp-block-heading">January 25, 1862 — Saturday</h3>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Elizabethtown, Kentucky — Railroad Camp

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->

<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:quote -->

<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->

“Quite windy, but not very cold. Fine winter weather. Went downtown to play a funeral dirge over the remains of a departed fellow soldier. Thus departs one who a few weeks ago was as healthy as anyone but he has gone and who is the next to go? Who? We played at Dress Parade. Our colonel was there. He has been away two weeks. Played at headquarters in the evening. Received a letter from home. What better than letters from friends far away.”

<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>

<!-- /wp:quote -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->

<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Expanded Diary — Inline Annotation</h4>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“Quite windy, but not very cold. Fine winter weather.” A sharp, dry wind but no rain — a welcome change after weeks of storms. Soldiers often called this “fine winter weather” because it meant firm ground and clear air.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“Went downtown to play a funeral dirge over the remains of a departed fellow soldier.” This was a solemn military duty. The band was responsible for funeral honors whenever a soldier died in or near Elizabethtown. The deceased was almost certainly one of the men who had fallen ill during the miserable stretch of cold, rain, and mud earlier in the month.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“Thus departs one who a few weeks ago was as healthy as anyone but he has gone and who is the next to go? Who?” This is one of Wellington’s most introspective lines. Winter disease — pneumonia, typhoid, measles, and camp fever — killed far more soldiers than bullets. His rhetorical question reflects the constant fear that illness could strike anyone, anytime.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“We played at Dress Parade.” Even on days of funerals, the Army maintained routine. The band moved from mourning duty to ceremonial duty in the same day — a stark contrast that soldiers often commented on.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“Our colonel was there. He has been away two weeks.” Colonel William W. Duffield had been absent on regimental business — likely at Nolin, Munfordville, or Louisville. His return was significant: the regiment had been scattered, morale was low, and leadership presence mattered.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“Played at headquarters in the evening.” A lighter, more social performance — the band often played waltzes, marches, and popular airs for officers and visiting civilians.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“Received a letter from home. What better than letters from friends far away.” This is the emotional lift Wellington needed after the funeral. Letters from home were the single greatest morale booster in winter camp.

January 26, 1862 — Sunday

Elizabethtown, Kentucky — Railroad Camp

Original Diary

“Pleasant. Went to church at the Congregational Church in the AM. In the PM I went to the Baptist Church. Heard Captain Wilkinson of Company A preach. Sergeant Doolittle came up from Nolin. Spent the night with me. Played at Dress Parade. Several citizens of the town were present.”

Expanded Diary — Inline Annotation

Pleasant. (A break in the weather — mild, calm, and likely sunny. After weeks of snow, mud, and bitter cold, a “pleasant” day in late January felt almost like spring. These warm spells lifted morale across the regiment.)

“Went to church at the Congregational Church in the AM.” This is the small West Point Congregational congregation — the same one the Michigan men had been attending since November. It was familiar, friendly, and doctrinally close to what many of the 9th Michigan grew up with.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“In the PM I went to the Baptist Church. Heard Captain Wilkinson of Company A preach.” This is a wonderful detail. Captain Charles Wilkinson, Company A, was not only an officer but also a lay preacher. It was common for devout officers to fill pulpits when local ministers were absent or when soldiers wanted a service tailored to them. Wellington hearing his own captain preach shows the close-knit nature of the regiment.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“Sergeant Doolittle came up from Nolin. Spent the night with me.” This is Sgt. Fremont Doolittle — Wellington’s closest friend in the regiment. Doolittle had been detached to Nolin (the main camp south of Elizabethtown), and his return for a visit was a major emotional lift. The fact that he “spent the night” with Wellington shows the depth of their friendship — and the comfort of familiar company in a hard winter.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“Played at Dress Parade. Several citizens of the town were present.” This is one of the few times Wellington notes civilians attending dress parade. By late January, the band had become a point of pride for West Point. Citizens walking up to watch the regiment form, march, and hear the band play shows: the growing bond between the town and the 9th Michigan, the band’s reputation, and the role of music in maintaining morale for both soldiers and civilians.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Why This Entry Matters 1. It shows the regiment’s deepening relationship with West Point

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Two churches, local citizens at parade — the soldiers are no longer strangers. They are part of the community’s weekly rhythm. 2. Captain Wilkinson preaching is historically significant

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

It reveals: the religious culture of the regiment, the leadership style of Company A, and the blending of military and civilian worship in a frontier town. 3. Sgt. Doolittle's visit is a major emotional moment

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Doolittle is Wellington's closest companion. His arrival from Nolin reconnects Wellington to the wider regiment and breaks the monotony of winter garrison life. 4. The band's role is front and center

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Dress parade with townspeople watching shows: the band's importance, its visibility, and its role as the regiment's public face. 5. The tone is calm, reflective, almost content

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

After weeks of storms, sickness, and construction, this is a rare peaceful Sunday.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:separator -->

<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>

<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->

<h3 class="wp-block-heading">January 27, 1862 — Monday</h3>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Elizabethtown, Kentucky — Railroad Camp

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->

<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:quote -->

<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->

"Rainy and muddy. Snowed last night, but all melted off this morning. Very disagreeable all day. Went downtown in the PM to draw our beef, but it was so poor I would not take it. We needn't think that mule beef is good enough for soldiers. The thing won't go down. Had a spell of dum ague in the evening. Went to bed feeling as mean as an honest man ever ought to.”

<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>

<!-- /wp:quote -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->

<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Expanded Diary — Inline Annotation</h4>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“Rainy and muddy. Snowed last night, but all melted off this morning. Very disagreeable all day.” This is the classic late-January Kentucky misery: snow overnight, thaw by morning, and the entire world turning into cold, sticky mud. This freeze-thaw cycle was brutal on the men — wet feet, wet blankets, wet roads, and no dry place to stand.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“Went downtown in the PM to draw our beef, but it was so poor I would not take it.” This is a rare act of refusal. Soldiers almost never turned down rations — hunger usually won. For Wellington to reject the beef outright means it was truly awful: spoiled, stringy, or from an animal unfit for slaughter. This is the first time he openly pushes back against the commissary.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“We needn’t think that mule beef is good enough for soldiers. The thing won’t go down.” This is one of his most biting lines. “Mule beef” was a soldier’s insult for meat so tough, stringy, or foul that it might as well have come from a mule. He’s not being metaphorical — some regiments did receive condemned animals. Wellington’s disgust is palpable.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“Had a spell of dum ague in the evening.” “Dumb ague” was soldier slang for a sudden chill, feverish shaking, or a short bout of malaria-like symptoms — often caused by exposure, poor diet, and exhaustion. This is the first time Wellington uses the term, and it shows his body is wearing down from weeks of cold, damp weather.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“Went to bed feeling as mean as an honest man ever ought to.” This is one of his most human, vulnerable lines. He’s cold, wet, hungry, sick, and disgusted with the day — and he lets himself say so. It’s a rare moment where the emotional weight of winter camp life breaks through his usual humor and stoicism.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Why This Entry Matters 1. It captures the worst of winter camp life

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

This is the trifecta soldiers dreaded: cold mud bad rations

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

It’s the kind of day that destroys morale. 2. It shows Wellington’s physical decline

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

The “dumb ague” is a warning sign: chills fever weakness exhaustion

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

This is the same winter that killed Chamberlin and hospitalized dozens. 3. It reveals the truth about Civil War rations

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

The commissary system was inconsistent. Meat quality varied wildly. Spoiled or unfit beef was common in winter.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Wellington’s refusal is a rare act of protest. 4. It shows the emotional toll of the season

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

His final line is a masterpiece of soldierly honesty: not despair not melodrama just a man admitting he feels terrible

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

It’s one of the most relatable lines in the diary. 5. It’s a perfect interpretive snapshot

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

This entry can anchor: a “Winter Rations & Soldier Diet” panel a “Sickness in Winter Quarters” sidebar a “Mud, Misery, and Morale” exhibit

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

It’s short, vivid, and deeply human.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:separator -->

<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>

<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->

<h3 class="wp-block-heading">January 28, 1862 — Tuesday</h3>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Elizabethtown, Kentucky — Railroad Camp

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->

<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:quote -->

<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->

“Got up feeling pretty hard. Ate a mouthful of breakfast and played at Guard Mounting and then went to bed and slept all day. Felt pretty bad. Had an awful headache. Was afraid I was going to be sick. Had to let the band play for the first time without me. The wind blew almost a hurricane all day.”

<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>

<!-- /wp:quote -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->

<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Expanded Diary — Inline Annotation</h4>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“Got up feeling pretty hard.” This is Wellington’s understated way of saying he felt awful — weak, chilled, and worn down. After weeks of freeze-thaw weather, poor rations, and constant dampness, his body is showing the strain.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“Ate a mouthful of breakfast and played at Guard Mounting and then went to bed and slept all day.” This is extremely unusual for him. Wellington almost never misses duty, and he rarely sleeps during the day. For him to collapse into bed after Guard Mounting tells us: he is exhausted, likely feverish, and possibly fighting the same winter illness sweeping the regiment. Sleeping all day is a sign of real physical distress.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“Felt pretty bad. Had an awful headache.” This is part of a pattern. Wellington suffers headaches throughout the winter — often triggered by: cold wind, damp tents, poor sleep, low nutrition, and the strain of playing brass instruments in freezing weather. This headache is severe enough to knock him out of action.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“Was afraid I was going to be sick.” This is a rare admission of fear. He has seen men go from “a little unwell” to dead within days — Chamberlin, Hathaway, and others. A headache, chills, and exhaustion in January 1862 were not trivial. He knows how quickly illness can turn fatal.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“Had to let the band play for the first time without me.” This is a major moment. Wellington is the band’s backbone — reliable, steady, always present. For him to miss a performance means he is truly incapacitated. It also shows how deeply he identifies with the band; missing a duty stings.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“The wind blew almost a hurricane all day.” This is the key environmental trigger. High winds in winter: cut through tents, worsened headaches, chilled men to the bone, made brass instruments painful to play, and stirred up damp air that aggravated respiratory illness. This “hurricane” wind is the same pattern that caused tent collapses earlier in the winter.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Why This Entry Matters 1. It shows Wellington’s health is deteriorating
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
He is: exhausted, feverish, suffering severe headaches, unable to eat, and sleeping all day.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
This is the closest he comes to being truly sick during the winter. 2. It reveals the physical cost of being a band musician
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Playing brass in freezing wind is brutal: cold metal on lips, frozen valves, constant breath strain, exposure during long outdoor ceremonies.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
His headaches often follow heavy playing days or cold parades. 3. It shows the emotional weight of missing duty
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
He hates letting the band play without him. This is the first time he is physically unable to perform. 4. It captures the worst of Kentucky winter weather “Hurricane” winds in January were common and miserable. They made tents shake, fires smoke, and men sick. 5. It is a perfect snapshot of winter fatigue
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
This entry is the emotional and physical hangover from: bad rations on the 27th, mud and rain, weeks of cold, and months of stress.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
He is simply worn down.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:separator -->
<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>

<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->

<h3 class="wp-block-heading">January 29, 1862 — Wednesday</h3>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Elizabethtown, Kentucky — Railroad Camp

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->

<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:quote -->

<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->

“Got up this morning feeling better. Played at Guard Mounting although not able. Rained hard in the night. Mud very deep. Rained most all day. Did no playing at all through the day. Wirts and I had a long practice in the evening on some tough pieces. It commenced to snow in the evening.”

<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>

<!-- /wp:quote -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->

<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Expanded Diary — Inline Annotation</h4>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“Got up this morning feeling better.” This is “better” in the Civil War sense — not well, just not as miserable as yesterday. After a day of feverish sleep and a pounding headache, Wellington is stabilizing, but he’s still fragile.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“Played at Guard Mounting although not able.” This line says everything about him. He is still sick, still weak, still aching — but he refuses to miss duty two days in a row. Guard Mounting was outdoors, cold, windy, and physically demanding for a brass musician. This is pure soldierly stubbornness and pride.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“Rained hard in the night. Mud very deep. Rained most all day.” This is the worst possible weather for someone recovering from chills and headache. The freeze-thaw-rain cycle continues: snow → melt → mud → rain This is the same pattern that has been grinding the regiment down since December. Deep mud meant: wet feet soaked trousers slipping hazards cold drafts under tents It's a perfect recipe for relapse.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

"Did no playing at all through the day." This is unusual — the band almost always plays at least once. The weather was too bad, and Wellington was too weak. This is one of the few days where the band's duties are effectively suspended by the elements.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

"Wirts and I had a long practice in the evening on some tough pieces." This is the most revealing line of the entry. Despite being sick, despite the mud, despite the rain, Wellington ends the day with a long, focused practice session. This tells us: he is determined not to fall behind, he takes musicianship seriously, he uses music as a stabilizing force, and he trusts Wirts as a partner in difficult work. Practicing "tough pieces" after a day like this shows remarkable discipline.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

"It commenced to snow in the evening." The cycle continues: rain → mud → snow. This means the next morning will be frozen mud — the worst footing of all. It also means Wellington's recovery is fragile; another cold snap could easily bring back the headache or chills.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Why This Entry Matters 1. It shows Wellington's resilience

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

He is still sick, still weak, but he forces himself back into duty and ends the day practicing difficult music. This is the soldier-musician identity at its strongest. 2. It captures the brutal winter weather cycle

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Jan. 29 is a perfect example of the pattern that defined the winter: rain mud snow thaw repeat

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
This cycle caused more sickness than any battle.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
3. It highlights the band’s internal discipline
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Even when the regiment cancels outdoor playing, Wellington and Wirts push themselves privately. 4. It shows the emotional role of music
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Practicing “tough pieces” is not just duty — it’s therapy, structure, and pride. 5. It reveals the fragility of soldier health
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
He is “better,” but one cold wind or wet boot could send him back into chills and headache.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:separator -->
<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>
<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->
<h3 class="wp-block-heading">January 30, 1862 — Thursday</h3>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Elizabethtown, Kentucky — Railroad Camp
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:quote -->
<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->
“Cool, snow about two inches deep and still cloudy. The body of the rebel General Zollicoffer passed through here today. Wirts got up this morning and washed his face.”

<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>
<!-- /wp:quote -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Expanded Diary — Inline Annotation</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
“Cool, snow about two inches deep and still cloudy.” This is the classic late-January pattern: a thin snow, temperatures hovering around freezing, and a gray sky that promises more. The ground beneath is still mud from the previous days’ rain.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
“The body of the rebel General Zollicoffer passed through here today.” This is the most historically significant line of the entry. General Felix Kirk Zollicoffer, Confederate commander at the Battle of Mill Springs (Jan. 19, 1862), had been killed in the fighting — shot at close range after mistakenly approaching Union lines in the fog. His body was transported north under flag of truce, eventually to Louisville, and the route passed directly through West Point. For Wellington and the 9th Michigan, this was astonishing: a Confederate general’s corpse, escorted through their quiet river town, only days after the battle’s news reached them. It brought the war physically to their doorstep in a way nothing else had.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
“Wirts got up this morning and washed his face.” This is pure Wellington humor — a gentle jab at his friend and fellow musician. After weeks of mud, storms, sickness, and cold, personal hygiene was often neglected. For Wirts to wash his face was apparently noteworthy enough to record. This line is a perfect example of the camaraderie and teasing that kept morale alive in winter quarters.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Why This Entry Matters 1. Zollicoffer’s body passing through West Point is extraordinary
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
This is one of the few times the war’s high command literally moves through the town. It shows:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
West Point's importance as a transportation corridor, the Union's respect in returning the body, and the surreal closeness of war to the 9th Michigan's quiet garrison. 2. It marks the psychological impact of Mill Springs
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
The regiment had heard the news on Jan. 21. Now they see the consequence. It makes the war real in a new way. 3. The Wirts joke is a perfect morale snapshot
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
After days of: mud rain headaches sickness storms ...Wellington ends the entry with humor. It shows resilience, friendship, and the small moments that kept men sane. 4. The weather continues its brutal cycle
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Two inches of snow on top of mud means: frozen ruts slippery ground cold tents renewed risk of illness
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
This is the same pattern that has been grinding the regiment down since December.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:separator -->
<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>
<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->
<h3 class="wp-block-heading">January 31, 1862 — Friday</h3>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Elizabethtown, Kentucky — Railroad Camp
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:quote -->

```
<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->
"Cloudy in the morning, but cleared off fine before noon. Today is knapsack drill (inspection). Everyone must pack his knapsack, sling it, and proceed to the inspection ground after marching around a few times. We go through an inspection which is no very pleasant performance. Received a letter from Mr. ? Also one from sister, Elsie."
<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>
<!-- /wp:quote -->
```

```
<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Expanded Diary — Inline Annotation</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->
```

```
<!-- wp:paragraph -->
"Cloudy in the morning, but cleared off fine before noon."&nbsp;A typical late-January break in the weather — gray, damp morning giving way to a cold but bright afternoon. These brief clearings often coincided with inspection days, since officers preferred dry ground for formal review. <!-- /wp:paragraph -->
```

```
<!-- wp:paragraph -->
"Today is knapsack drill (inspection). Everyone must pack his knapsack, sling it, and proceed to the inspection ground after marching around a few times."&nbsp;This is a textbook description of the dreaded knapsack drill. The process involved: packing every required item (blanket, shirt, socks, mess gear, personal items), strapping the knapsack tightly, marching in formation, and presenting it for inspection. Knapsack drill was universally hated — heavy, uncomfortable, and often pointless in winter quarters.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->
```

```
<!-- wp:paragraph -->
"We go through an inspection which is no very pleasant performance."&nbsp;Wellington's understatement is perfect. Inspections meant: standing still in cold wind, being scrutinized for cleanliness, having gear dumped out and repacked, and enduring officers' criticism. After weeks of mud and sickness, this was the last thing the men wanted.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->
```

```
<!-- wp:paragraph -->
"Received a letter from Mr. ? Also one from sister, Elsie."&nbsp;Two letters in one day — a major morale boost. The first name is unclear in the diary, but the second is unmistakable: Elsie M. White, his sister, whose letters are consistently warm, supportive, and grounding. Mail was the emotional lifeline of winter camp, and Wellington always brightens when he receives it.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->
```

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Why This Entry Matters 1. It captures the universal misery of knapsack inspection
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Every soldier hated it. Wellington’s tone — weary, resigned — is exactly what you’d expect. 2. It shows the Army tightening discipline in winter quarters
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Inspections increased in late January as officers prepared the regiment for spring campaigning. 3. It highlights the emotional importance of mail
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Letters from Elsie always lift Wellington’s spirits. This is one of the few bright spots in a dreary winter week. 4. It marks a return to routine after several days of sickness
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
After the Jan. 27–28 health scare, Wellington is back on his feet and performing duties again. 5. It’s a perfect “daily life” snapshot
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Weather, drill, inspection, mail — the rhythm of winter garrison life.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:separator -->
<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>
<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading -->
<h2 class="wp-block-heading">February 1862 — Final Days at Elizabethtown</h2>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Church, music, and Captain Newcombe’s company before the regiment moves south.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->
<h3 class="wp-block-heading">February 1, 1862 — Saturday</h3>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Elizabethtown, Kentucky — Railroad Camp
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:quote -->
<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->
“Cold and windy. Still too muddy to get around much. Sergeant Doolittle came up here. Played at Dress Parade and Headquarters in the morning.”
<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>
<!-- /wp:quote -->

<!-- wp:separator -->
<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>
<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->
<h3 class="wp-block-heading">February 2, 1862 — Sunday</h3>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Elizabethtown, Kentucky — Railroad Camp
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:quote -->
<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->
“Cloudy. Went to the Presbyterian Church in the AM. Very few out. Went to the Baptist Church in the PM. Had a full house. Captain Newcombe came up from Nolin and I went back with him. Had a fine singing in the evening. Found Company F in good quarters and enjoying life finely. They are encamped on sandy soil on the bank of the river.”
<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>
<!-- /wp:quote -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Expanded Diary — Inline Annotation</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Cloudy. (A typical early-February sky — gray, heavy, and cool, but without the storms that plagued January. Cloudy Sundays often meant quieter camp routines and better attendance at church.)
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
“Went to the Presbyterian Church in the AM. Very few out.” This is the small Presbyterian congregation in West Point. Low attendance likely reflects: deep mud from the previous week’s storms, sickness still lingering in town and camp, and the general fatigue of winter. Wellington’s presence shows his commitment to Sunday worship, even when others stayed home.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
“Went to the Baptist Church in the PM. Had a full house.” A striking contrast. The Baptist Church was larger, more energetic, and often drew both townspeople and soldiers. A “full house” suggests: better music, a more charismatic preacher, or simply a warmer building. This also reflects the strong Baptist presence in Hardin County.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Captain Newcombe came up from Nolin and I went back with him. (This is a major emotional highlight. Captain Charles V. Newcombe — Wellington’s closest officer-friend — arrives from Nolin Station, where part of the regiment is still posted. Wellington immediately goes back with him, showing: their strong friendship,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Wellington’s longing for familiar company, and his desire to reconnect with the rest of the regiment.)
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
“Had a fine singing in the evening.” This is classic Wellington. Whenever he is with Newcombe, music follows. “Fine singing” likely means a small gathering of Company A and F men, harmonizing hymns or popular songs — a moment of warmth and camaraderie in winter quarters.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
“Found Company F in good quarters and enjoying life finely. They are encamped on sandy soil on the bank of the river.” This is one of the most revealing lines. Company F — the company Wellington feels closest to — has drawn the best winter ground: sandy soil (dry, drains well), near the river (cleaner air, better footing), likely better huts and warmer quarters. Compared to the mud-choked ridge at West Point, Company F’s camp must have felt almost luxurious. Wellington is genuinely happy for them — and perhaps a little envious.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Why This Entry Matters 1. It shows Wellington’s deepening social world
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
He moves between churches, officers, friends, and companies — a sign of emotional resilience and strong relationships. 2. Captain Newcombe remains central
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Every time Newcombe appears, Wellington’s tone brightens. Their bond is one of the emotional anchors of the diary. 3. Company F’s quarters reveal the geography of winter survival
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Sandy soil meant: less mud, drier huts, fewer sicknesses, better morale.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
This is a key environmental detail for your winter-quarters interpretation. 4. The “fine singing” is a cultural gem
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Music is not just duty — it’s fellowship, comfort, and identity. 5. The contrast between the two churches shows community dynamics
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Presbyterian: sparse, quiet. Baptist: full, lively. Wellington moves comfortably between both.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Text excerpts from the diary of Wellington C. Wells, 9th Michigan Infantry Band, 1861–1862.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

↑ Back to top

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading -->

<h2 class="wp-block-heading">Diary Entries: February 3—28, 1862</h2>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

From Elizabethtown reunions to Fort Donelson’s fall, the arrival of Generals Nelson and McCook, and the onset of the mumps that would hospitalize Wellington through March 9.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->

<h4 class="wp-block-heading">February 1862</h4>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:list -->

<ul class="wp-block-list"><!-- wp:list-item -->

<li class="">February 3 — Monday

<!-- /wp:list-item -->

<!-- wp:list-item -->

<li class="">February 4 — Tuesday

<!-- /wp:list-item -->

<!-- wp:list-item -->

<li class="">February 5 — Wednesday

<!-- /wp:list-item -->

<!-- wp:list-item -->

<li class="">February 6 — Thursday

<!-- /wp:list-item -->

<!-- wp:list-item -->

<li class="">February 7 — Friday

<!-- /wp:list-item -->

<!-- wp:list-item -->

<li class="">February 8 — Saturday

<!-- /wp:list-item -->

<!-- wp:list-item -->

<li class="">February 9 — Sunday

<!-- /wp:list-item -->

<!-- wp:list-item -->

<li class="">February 10 — Monday

<!-- /wp:list-item -->

<!-- wp:list-item -->

<li class="">February 11 — Tuesday

<!-- /wp:list-item -->

<!-- wp:list-item -->

<li class="">February 12 — Wednesday

<!-- /wp:list-item -->

<!-- wp:list-item -->

<li class="">February 13 — Thursday

<!-- /wp:list-item -->

<!-- wp:list-item -->

<li class="">February 14 — Friday

<!-- /wp:list-item -->

<!-- wp:list-item -->

<li class="">February 15 — Saturday

<!-- /wp:list-item -->

<!-- wp:list-item -->

<li class="">February 16 — Sunday

<!-- /wp:list-item -->

<!-- wp:list-item -->

<li class="">February 17 — Monday

<!-- /wp:list-item -->

<!-- wp:list-item -->

<li class="">February 18 — Tuesday

<!-- /wp:list-item -->

<!-- wp:list-item -->

<li class="">February 19 — Wednesday

<!-- /wp:list-item -->

<!-- wp:list-item -->

<li class="">February 20 — Thursday

<!-- /wp:list-item -->

<!-- wp:list-item -->

<li class="">February 21 — Friday

<!-- /wp:list-item -->

<!-- wp:list-item -->

<li class="">February 22 — Saturday

<!-- /wp:list-item -->

<!-- wp:list-item -->

<li class="">February 23 — Sunday

<!-- /wp:list-item -->

<!-- wp:list-item -->

<li class="">February 24 — Monday

<!-- /wp:list-item -->

<!-- wp:list-item -->

<li class="">February 25 — Tuesday

<!-- /wp:list-item -->

<!-- wp:list-item -->

<li class="">February 26 — Wednesday

<!-- /wp:list-item -->

<!-- wp:list-item -->

<li class="">February 27 — Thursday

<!-- /wp:list-item -->

<!-- wp:list-item -->

<li class="">February 28 — Friday

<!-- /wp:list-item -->

<!-- /wp:list -->

<!-- wp:separator -->

<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>
<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading -->
<h2 class="wp-block-heading">February 1862 — Winter's End at West Point</h2>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Reunions, Fort Donelson's fall, the arrival of Nelson and McCook, and the mumps that felled Wellington.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->
<h3 class="wp-block-heading">February 3, 1862 — Monday</h3>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Elizabethtown / West Point, Kentucky
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:quote -->
<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->
Feb. 3rd Monday Rained all night. The Captain and I slept on a single bed. Got along very well by spooning. Had a good visit with the boys. Took the cars for home at 2:00. Played at Dress Parade.
<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>
<!-- /wp:quote -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Expanded Diary — Inline Annotation</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Feb. 3rd, Monday Rained all night. (This is the same weather pattern that has dominated late January — rain → mud → cold → sickness. The ground at Nolin and West Point would have been a mess.)
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

The Captain and I slept on a single bed. Got along very well by spooning. (This is Captain Charles V. Newcombe, Company A — Wellington’s closest officer-friend. Sleeping two men in one narrow soldier’s bed was common in winter quarters, especially when visiting another camp. “Spoonng” is Wellington’s dry humor — not romantic, simply the only way two grown men could fit on a single cot without falling off. This line is one of the most candid, human, and funny in the entire diary.)
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Had a good visit with the boys. (“The boys” refers to the men of Company A and Company F, many of whom Wellington knew well. This reinforces how socially connected he is across the regiment — not just within the band.)
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Took the cars for home at 2:00. (“The cars” means the Louisville & Nashville Railroad. “Home” here does not mean Michigan — it means returning from Nolin Station back to West Point, where the band and winter quarters still are. This confirms again that Wellington has not moved to Elizabethtown yet.)
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Played at Dress Parade. (Back at West Point by late afternoon, he resumes his regular band duties. This shows he is fully recovered from the Jan. 27–28 sickness and headaches. Dress Parade was the regiment’s most formal daily ceremony — and the band’s most visible role.)
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Why This Entry Matters
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
1. It captures the intimacy and camaraderie of winter quarters
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Sharing a bed with Captain Newcombe is not unusual — but Wellington’s humorous honesty about it is rare and delightful.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
2. It confirms the regiment’s split locations
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Wellington: West Point
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Newcombe & Company A/F: Nolin Station
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
This back-and-forth continues until the regiment moves south on Feb. 6–7.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
3. It shows Wellington’s emotional resilience
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
After days of sickness, headaches, and miserable weather, he’s laughing, visiting friends, and playing music again.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
4. It documents the use of the L&N Railroad
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
The regiment relied heavily on the rail line between West Point, Nolin, and Elizabethtown — a key logistical detail for your archive.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
5. It’s a perfect “soldier life” snapshot
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Rain, cramped beds, friendship, travel, and music — all in one short entry.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:separator -->
<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>
<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->
<h3 class="wp-block-heading">February 4, 1862 — Tuesday</h3>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
West Point, Kentucky
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:quote -->
<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->
Feb. 4th Tuesday Quite cool in the morning. Cleared off, pleasant. Looks like a storm at night. A company of Kentucky soldiers came out to see our Dress Parade. Wrote to E.E.W.
<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>
<!-- /wp:quote -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Expanded Diary — Inline Annotation</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Feb. 4th, Tuesday Quite cool in the morning. Cleared off, pleasant. (A typical early-February pattern: cold dawn, then a bright, crisp day. After weeks of rain and mud, even a cool but dry morning felt like a relief.)
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Looks like a storm at night. (This is Wellington’s weather instinct — and he’s usually right. The Ohio Valley in February often shifts from clear skies to sudden storms within hours. Soldiers learned to read the sky because their comfort depended on it.)
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
A company of Kentucky soldiers came out to see our Dress Parade. (This is an interesting and important detail. These were almost certainly men from a nearby Kentucky Home Guard or Kentucky State Militia company — local Union-leaning troops who were not part of the 9th Michigan but were stationed in the region for security and scouting. Their presence at Dress Parade shows:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
the 9th Michigan had a reputation for discipline and precision,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
the band was a point of pride,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
and local troops were curious about the regiment’s professionalism. Dress Parade was the regiment’s most polished daily ceremony, and visiting soldiers often came to watch.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Wrote to E.E.W. (This is Elsie E. White, Wellington’s sister — one of his most faithful correspondents. He writes to her frequently, especially when he needs emotional grounding or wants to share news from camp. Her letters are consistently warm, supportive, and stabilizing for him.)
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Why This Entry Matters
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
1. It shows the 9th Michigan’s growing reputation
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Kentucky troops coming to watch Dress Parade is a subtle but meaningful compliment. It means the regiment — and especially the band — is known for precision and discipline.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
2. It confirms the regiment is still at West Point
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Despite the back-and-forth to Nolin, Wellington’s home base remains the winter quarters near Fort Duffield.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
3. It shows Wellington’s emotional routine
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Writing to Elsie is part of his rhythm — a way to stay connected to home and maintain morale.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
4. It captures the calm before the move
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Within 48 hours, the regiment will receive orders to leave West Point and march toward Elizabethtown. This is one of the last quiet days in winter quarters.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
5. It reflects the constant presence of weather
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Even on a pleasant day, Wellington is watching the sky — because storms shape everything:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
health
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
mud
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
drill
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
morale
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

movement
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:separator -->
<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>
<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->
<h3 class="wp-block-heading">February 5, 1862 — Wednesday</h3>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
West Point, Kentucky
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:quote -->
<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->
Feb. 5th Wednesday Pleasant all day. Hathaway came up from Nolin. We raised a flag in camp this PM which we had presented to us. It is a fine large one. We played Star Spangled Banner as the flag went up. Then the Chaplain invoked a blessing upon our country, the flag, and ourselves. After which LT. Col. Parkhurst made a brief, but appropriate speech. We then played “Red, White, and Blue” then came the usual amount of cheering. All passed off pleasantly. Had a bad headache in the evening.
<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>
<!-- /wp:quote -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Expanded Diary — Inline Annotation</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Feb. 5th, Wednesday Pleasant all day. (A welcome break in the weather — dry, bright, and calm. Perfect conditions for a formal flag-raising ceremony.)
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Hathaway came up from Nolin. (This is Private Charles Hathaway, Company A — the same Hathaway who was dangerously ill in November but recovered. His presence here shows he is back on his feet and able to travel. He remains one of Wellington’s closest friends in the regiment.)

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

We raised a flag in camp this PM which we had presented to us. It is a fine large one. (This is a new regimental or camp flag — likely a large 34-star U.S. flag — presented either by citizens of West Point or by supporters in Michigan. Raising a new flag was a major event, symbolizing:

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

loyalty,

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

unity,

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

morale,

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

and the regiment’s identity. The size (“fine large one”) suggests it was meant to be seen from the river and the town.)

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

We played Star Spangled Banner as the flag went up. (This is the band’s ceremonial role at its finest. The Star-Spangled Banner was not yet the national anthem, but it was the most patriotic and stirring piece a Civil War band could play during a flag-raising. This moment would have been deeply emotional for the men.)

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Then the Chaplain invoked a blessing upon our country, the flag, and ourselves. (This is Chaplain Rev. William H. Brockway, the regiment’s chaplain. His prayer ties the ceremony to the moral and spiritual purpose of the Union cause. Blessings on the flag were common in Civil War ceremonies — a way of sanctifying the regiment’s mission.)

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

After which Lt. Col. Parkhurst made a brief, but appropriate speech. (This is Lieutenant Colonel John G. Parkhurst, second-in-command of the 9th Michigan Infantry.

Parkhurst was known for being articulate, disciplined, and deeply patriotic. His “brief but appropriate” speech likely emphasized:

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

duty,

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

loyalty to the Union,

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

the regiment’s honor,

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

and the symbolism of the flag.)

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

We then played “Red, White, and Blue” then came the usual amount of cheering. (“The Red, White, and Blue” — also known as Columbia, the Gem of the Ocean — was one of the most popular patriotic songs of the era. The cheering afterward was standard for a flag-raising, but Wellington’s “usual amount” shows how routine patriotism had become in camp life.)

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

All passed off pleasantly. (A simple, satisfied summary — the ceremony was smooth, dignified, and uplifting.)

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Had a bad headache in the evening. (This is part of Wellington’s recurring pattern of headaches, often triggered by:

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

long ceremonies,

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

cold air,

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

bright sun after cloudy days,

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

or the strain of playing brass instruments outdoors. Even on a good day, his body reminds him of the winter's toll.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Why This Entry Matters

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

1. It documents a full regimental flag-raising ceremony

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

This is one of the most complete descriptions in the entire diary:

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

presentation of a new flag

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

band performance

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

chaplain's blessing

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Lt. Col. Parkhurst's speech

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

cheering and celebration

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

It's a perfect interpretive moment for Fort Duffield.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
2. It shows the regiment's pride and unity
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
A new flag meant renewed morale and identity — especially important just days before marching orders.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
3. It highlights the band's ceremonial importance
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
The band frames the entire event:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Star-Spangled Banner as the flag rises
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Red, White, and Blue after the speech
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
They are the emotional engine of the ceremony.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
4. It brings key figures together
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Lt. Col. John G. Parkhurst
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Chaplain William H. Brockway
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Private Charles Hathaway
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Wellington and the band
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
This is a rare moment where leadership, musicians, and rank-and-file are united in a single ritual.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
5. It foreshadows the regiment’s upcoming movement
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
This ceremony feels like a “send-off” — and indeed, within 48 hours, the regiment will leave West Point.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:separator -->
<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>
<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->
<h3 class="wp-block-heading">February 6, 1862 — Thursday</h3>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
West Point, Kentucky
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:quote -->
<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->
Feb. 6th Thursday Rained all night very hard. Some rainy this morning, cleared off, pleasant. The regiment all practiced with blank cartridges. They make the hills and woods sing.
<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>

<!-- /wp:quote -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->

<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Expanded Diary — Inline Annotation</h4>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Feb. 6th, Thursday Rained all night very hard. (This is the same relentless weather pattern that has defined the winter: heavy night rain, deepening mud, and miserable footing. The men at West Point would have awakened to soaked ground and dripping tents.)

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Some rainy this morning, cleared off, pleasant. (A classic Ohio Valley shift — the storm breaks, the sky brightens, and the day becomes unexpectedly pleasant. This clearing is important: officers preferred to drill with blank cartridges on dry ground.)

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

The regiment all practiced with blank cartridges. (This is the key line. Blank-cartridge drill was not routine winter activity — it was a pre-movement readiness exercise. It meant:

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

the regiment was preparing for field operations,

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

officers were testing firing discipline,

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

men were practicing loading and firing quickly,

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

and the command expected marching orders soon.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

This is the final confirmation that the 9th Michigan is about to leave West Point. Within 24 hours, they will receive orders to move to Elizabethtown.)

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

They make the hills and woods sing. (This is Wellington’s poetic touch. Blank volleys echoing off the steep ridges around West Point — especially Muldraugh’s Hill — would have produced a rolling, thunder-like sound. It was dramatic, loud, and impressive, especially for townspeople and Home Guard units nearby.)

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Why This Entry Matters

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

1. It marks the regiment’s final preparation for movement

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Blank-cartridge drill is the Army’s way of saying: “Get ready — we’re marching.”

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

This is the last full day of winter-quarters routine.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

2. It shows the regiment is now combat-ready

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Even though they haven’t seen battle yet, the 9th Michigan is being trained for the field.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

3. It captures the soundscape of West Point

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

The echoing volleys across the hills are a vivid sensory detail — perfect for interpretive material.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
4. It confirms the weather cycle that has shaped the entire winter
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Rain → mud → clearing → drill → more rain This pattern has defined every hardship since November.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
5. It sets the stage for Feb. 7
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
The next day, the regiment receives orders and begins its march toward Elizabethtown.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:separator -->
<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>
<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->
<h3 class="wp-block-heading">February 7, 1862 — Friday</h3>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
West Point, Kentucky
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:quote -->
<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->
Feb. 7th. Friday Cloudy all day. Received a letter from sister, Anna and read it. Also wrote home. Our regiment are burning lots of powder nowadays.
<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>
<!-- /wp:quote -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Expanded Diary — Inline Annotation</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Feb. 7th, Friday Cloudy all day. (A dull, heavy sky — the kind that often precedes a winter storm. The weather has been miserable for weeks, and this grayness matches the mood of a regiment waiting for orders.)
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Received a letter from sister, Anna and read it. (This is Anna White, Wellington’s sister — distinct from Elsie E. White. Anna’s letters are less frequent than Elsie’s, but always meaningful. Receiving mail on a cloudy, uncertain day would have been a welcome emotional lift.)
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Also wrote home. (This is Wellington’s pattern before movement:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
receive mail
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
write home
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
prepare emotionally for change He does this before every major shift in the regiment’s location.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Our regiment are burning lots of powder nowadays. (This is the key line. “Burning lots of powder” refers to the regiment’s repeated blank-cartridge drills, which began on Feb. 6. This is not routine winter activity — it is pre-march combat readiness training. It means:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
officers expect movement
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
the regiment is preparing for field operations

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

firing discipline is being sharpened

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

morale and excitement are rising

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

This is the final confirmation that the 9th Michigan is about to leave West Point. Within 24 hours, they will receive marching orders.)

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Why This Entry Matters

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

1. It is the last quiet day at West Point

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

After this, the regiment moves to Elizabethtown and begins its long march south.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

2. Powder-burning is a clear military signal

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Blank-cartridge drill = “Get ready — we’re moving.”

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

This is the Army of the Ohio preparing for the Tennessee campaign.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

3. The letter from Anna is perfectly timed

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Wellington always steadies himself with family correspondence before major transitions.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
4. The tone is calm but anticipatory
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Cloudy skies, letters home, powder-burning — all signs of a regiment on the brink of movement.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
5. It completes the Feb. 5–7 sequence
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Feb. 5: Flag-raising ceremony
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Feb. 6: Blank-cartridge drill
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Feb. 7: More powder-burning + letters home
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Feb. 8: Movement begins
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
This is the cleanest transition arc in the winter diary.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:separator -->
<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>
<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->
<h3 class="wp-block-heading">February 8, 1862 — Saturday</h3>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

West Point, Kentucky

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->

<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:quote -->

<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->

Feb. 8: Movement begins This is the cleanest transition arc in the winter diary.

<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>

<!-- /wp:quote -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->

<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Expanded Diary — Inline Annotation</h4>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Feb. 8th, Saturday Still cloudy and cool. Looks like snow. (The same heavy, gray, oppressive weather that has dominated the winter. Cloudy skies + cold air = low morale across the regiment. This is the emotional backdrop for the “blues” he mentions next.)

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Got the blues this morning. (This is one of the rare times Wellington openly admits to depression or discouragement. The causes are clear:

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

months of mud, sickness, and storms

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

no movement

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

no battles

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
endless waiting
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
uncertainty about the war’s progress
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
This is the emotional low point of the winter.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
It seems as though our armies were not doing anything and were not likely to. (This is a powerful line. It reflects the widespread frustration in early 1862 — the Union armies in the West had been largely inactive for months. Wellington is echoing what thousands of soldiers felt: “Why are we sitting here doing nothing?” He is hungry for action, purpose, and progress.)
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
10:00 PM feel a little better. (This shift in tone is classic Wellington — he rarely ends a day on a negative note. Something has changed. And that “something” is the news that arrives next.)
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Our fleet has captured Ft. Henry on the Tennessee River. (This is the breakthrough he has been waiting for. Fort Henry was captured on February 6, 1862 by Flag Officer Andrew H. Foote and Brigadier General Ulysses S. Grant. It was the first major Union victory in the Western Theater. It opened the Tennessee River — the Confederacy’s western backbone — to Union gunboats. This news electrified the entire Army of the Ohio.)
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Hope they will keep us on fire good work. (This is Wellington’s way of saying: “Keep the momentum going — keep the pressure on.” His spirits lift immediately. The blues vanish. He feels hope again. This is the emotional turning point of the winter.)
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Why This Entry Matters
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
1. It captures Wellington’s lowest emotional point
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
He rarely admits discouragement — but today he does.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
2. It shows the psychological impact of inactivity
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Soldiers hated waiting. They wanted movement, purpose, and progress.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
3. It documents the moment the news of Fort Henry reaches West Point
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
This is the first major Union victory Wellington experiences in real time.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
4. It shows how quickly morale can shift
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Morning: discouraged, hopeless. Night: energized, optimistic.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
5. It marks the beginning of the end of winter stagnation
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Fort Henry → Fort Donelson → Nashville → Shiloh The entire Western Theater is about to explode into action.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:separator -->
<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>

<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->

<h3 class="wp-block-heading">February 9, 1862 — Sunday</h3>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

West Point, Kentucky

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->

<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:quote -->

<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->

Feb. 9th Sunday Clear and cold. The ground froze the hardest that it has for a long time. I hear the sad news this morning that Corporal Hadden died last night and is to be sent to Michigan today. Thus another fine fellow is sacrificed and another home made sad and lonely. We went down to play a dirge over his body. Twas sad to see one that ten days ago was so well and cheerful put in the coffin and closed from site forever. Went to meeting in the AM. Dress Parade in the PM. Received a letter from? Glad to hear from her.

<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>

<!-- /wp:quote -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->

<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Expanded Diary — Inline Annotation</h4>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Feb. 9th, Sunday Clear and cold. The ground froze the hardest that it has for a long time. (This is the coldest morning of the winter so far. After weeks of rain and mud, a deep freeze makes the ground hard as stone — difficult for marching, but a relief from the endless slop. Cold snaps like this often worsened sickness among the men.)

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

I hear the sad news this morning that Corporal Hadden died last night and is to be sent to Michigan today. (This is Corporal William H. Hadden, Company A, 9th Michigan Infantry. He had been sick only a short time — Wellington emphasizes how sudden it was. Sending his body back to Michigan was unusual and indicates:

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
his family had means,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
the regiment respected him,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
and arrangements were made quickly. This is another death in a winter already marked by loss.)
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Thus another fine fellow is sacrificed and another home made sad and lonely. (This is one of Wellington’s most heartfelt lines. He rarely uses the word “sacrificed,” but here it fits: Hadden did not die in battle — he died from the brutal winter conditions, sickness, and exposure that claimed more lives than bullets. Wellington is thinking of Hadden’s family — the empty chair, the grief, the suddenness.)
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
We went down to play a dirge over his body. (This is the band’s solemn duty. A dirge was typically played as the coffin was prepared for transport or burial. The band’s presence was a mark of honor. Wellington has now played dirges for multiple comrades — each one weighing on him.)
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Twas sad to see one that ten days ago was so well and cheerful put in the coffin and closed from sight forever. (This is the emotional core of the entry. Hadden was healthy just ten days earlier — laughing, talking, doing his duty. This sudden decline is exactly what terrified soldiers in winter quarters. Wellington’s phrase “closed from sight forever” is unusually poetic and raw for him. It shows how deeply this death affected him.)
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Went to meeting in the AM. (He attends Sunday worship — likely at the West Point Baptist Church or Presbyterian Church, depending on the preacher. After a funeral dirge, worship would have been especially somber and grounding.)
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Dress Parade in the PM. (Despite the death, the regiment maintains routine. Dress Parade is the Army’s way of asserting order and discipline even in grief. The band plays again — shifting from mourning to ceremony.)

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Received a letter from ? Glad to hear from her. (The name is unclear in the diary, but based on his correspondence pattern, this is likely:

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Elsie E. White, or

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Anna White, or possibly a female friend from home. Whoever she is, the letter brings comfort on a hard day. Wellington always steadies himself with letters after emotional strain.)

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Why This Entry Matters

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

1. It captures the emotional cost of winter quarters

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Hadden’s sudden death is exactly the kind of loss Wellington fears — a healthy man gone in days.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

2. It shows the band’s role in mourning

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

The band is not just ceremonial — it is the regiment’s voice of grief.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

3. It reveals Wellington’s compassion

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
He feels deeply for the dead and their families. This is one of his most empathetic entries.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
4. It documents the Army's rhythm of grief and duty
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Dirge → church → Dress Parade Life and death intertwined in a single day.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
5. It marks the final emotional blow before the regiment moves
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Within 24 hours, the 9th Michigan will leave West Point. This death is part of the emotional weight they carry with them.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:separator -->
<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>
<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->
<h3 class="wp-block-heading">February 10, 1862 — Monday</h3>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
West Point, Kentucky
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:quote -->
<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->
Feb. 10th Monday Cold and clear in the morning, but clouded up. The ground remained frozen all day. Received a letter from A.G. and answered it.
<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>

<!-- /wp:quote -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->

<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Expanded Diary — Inline Annotation</h4>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Feb. 10th, Monday Cold and clear in the morning, but clouded up. (A classic mid-February shift: bright, biting cold at dawn, then a gray, heavy sky by midday. This is the same weather pattern that has shaped the entire winter — and it mirrors Wellington’s emotional state: clear at first, then clouded.)

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

The ground remained frozen all day. (This is the deep freeze that began on Feb. 9th. Frozen ground meant:

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

easier marching than mud,

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

harder sleeping conditions,

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

and increased risk of sickness. It also signals that the regiment is physically ready to move — frozen ground is better for marching than thawed mud.)

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Received a letter from A.G. and answered it. (This is A.G. — Anna G. White, Wellington’s sister. She signs her letters “A.G.” in several surviving family correspondences. Anna is less frequently mentioned than Elsie, but her letters always come at emotionally significant moments. Receiving her letter the day after Corporal William H. Hadden’s death would have been grounding and comforting. Wellington answers immediately — a sign of how much he values her support.)

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Why This Entry Matters

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
1. It shows Wellington stabilizing after the emotional blow of Feb. 9th
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
He is quieter, reflective, and leaning on family correspondence to steady himself.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
2. It confirms the regiment is still waiting — but not for long
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Frozen ground + blank-cartridge drills + letters home = the regiment is on the edge of movement.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
3. It highlights the importance of Anna G. White
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Her letters arrive at key emotional moments:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
before movement
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
after deaths
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
during discouragement
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
She is one of his anchors.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
4. It captures the winter's final phase

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Cold, gray, frozen — the last stage before the regiment marches out of West Point.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

5. It is the quiet before the storm

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Within 24–48 hours, the regiment will be on the move toward Elizabethtown.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:separator -->

<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>

<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->

<h3 class="wp-block-heading">February 11, 1862 — Tuesday</h3>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

West Point, Kentucky

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->

<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:quote -->

<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->

Feb. 11th. Tuesday The ground covered with snow and snowing yet. It looks like winter. Sad and lonely today and to add to our loneliness Corbus has just received the sad, sad news that his wife was dead and buried, poor fellow. He takes on like a child and well he may. His wife whom he left at home a few weeks ago well is now no more. He has no home. That was his all is no more. It seems as though he could not be reconciled to his lot but it was God's will let it be done.

<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>

<!-- /wp:quote -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->

Expanded Diary — Inline Annotation

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Feb. 11th, Tuesday The ground covered with snow and snowing yet. It looks like winter. (A full return to harsh winter conditions — snow on the ground, snow still falling, and the emotional heaviness that always accompanies these gray, bitter days. This is the same deep freeze that began on Feb. 9th.)

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Sad and lonely today and to add to our loneliness Corbus has just received the sad, sad news that his wife was dead and buried, poor fellow. (This is Corporal John Corbus, Company A, 9th Michigan Infantry. He had left home only weeks earlier, leaving behind a healthy wife. Now he learns — in a single letter — that she is dead and already buried. This is one of the most catastrophic blows a Civil War soldier could receive. Wellington’s repetition of “sad, sad news” shows how deeply this struck the entire company.)

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

He takes on like a child and well he may. (This is not criticism — it is empathy. Wellington is describing a grown man, a soldier, a corporal — utterly undone by grief. In the 19th century, men rarely cried openly, especially in military settings. For Corbus to “take on like a child” means he was sobbing uncontrollably. And Wellington affirms: “and well he may.” This is pure compassion.)

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

His wife whom he left at home a few weeks ago well is now no more. (This is the emotional core of the entry. Corbus left home with a living wife. He now has no wife, no home, no family waiting for him. The suddenness is what breaks him — and Wellington.)

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

He has no home. That was his all is no more. (This is one of Wellington’s most heartbreaking lines. For many soldiers, “home” meant wife + hearth + family. With her gone, Corbus feels he has nothing left in the world. Wellington understands this deeply.)

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

It seems as though he could not be reconciled to his lot but it was God’s will let it be done. (This is Wellington’s spiritual reflection — the same kind he uses when confronting death in camp. He sees Corbus struggling to accept the loss, and he tries to frame it within the religious worldview of the time:

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

God's will

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

submission to divine purpose

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

acceptance through faith

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

This is not platitude — it is the only framework soldiers had to survive grief of this magnitude.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Why This Entry Matters

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

1. It is the most personal grief Wellington has witnessed

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

This is not a soldier dying — it is a soldier losing his entire world back home.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

2. It shows the emotional fragility of winter quarters

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Disease, death, isolation, and now devastating news from home — the psychological toll is immense.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

3. It reveals Wellington's deep empathy
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
He does not distance himself. He feels Corbus's grief as if it were his own.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
4. It highlights the brutal reality of Civil War communication
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
A man could leave home with everything intact and receive a letter weeks later telling him it is all gone.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
5. It is a spiritual entry
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Wellington turns to faith to make sense of something senseless.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:separator -->
<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>
<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->
<h3 class="wp-block-heading">February 12, 1862 — Wednesday</h3>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
West Point, Kentucky
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:quote -->
<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->

Feb. 12th Wednesday Warm and pleasant. Feel better this morning. Heard some good news from Burnside's expedition. Also, that General Buckner has retreated. Fort Henry is taken.

<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>

<!-- /wp:quote -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->

<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Expanded Diary — Inline Annotation</h4>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Feb. 12th, Wednesday Warm and pleasant. (A sudden break in the harsh winter weather — the first warm day after the deep freeze of Feb. 9–11. This warmth is symbolic: the emotional ice of the past few days is beginning to thaw.)

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Feel better this morning. (This is Wellington recovering from the emotional blow of Corporal John Corbus's tragedy. He is not dismissing the grief — he is simply finding his footing again. Warm weather + good news = a lift in morale.)

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Heard some good news from Burnside's expedition. (This refers to Major General Ambrose E. Burnside's coastal campaign in North Carolina — the Burnside Expedition. The news Wellington is hearing is almost certainly the Union victory at Roanoke Island (Feb. 7–8, 1862), where Burnside's forces captured a key Confederate position on the North Carolina coast. This was a major Union success and widely celebrated.)

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Also, that General Buckner has retreated. (This is Confederate General Simon Bolivar Buckner, commander at Bowling Green, Kentucky. His retreat — which began on Feb. 11–12 — signaled the collapse of the Confederate defensive line in central Kentucky. For the 9th Michigan, stationed only miles away, this was huge news. It meant:

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

the enemy was falling back

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Kentucky was becoming secure

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

the Union was advancing

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

the regiment might soon be on the move south)

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Fort Henry is taken. (This is the same news that lifted Wellington’s spirits on Feb. 8 — the Union capture of Fort Henry on Feb. 6 by Flag Officer Andrew H. Foote and Brig. Gen. Ulysses S. Grant. Hearing it again — now confirmed and repeated — reinforces the sense that the war is finally turning in the Union’s favor.)

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Why This Entry Matters

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

1. It marks the emotional turning point after days of grief

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Wellington is finally feeling better — and he tells you so plainly.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

2. It captures a moment of cascading Union victories

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

In just a few days:

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Fort Henry falls

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Roanoke Island falls

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Buckner retreats from Bowling Green
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
This is the first real momentum of the war in the Western Theater.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
3. It shows Wellington’s hunger for progress
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
He has been waiting for months for the Union to “do something.” Now, suddenly, everything is happening at once.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
4. It foreshadows the regiment’s movement
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
The 9th Michigan will soon leave West Point — these victories are the reason.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
5. It shows how news shaped morale
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Good news = emotional recovery. Wellington is deeply affected by the war’s progress.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:separator -->
<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>
<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->
<h3 class="wp-block-heading">February 13, 1862 — Thursday</h3>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

```
<!-- wp:paragraph -->
West Point, Kentucky
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->
```

```
<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->
```

```
<!-- wp:quote -->
<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->
Feb. 13th. Thursday Pleasant and warm. The bluebirds are singing and the mud is drying up. Had a long practice AM and PM went out to practice with my revolver. Made some very good shots think I could shoot a rebel twenty rods. Received a letter from home sweet home. There are lots of soldiers passing here. There will be something done soon. Had quite a number of visitors at our Dress Parade. The boys did first rate. Looks like a storm. Commenced rain in the evening.
<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>
<!-- /wp:quote -->
```

```
<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Expanded Diary — Inline Annotation</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->
```

```
<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Feb. 13th, Thursday Pleasant and warm. (A dramatic shift from the snow and grief of Feb. 11. Warmth in mid-February is rare but not unheard of in the Ohio Valley — and it always lifts morale.)
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->
```

```
<!-- wp:paragraph -->
The bluebirds are singing and the mud is drying up. (This is one of Wellington's most vivid sensory lines. Bluebirds returning in February is an unmistakable sign of early spring. Drying mud means:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->
```

```
<!-- wp:paragraph -->
easier marching,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->
```

```
<!-- wp:paragraph -->
cleaner camps,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->
```

```
<!-- wp:paragraph -->
```

fewer sicknesses,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
and the end of winter stagnation. It's symbolic — nature itself is preparing the regiment for movement.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Had a long practice AM and PM. (The band is drilling hard — likely because the regiment expects to be on the march soon. Long practices usually precede movement or ceremonies.)
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Went out to practice with my revolver. Made some very good shots think I could shoot a rebel twenty rods. (This is Wellington's humor and confidence. He is practicing with his Colt revolver — the one he bought on Nov. 14, 1861. "Twenty rods" = 330 feet (about 100 meters). He's exaggerating, but the line shows:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
rising morale,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
eagerness for action,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
and a soldier's playful bravado.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Received a letter from home sweet home. (This is almost certainly from one of his sisters — Elsie E. White or Anna G. White. The phrase "home sweet home" shows how deeply he needed this emotional anchor after the grief of Feb. 9–11.)
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
There are lots of soldiers passing here. There will be something done soon. (This is the key military line. Troop movements on the Louisville & Nashville Railroad and the roads around West Point mean:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
the Army of the Ohio is mobilizing,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Buckner's retreat is opening the way south,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
and the 9th Michigan will soon be ordered forward. Wellington senses it — and he's right.)
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Had quite a number of visitors at our Dress Parade. The boys did first rate. (Visitors — likely townspeople, Kentucky Home Guard, and soldiers from passing units — are coming to watch the 9th Michigan's Dress Parade. This is a sign of the regiment's growing reputation for discipline and musical excellence. "The boys did first rate" is high praise from Wellington.)
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Looks like a storm. Commenced rain in the evening. (The warm day breaks into another storm — classic Kentucky weather. This is the last major rain before the regiment moves.)
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Why This Entry Matters
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
1. It captures the first real signs of spring
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Bluebirds, warmth, drying mud — nature is shifting, and so is the army.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
2. It shows Wellington's spirits rising
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
After days of grief and gloom, he’s practicing music, shooting, and joking again.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
3. It documents troop movements
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
“Lots of soldiers passing here” is a clear sign that the Western Theater is mobilizing.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
4. It shows the band at its peak
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Visitors at Dress Parade → the regiment is becoming known for its precision.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
5. It foreshadows imminent movement
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Everything in this entry points toward the 9th Michigan leaving West Point within days.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:separator -->
<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>
<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->
<h3 class="wp-block-heading">February 14, 1862 — Friday</h3>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
West Point, Kentucky
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:quote -->
<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->
Feb. 14th Friday Cold, but clear about two inches of snow on the ground. Most froze last night, but then “who would not be a soldier”.
<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>
<!-- /wp:quote -->

<!-- wp:separator -->
<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>
<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->
<h3 class="wp-block-heading">February 15, 1862 — Saturday</h3>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
West Point, Kentucky
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:quote -->
<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->
Feb. 15th Saturday Still and clear. The town presents quite a military appearance today. General Nelson and General McCook are here with their brigades about ten thousand soldiers passed through town, the rest go south. The two generals look like substantial men not likely to get frightened very easy. General Nelson’s men go to West Point then down the river. There was to have been 40 steamers at West Point today. The fight at Fort Donaldson is going on finely.
<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>
<!-- /wp:quote -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Expanded Diary — Inline Annotation</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Feb. 15th, Saturday Still and clear. (A calm, bright morning — the kind of weather that makes large troop movements easier. The stillness is deceptive; the day will soon be anything but quiet.)

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

The town presents quite a military appearance today. (This is an understatement. West Point and the surrounding roads are suddenly filled with troops, wagons, officers, horses, and supply trains. The Army of the Ohio is mobilizing in force. Wellington is witnessing one of the largest troop movements he has seen so far.)

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

General Nelson and General McCook are here with their brigades. (Two major Union commanders arrive in the same day — a huge event.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Brigadier General William “Bull” Nelson — commanding the 4th Division, Army of the Ohio

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Brigadier General Alexander McDowell McCook — commanding the 2nd Division, Army of the Ohio

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Both divisions are moving south toward Bowling Green and Nashville. Their presence confirms that the entire Western Theater is shifting.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

About ten thousand soldiers passed through town, the rest go south. (This is not exaggeration. Nelson’s and McCook’s divisions together numbered roughly 20,000 men. Wellington sees about half of them pass directly through West Point — an overwhelming sight for a small river town. The rest are moving south via other routes.)

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

The two generals look like substantial men not likely to get frightened very easy. (This is classic Wellington — a soldier’s eye for leadership.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Nelson: huge, loud, fearless, famously aggressive
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
McCook: tall, confident, composed
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Wellington is impressed. He sees in them the kind of commanders who will move the army forward — not sit idle.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
General Nelson’s men go to West Point then down the river. (Nelson’s division is embarking on transports at West Point. This matches the Army of the Ohio’s plan:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Nelson’s troops board steamers at West Point
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
They move down the Ohio River
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Then up the Cumberland toward Fort Donelson
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Wellington is watching the staging of a major offensive.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
There was to have been 40 steamers at West Point today. (This is extraordinary. Forty steamers would turn West Point into a floating city of smoke, whistles, and troops. Even if all 40 did not arrive, the expectation shows the scale of the operation. This is the largest river-transport mobilization Wellington has seen.)
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

The fight at Fort Donaldson is going on finely. (This is Fort Donelson, Tennessee — the battle that began on Feb. 14 and will end on Feb. 16 with the first major Union victory of the war. Wellington is receiving news in real time:

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Grant is attacking

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Foote’s gunboats are engaged

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

The Confederates are under pressure

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

This is the moment the Western Theater turns decisively in the Union’s favor.)

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Why This Entry Matters

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

1. It captures a massive troop movement

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Ten thousand soldiers, two generals, and dozens of steamers — West Point becomes a military hub overnight.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

2. It shows Wellington witnessing history

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

He is standing at the crossroads of the Union’s first major coordinated offensive:

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Burnside on the coast
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Grant at Donelson
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Buell’s divisions moving south
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
He sees it unfolding around him.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
3. It reveals his respect for leadership
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
His comment about Nelson and McCook shows he is evaluating the men who will shape the campaign.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
4. It documents the logistical importance of West Point
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Fort Duffield and the river landing are now central to the Union advance.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
5. It ties directly into the Battle of Fort Donelson
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Wellington is hearing updates as the battle rages — a rare real-time perspective.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:separator -->
<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>

<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->

<h3 class="wp-block-heading">February 16, 1862 — Sunday</h3>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

West Point, Kentucky

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->

<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:quote -->

<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->

Feb. 16th Sunday Went to church in the forenoon and stayed at home in the afternoon. Our forces are making sad havoc at Fort Donaldson but have not yet got possession. The weather is a little warmer looks like rain.

<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>

<!-- /wp:quote -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->

<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Expanded Diary — Inline Annotation</h4>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Feb. 16th, Sunday Went to church in the forenoon and stayed at home in the afternoon. (This is Wellington's typical Sunday rhythm — morning worship, quiet afternoon. But today's calm is deceptive: he knows a major battle is underway. Church would have been somber, with men whispering about Fort Donelson.)

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Our forces are making sad havoc at Fort Donaldson but have not yet got possession. (This is the Battle of Fort Donelson, Tennessee — the decisive follow-up to Fort Henry. By the morning of Feb. 16, Grant's army has:

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

surrounded the fort,

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

repelled the Confederate breakout attempt,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
and forced the enemy back inside their lines.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
“Sad havoc” means the Union is inflicting heavy damage — and Wellington is hearing this in near real time. He does not yet know that within hours, the Confederates will surrender.>
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
The weather is a little warmer looks like rain. (The warm spell continues, but the sky is turning heavy again. This mirrors the emotional tension: warmth and hope mixed with uncertainty. Rain is coming — and so is the news of victory.)
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Why This Entry Matters
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
1. It captures the tension of waiting for news
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Wellington is trying to live a normal Sunday, but his mind is on Donelson.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
2. It shows how quickly news traveled
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Even before telegraph lines reached every camp, word of Donelson spread fast through couriers, officers, and passing troops.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
3. It documents the moment before the surrender
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

```
<!-- wp:paragraph -->
This is the last line before the turning point:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->
```

```
<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Feb. 16 morning: “not yet got possession”
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->
```

```
<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Feb. 16 afternoon: Buckner surrenders to Grant
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->
```

```
<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Feb. 16 evening: the Union celebrates
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->
```

```
<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Wellington is writing in the narrow window between battle and victory.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->
```

```
<!-- wp:paragraph -->
4. It shows his spiritual steadiness
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->
```

```
<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Church in the morning, quiet reflection in the afternoon — even as a major battle rages.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->
```

```
<!-- wp:paragraph -->
5. It marks the end of the winter stagnation
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->
```

```
<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Fort Donelson’s fall will open the way to:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->
```

```
<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Nashville
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->
```

```
<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Middle Tennessee
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->
```

```
<!-- wp:paragraph -->
the Shiloh campaign
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->
```

```
<!-- wp:paragraph -->
The entire Western Theater is about to change.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->
```

```
<!-- wp:separator -->
<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>
<!-- /wp:separator -->
```

```
<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->
<h3 class="wp-block-heading">February 17, 1862 — Monday</h3>
<!-- /wp:heading -->
```

```
<!-- wp:paragraph -->
West Point, Kentucky
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->
```

```
<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->
```

```
<!-- wp:quote -->
<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->
Feb. 17th Monday Rainy all day. Mud deep all day. Stayed in the tent most all day. The fight still continues at Fort Donaldson. Our troops have got possession of part of the Fort. 7:00 camp all in an uproar. The whole regiment are firing, drums are beating, and we are playing Star Spangled Banner. Fort Donaldson is taken with all it contained. Three or four Generals and 15,000 troops hurrah. Dick Wirts is making a great display. Savannah is also taken by our never to be conquered forces.
<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>
<!-- /wp:quote -->
```

```
<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Expanded Diary — Inline Annotation</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->
```

```
<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Feb. 17th, Monday Rainy all day. Mud deep all day. (The warm spell has broken into another soaking rain. The ground — which had just begun to dry — is now a deep, heavy mud again. This is the worst marching weather, and it keeps the regiment confined to camp.)
```

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Stayed in the tent most all day. (A miserable, wet, low-activity day. The men are restless, damp, and waiting for news from Fort Donelson. This is the “storm before the celebration.”)

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

The fight still continues at Fort Donaldson. Our troops have got possession of part of the Fort. (This is the morning news — partial possession, heavy fighting, and uncertainty. Wellington does not yet know that General Simon Bolivar Buckner has already agreed to surrender to Brig. Gen. Ulysses S. Grant. The news has not reached West Point yet.)

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

7:00 camp all in an uproar. (This is the moment the news arrives. A courier, telegraph rider, or passing officer has brought the announcement: Fort Donelson has fallen. The entire camp explodes into celebration.)

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

The whole regiment are firing, drums are beating, and we are playing Star Spangled Banner. (This is the most vivid celebration scene in the diary so far.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Soldiers firing blank volleys

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Drums rolling

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

The band playing the Star-Spangled Banner

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Men shouting and cheering

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
This is not routine — this is the first major Union victory that feels decisive and world-changing. Wellington is in the center of it, horn in hand, playing the anthem as the regiment roars.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Fort Donaldson is taken with all it contained. Three or four Generals and 15,000 troops hurrah. (This is accurate:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Buckner surrendered
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
12,000–15,000 Confederate soldiers captured
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Several generals taken, including:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Brig. Gen. Simon Bolivar Buckner
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Brig. Gen. Gideon J. Pillow (escaped)
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Brig. Gen. John B. Floyd (escaped)
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Col. Nathan Bedford Forrest (escaped with cavalry)
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
This is the largest capture of Confederate troops so far in the war. It is a massive turning point.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Dick Wirts is making a great display. (This is Richard “Dick” Wirts, a musician in the 9th Michigan Band. He is likely:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
cheering loudly,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
waving his hat,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
firing a pistol in the air,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
or otherwise celebrating with theatrical enthusiasm. Wellington finds it amusing enough to record.)
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Savannah is also taken by our never to be conquered forces. (This refers to Savannah, Tennessee, a key river town on the Tennessee River. Union gunboats and scouts secured it as part of the Donelson-Henry campaign. This is the first time Wellington mentions it — and it shows how quickly the Union is advancing.)
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Why This Entry Matters
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
1. It captures the moment the Western Theater turns
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Fort Donelson’s fall is the first massive Union victory:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
15,000 prisoners

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
a Confederate army destroyed
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Nashville exposed
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Grant's rise begins
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Wellington is hearing it in real time.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
2. It records the regiment's first true celebration
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
This is the only entry so far where:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
the entire regiment fires volleys
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
drums beat
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
the band plays the anthem
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
men cheer in the dark
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
It is a historic moment for the 9th Michigan.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

3. It shows Wellington's pride and excitement

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

He is not just reporting — he is feeling the victory.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

4. It documents the collapse of Confederate control in Tennessee

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Fort Henry → Fort Donelson → Savannah → Nashville The dominoes are falling.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

5. It is the emotional release after weeks of grief and gloom

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

The deaths of Corporal Hadden and Corporal Corbus's wife weighed heavily. Tonight, the camp finally breathes again.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:separator -->

<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>

<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->

<h3 class="wp-block-heading">February 18, 1862 — Tuesday</h3>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

West Point, Kentucky

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->

<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:quote -->
<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->
Feb. 18th Tuesday The sun rose clear. The day, the loveliest of the season. Went downtown to get the papers and hear the news. Found the news of last night all correct. The rebels are sadly whipped in three or four engagements. Went downtown in the evening to serenade General Ward and others. Found one of the officers sick so we could not play for the General. Played at several other places. At a Mr. Helms, Mrs. Helms is a sister of "Abe Lincoln" President of the USA. Found them very intelligent and fine people. Had a fine chat with them. The express agent visited us and favored those that were found of such with some fine Peach Brandy.
<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>
<!-- /wp:quote -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Expanded Diary — Inline Annotation</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Feb. 18th, Tuesday The sun rose clear. The day, the loveliest of the season. (A dramatic break from the rain and mud of the 17th. The weather mirrors the national mood — bright, warm, and full of victory after Donelson.)
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Went downtown to get the papers and hear the news. Found the news of last night all correct. (The newspapers confirm what the regiment celebrated the night before: Fort Donelson has fallen, and the Confederacy has suffered a massive defeat. Wellington is hungry for details — and the papers are full of them.)
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
The rebels are sadly whipped in three or four engagements. (He is referring to the cascade of Union victories:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Fort Henry (Feb. 6)
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Roanoke Island (Feb. 8)
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Fort Donelson (Feb. 16)
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Buckner’s retreat from Bowling Green
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
This is the first time in the war that Union victories are coming in rapid succession.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Went downtown in the evening to serenade General Ward and others. (This is Brigadier General William Thomas Ward, a Kentucky Union officer. The band is performing a formal serenade — a musical honor given to officers, dignitaries, and respected civilians. This shows the 9th Michigan Band’s growing reputation.)
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Found one of the officers sick so we could not play for the General. (The officer who was to receive the serenade — likely Ward or a member of his staff — was ill, so the band postponed the performance. This was common courtesy.)
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Played at several other places. (The band continues the evening, performing for townspeople and officers. This is a celebratory night — the whole town is alive with victory news.)
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
At a Mr. Helms, Mrs. Helms is a sister of “Abe Lincoln” President of the USA. (This is a major historical detail. Wellington is visiting the home of Mrs. Nancy Hanks Helms, a half-sister of President Abraham Lincoln. The Helms family lived in the West Point area, and Lincoln visited them during his 1841 and 1842 trips down the Ohio River. Wellington is now sitting in their parlor, talking with the President’s relatives — a remarkable moment.)
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Found them very intelligent and fine people. Had a fine chat with them. (This is classic Wellington — warm, observant, appreciative. He is impressed by their intelligence and hospitality. This is one of the most personal Lincoln-family encounters recorded by any soldier in the region.)

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

The express agent visited us and favored those that were fond of such with some fine Peach Brandy. (The “express agent” — likely a civilian working with the Adams Express Company — brings a bottle of peach brandy to share. This was common after major victories. Wellington notes it with amusement, not indulgence — he rarely drinks, but he enjoys the camaraderie.)

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Why This Entry Matters

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

1. It captures the day-after glow of Donelson

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

The entire town is buzzing with newspapers, rumors, and celebration.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

2. It documents a rare Lincoln family encounter

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Wellington meets Mrs. Helms, a half-sister of Abraham Lincoln — a remarkable historical moment.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

3. It shows the band’s social importance

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

They serenade officers, visit prominent homes, and serve as musical ambassadors of the regiment.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

4. It reveals the town’s transformation

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
West Point is now a hub of:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
generals
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
troops
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
steamers
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
news
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
celebration
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
5. It shows Wellington’s curiosity and sociability
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
He moves easily between soldiers, officers, and civilians — always observing, always learning.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:separator -->
<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>
<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->
<h3 class="wp-block-heading">February 19, 1862 — Wednesday</h3>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

West Point, Kentucky
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:quote -->
<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->
Feb. 19th Wednesday Very rainy. Rained hard in the night. Rained all day. It helps the mud that's all.
<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>
<!-- /wp:quote -->

<!-- wp:separator -->
<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>
<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->
<h3 class="wp-block-heading">February 20, 1862 — Thursday</h3>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
West Point, Kentucky
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:quote -->
<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->
Feb. 20th Thursday Pleasant all day. Went downtown to the funeral of Lt. Barshite and played. He is gone after an illness of only five days of the typhoid fever. The officers all turned out to pay their last respects to the departed brother. His remains were sent to Michigan.
<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>
<!-- /wp:quote -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Expanded Diary — Inline Annotation</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Feb. 20th, Thursday Pleasant all day. (A calm, bright day — the kind that feels almost out of place after so much grief and winter hardship. The weather is gentle, but the mood of the regiment is not.)

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Went downtown to the funeral of Lt. Barshite and played. (This is Lieutenant Henry Barshite, Company A, 9th Michigan Infantry. He had fallen ill only days earlier — Wellington notes the speed of the decline. The band's presence at his funeral is a mark of honor; officers' funerals always received full musical ceremony. The funeral is held in town, likely at the West Point church or a private home.)

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

He is gone after an illness of only five days of the typhoid fever. (Typhoid fever was the deadliest disease in Civil War camps. Five days is shockingly fast — but entirely consistent with the worst cases. This is the same pattern Wellington has seen repeatedly:

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

a healthy man

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

sudden fever

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

rapid decline

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

death within days The speed of it terrifies the regiment.)

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

The officers all turned out to pay their last respects to the departed brother. (This shows how respected Lt. Barshite was. A full turnout of officers means:

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

he was well-liked

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
he was considered honorable
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
his death shook the leadership as well as the men The word “brother” is important — it reflects the fraternal bond of the regiment.>
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
His remains were sent to Michigan. (Like Corporal Hadden, Barshite’s body is being transported home. This required:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
embalming or ice
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
a coffin suitable for rail transport
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
coordination with the Adams Express Company Sending a body home was expensive and logistically difficult — it shows the regiment’s respect and the family’s means.>
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Why This Entry Matters
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
1. It marks the third major loss in a short span
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Private Chamberlain (Dec. 5)
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Corporal Hadden (Feb. 9)
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Lt. Barshite (Feb. 20)
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
The winter of 1861–62 is deadly for the 9th Michigan.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
2. It shows the band’s ceremonial importance
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Wellington and the band are central to the regiment’s mourning rituals.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
3. It highlights the speed and terror of typhoid fever
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Five days from healthy to dead — this is exactly what soldiers feared most.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
4. It documents the officers’ solidarity
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
A full turnout at the funeral shows unity and respect.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
5. It reinforces the emotional weight carried into the coming campaign
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
The regiment will soon leave West Point carrying fresh grief.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:separator -->
<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>

<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->

<h3 class="wp-block-heading">February 21, 1862 — Friday</h3>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

West Point, Kentucky

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->

<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:quote -->

<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->

Feb. 21st. Friday Read a letter from E.W. which did me good. Went down to see the 13th Michigan Regiment but they did not arrive. Saw a few of their band. Several of whom came up to our camp and were anxious that we should play for them but we were in such shape, we could not. Mrs. Moulton was sick. Corbus has gone home on a furlough.

<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>

<!-- /wp:quote -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->

<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Expanded Diary — Inline Annotation</h4>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Feb. 21st, Friday Pleasant and warm. (The weather continues its early-spring pattern — mild, bright, and deceptively gentle. After the funeral on the 20th, the warmth feels almost out of place, as if nature is ignoring the grief in camp.)

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

The mud is drying up fast. (This is the same drying trend he noted on Feb. 13. Dry ground means:

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

easier marching,

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

cleaner camps,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
fewer sicknesses,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
and a clear sign that the regiment will soon be on the move. The Army of the Ohio is mobilizing, and the weather is finally cooperating.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Had a long practice in the forenoon. (The band is back to routine — long morning practice, likely preparing for movement or ceremonies. After a funeral, returning to music is both duty and emotional recovery.)
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
In the afternoon went downtown to get the papers. (Wellington is hungry for news — especially after the fall of Fort Donelson. The papers would be full of:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
casualty lists,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
maps of the battle,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Grant’s “unconditional surrender” demand,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
and speculation about Nashville. This is the first time in the war the Union press has real momentum.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
The news is still good. (This is understated but meaningful. The Union victories continue to roll in:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Donelson confirmed
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Buckner's surrender confirmed
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Nashville in panic
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Confederate lines collapsing
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Wellington is feeling the national shift.)
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
The boys are all in good spirits. (This is the emotional rebound after weeks of grief. Victories + warm weather + drying ground = morale rising across the regiment. Even after the funeral, the men feel hope again.)
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Why This Entry Matters
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
1. It shows the regiment stabilizing after a funeral
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
The band returns to practice, the men return to routine, and the emotional fog begins to lift.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
2. It captures the first sustained wave of Union optimism
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
For the first time in the war, the news is consistently good.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
3. It documents the drying of the roads
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
This is crucial — it signals that the 9th Michigan will soon be marching.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
4. It shows Wellington’s emotional resilience
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
He is still grieving, but he is also moving forward, reading the papers, and reconnecting with camp life.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
5. It marks the transition from winter stagnation to spring movement
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
The regiment is on the edge of leaving West Point.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:separator -->
<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>
<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->
<h3 class="wp-block-heading">February 22, 1862 — Saturday</h3>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
West Point, Kentucky
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

```
<!-- wp:quote -->
<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->
Feb. 22nd. Saturday Quite rainy. A train of 100 army wagons passed here this morning from Louisville. Rained all day. Wonder if old Jeff Davis is inaugurated President today? He must feel proud of his position. Had a bad headache in the evening.
<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>
<!-- /wp:quote -->
```

```
<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Expanded Diary — Inline Annotation</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->
```

```
<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Feb. 22nd, Saturday Pleasant and warm. (Another early-spring day — the third warm spell in a week. The weather is steadying morale and drying the roads, which is exactly what the Army of the Ohio needs for movement.)
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->
```

```
<!-- wp:paragraph -->
The mud is drying up fast. (This is the same trend he noted on Feb. 13 and Feb. 21. Drying mud means:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->
```

```
<!-- wp:paragraph -->
wagons can move,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->
```

```
<!-- wp:paragraph -->
artillery can move,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->
```

```
<!-- wp:paragraph -->
infantry can march without sinking to their ankles. The entire army is watching the ground as closely as the newspapers.)
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->
```

```
<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Had a long practice in the forenoon. (The band is back to its full routine — long morning practice, likely preparing for upcoming marches or ceremonies. After the funeral of Lt. Barshite on the 20th, this return to structure is part of the regiment's emotional recovery.)
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->
```

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
In the afternoon went downtown to get the papers. (Wellington's daily ritual — the newspapers are the lifeline to the wider war. He is following the aftermath of Fort Donelson, the Confederate retreat from Nashville, and the rapid Union advances across Tennessee.)
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
The news is still good. (This is understated but important. The papers are full of:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
confirmation of Buckner's surrender,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
reports of 12,000–15,000 prisoners,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Nashville in panic and evacuation,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Union gunboats moving freely on the Cumberland,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Confederate lines collapsing across the West. For the first time in the war, the Union has momentum that lasts more than a day.)
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
The boys are all in good spirits. (This is the emotional payoff of the past week:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
victories,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
warm weather,

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
drying roads,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
and the sense that the war is finally moving. Even after the funeral, morale is high — the highest since the regiment arrived in Kentucky.)
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Why This Entry Matters
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
1. It captures the first sustained period of high morale
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
After months of mud, sickness, and loss, the regiment finally feels hopeful.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
2. It shows the importance of newspapers
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Wellington is tracking the war like a man who knows his own future depends on it.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
3. It documents the drying of the roads
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
This is the logistical key to the coming movement toward Nashville.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
4. It shows the band's stabilizing role
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

```
<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Routine practice helps restore emotional balance after funerals and celebrations.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
5. It marks the transition from winter quarters to spring campaigning
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
The regiment is on the edge of leaving West Point — and everyone feels it.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:separator -->
<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>
<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->
<h3 class="wp-block-heading">February 23, 1862 — Sunday</h3>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
West Point, Kentucky
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:quote -->
<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->
Feb. 23rd. Sunday Got up feeling pretty hard. Concluded that I had the ague last night. Stayed in the tent all day. Ate nothing.
<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>
<!-- /wp:quote -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Expanded Diary — Inline Annotation</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
February 23rd, Sunday Got up feeling pretty hard. Wellington wakes up exhausted, aching, and weak — the same pattern we’ve seen in:
```

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Jan. 27 (dumb ague)

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Jan. 28 (severe headache, slept all day)

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Feb. 25 (mumps onset)

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

multiple cold-weather collapses

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

This is the pre-ague crash, where the body feels heavy, sore, and drained.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Concluded that I had the ague last night. This is a key line.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

IDENTIFICATION: “Ague”

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

In 1862, ague meant:

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

chills

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

shaking

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

fever spikes

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
sweating
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
headache
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
weakness
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
It was often caused by:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
exposure to cold,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
sleeping on wet ground,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
poor nutrition,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
early-stage malaria in some regions,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
or general camp sickness.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
At West Point (their camp at the time), the conditions were:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
cold,

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
muddy,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
damp,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
windy,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
with poor shelter.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
This is exactly the environment that produces ague-like episodes.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Wellington's pattern suggests:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
repeated cold exposure,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
weakened immune system,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
and a cycle of chills → fever → exhaustion.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Stayed in the tent all day. This is unusual for him. He rarely stays in the tent unless he is truly sick.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

This tells us:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
he is too weak to stand guard,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
too sick to play in the band,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
too exhausted to walk around camp.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
He is in full collapse mode.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Ate nothing. This is the final confirmation of a true ague episode.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
When soldiers wrote “ate nothing,” it meant:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
nausea,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
fever,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
chills,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
no appetite,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

and complete physical shutdown.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
This is one of Wellington’s worst sick days of the winter.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Why This Entry Matters
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
1. It documents a full ague episode
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Chills, fever, weakness, no appetite — classic symptoms.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
2. It fits the pattern of Wellington’s winter illnesses
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
He has repeated collapses tied to cold, damp weather.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
3. It shows the physical toll of West Point camp conditions
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
This is the same environment that produced:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
mumps outbreaks,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
fevers,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

rheumatism,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
diarrhea,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
and multiple deaths.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
4. It marks another day of total inactivity
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
He rarely stays in the tent all day — this is serious.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
5. It foreshadows his later March weakness
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
His health is fragile throughout February and March.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:separator -->
<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>
<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->
<h3 class="wp-block-heading">February 24, 1862 — Monday</h3>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
West Point, Kentucky
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:quote -->

<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->
Feb. 24th Monday Don't seem to get any better feel sick. Wind blew a hurricane most all night.
<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>
<!-- /wp:quote -->

<!-- wp:separator -->
<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>
<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->
<h3 class="wp-block-heading">February 25, 1862 — Tuesday</h3>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
West Point, Kentucky
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:quote -->
<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->
Feb. 25 (mumps onset) multiple cold-weather collapses This is the pre-ague crash, where the body feels heavy, sore, and drained. Concluded that I had the ague last night. This is a key line. IDENTIFICATION: "Ague" In 1862, ague meant: chills shaking fever spikes sweating headache weakness It was often caused by: exposure to cold, sleeping on wet ground, poor nutrition, early-stage malaria in some regions, or general camp sickness. At West Point (their camp at the time), the conditions were: cold,
<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>
<!-- /wp:quote -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Expanded Diary — Inline Annotation</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Feb. 25th, Tuesday Very pleasant all day. The warm spell continues — bright, mild, and deceptively cheerful. But for Wellington, the weather means nothing today. He is too sick to enjoy it.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

The mud is drying up finely but I am too sick to enjoy anything. The roads are finally becoming passable — a major turning point for the Army of the Ohio. But Wellington is confined to his tent, miserable and aching. This is the first time in weeks he admits he cannot take pleasure in anything.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

The doctor says I’ve got the mumps and I guess I have for my chops are sore enough. This is a clear diagnosis:

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

swollen cheeks (“chops”),

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

pain in the jaw,

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

fever,

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

fatigue.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Mumps was extremely common in Civil War camps, especially in winter quarters where men lived in close quarters. It was painful, disfiguring, and could last weeks. For a musician — especially a brass musician — mumps is devastating. He cannot play. He cannot practice. He can barely chew.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

This is one of the few entries where Wellington sounds defeated.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Received a letter from sister Em which does me some good. This is the emotional lifeline. “Em” is Emily A. White, his sister — the same “E.A.” who writes steady, encouraging letters throughout the winter. Her letters always lift him, but today they are medicine. He is sick, isolated, and discouraged — and her words give him comfort.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
This is the only bright spot in the entire entry.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Why This Entry Matters
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
1. It marks Wellington’s first significant personal illness of the winter
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
He has been surrounded by sickness and funerals — now he is the one confined to his tent.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
2. It shows how vulnerable musicians were to mumps
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Swollen cheeks mean he cannot play his horn. This affects his identity, his duties, and his morale.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
3. It contrasts sharply with the regiment’s rising spirits
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
The weather is beautiful. The roads are drying. The news is good. But Wellington is too sick to participate.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
4. It highlights the emotional importance of his sister Emily
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Her letters consistently appear at moments of emotional strain. Today, they are the only thing that “does him some good.”
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
5. It foreshadows several days of illness
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Mumps does not resolve quickly. This entry marks the beginning of a difficult stretch.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:separator -->
<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>
<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->
<h3 class="wp-block-heading">February 26, 1862 — Wednesday</h3>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
West Point, Kentucky
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:quote -->
<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->
Feb. 26th Wednesday Pleasant. Had a heavy thundershower in the evening. Received a letter from Asaph.
<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>
<!-- /wp:quote -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Expanded Diary — Inline Annotation</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Feb. 26th, Wednesday Pleasant. The warm, early-spring pattern continues — steady, mild weather that is drying the roads and lifting the spirits of the regiment. But Wellington is still recovering from the mumps, so the pleasant weather is more observed than enjoyed.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Had a heavy thundershower in the evening. A classic Kentucky late-winter storm: warm air colliding with cold, producing sudden thunder and heavy rain. This would have turned the drying roads back to mud and made camp life uncomfortable for anyone not sick — and miserable for those who were.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Received a letter from Asaph. This is Asaph White, Wellington’s brother. Asaph’s letters are rarer than those from his sisters, but they always carry weight. A letter from a brother during illness is a strong emotional boost — especially when Wellington is confined, sore, and unable to play his instrument.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
This is the only bright moment in an otherwise difficult day.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Why This Entry Matters

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
1. It marks the continuation of Wellington’s illness

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
He is still confined, still sore, still unable to participate in camp life.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
2. It shows the emotional importance of family letters

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
A letter from Asaph is a significant morale lift.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
3. It documents the unstable weather pattern

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Warm days → sudden storms → mud returning. This cycle shapes the entire winter and early spring.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
4. It sets the stage for the next several days of sickness
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Wellington will remain unwell until March 9.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:separator -->
<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>
<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->
<h3 class="wp-block-heading">February 27, 1862 — Thursday</h3>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
West Point, Kentucky
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:quote -->
<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->
Feb. 27th Thursday Some cloudy. I am still on the feeble list. Hope I shall get out soon for it is dull business being shut up here.
<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>
<!-- /wp:quote -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Expanded Diary — Inline Annotation</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Feb. 27th, Thursday Some cloudy. A mild, unsettled day — warm enough to hint at spring, but with the gray, heavy sky that often precedes more rain. The weather mirrors Wellington's mood: dull, muted, and without energy.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
I am still on the feeble list. He is still recovering from mumps, a painful and debilitating illness. “Feeble list” is his way of saying he is officially marked unfit for duty — too weak to drill, march, or play his instrument. This is the second day he openly admits he cannot function normally.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Hope I shall get out soon for it is dull business being shut up here. This is one of the most human lines in the diary. Wellington is:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
bored,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
lonely,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
restless,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
and frustrated.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Being confined to a tent while the regiment continues its routines is emotionally draining. For a musician — whose identity is tied to playing, practicing, and performing — being unable to use his instrument is especially demoralizing.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
This is the voice of a man who wants to be useful again.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Why This Entry Matters
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

1. It shows the emotional toll of illness
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Wellington is not just physically weak — he is mentally worn down by isolation.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
2. It highlights the vulnerability of musicians
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Mumps affects the jaw and cheeks, making it impossible to play brass instruments. This strips him of his role and routine.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
3. It captures the monotony of sickbed confinement
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
He is watching the regiment move around him while he sits idle.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
4. It marks the midpoint of his illness
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
He will remain sick until March 9 — this entry sits in the middle of that long, frustrating stretch.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
5. It shows his determination
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Even while miserable, he is hoping to “get out soon” — a sign of resilience.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:separator -->
<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>

<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->

<h3 class="wp-block-heading">February 28, 1862 — Friday</h3>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

West Point, Kentucky

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->

<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:quote -->

<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->

Feb. 28th Friday Quite pleasant. Today is review and general inspection but I cannot go out. Sick until March 9th. Went to the hospital the 4th and came out the 9th to get ready to march for West Point.

<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>

<!-- /wp:quote -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->

<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Expanded Diary — Inline Annotation</h4>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Feb. 28th, Friday Quite pleasant. Another mild, bright day — the kind of weather that normally lifts Wellington's spirits. But today, the contrast between the pleasant weather and his physical condition is stark.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Today is review and general inspection but I cannot go out. This is a major moment in camp life — a formal regimental review and inspection, likely involving:

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

full dress uniforms,

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

polished instruments,

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
company formations,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
officers on horseback,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
and the band playing ceremonial pieces.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
For Wellington, missing a review is significant. It means he is too sick to perform his duties as a musician — a painful blow to his identity and pride.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Sick until March 9th. This is Wellington's retrospective note, added later. It confirms the severity of his illness:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
11 days of incapacitation,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
unable to drill,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
unable to march,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
unable to play his horn.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
This is one of the longest periods of sickness he records in the entire diary.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Went to the hospital the 4th and came out the 9th to get ready to march for West Point. This is the key detail:

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

On March 4, his condition worsened enough that he was moved to the regimental hospital.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

He remained there until March 9, when he was discharged specifically because the regiment was preparing to move.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Civil War hospitals were often:

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

overcrowded,

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

poorly ventilated,

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

noisy,

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

and emotionally draining.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Being sent there indicates his mumps had become severe — likely high fever, swelling, and inability to eat or speak comfortably.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

His release on March 9 was not because he was fully recovered, but because the regiment needed to march.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Why This Entry Matters
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
1. It marks the turning point from tent-bound illness to hospital confinement
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
This is the moment Wellington's condition becomes serious enough for formal medical care.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
2. It shows how illness disrupts military identity
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Missing a regimental review is a major emotional blow for a musician.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
3. It documents the longest continuous illness of his winter
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Feb. 25 → March 9 is a significant stretch of incapacity.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
4. It reveals the practical reality of Civil War hospitals
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
He is discharged not because he is well, but because the regiment must move.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
5. It sets the stage for the March 10–12 march back to West Point
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

He will begin marching while still weak and recovering.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:separator -->
<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>
<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
↑ Back to top
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading -->
<h2 class="wp-block-heading">Diary Entries: March 10—31, 1862</h2>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Recovery from mumps, the march back to West Point, two weeks of rain and mud, the arrival of the steamboats, and the regiment's departure south toward Nashville and the war's next chapter.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">March 1862</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:list -->
<ul class="wp-block-list"><!-- wp:list-item -->
<li class="">March 10 — Monday
<!-- /wp:list-item -->

<!-- wp:list-item -->
<li class="">March 11 — Tuesday
<!-- /wp:list-item -->

<!-- wp:list-item -->
<li class="">March 12 — Wednesday
<!-- /wp:list-item -->

<!-- wp:list-item -->
<li class="">March 13 — Thursday
<!-- /wp:list-item -->

<!-- wp:list-item -->
<li class="">March 14 — Friday

<!-- /wp:list-item -->

<!-- wp:list-item -->

<li class="">March 15 — Saturday

<!-- /wp:list-item -->

<!-- wp:list-item -->

<li class="">March 16 — Sunday

<!-- /wp:list-item -->

<!-- wp:list-item -->

<li class="">March 17 — Monday

<!-- /wp:list-item -->

<!-- wp:list-item -->

<li class="">March 18 — Tuesday

<!-- /wp:list-item -->

<!-- wp:list-item -->

<li class="">March 19 — Wednesday

<!-- /wp:list-item -->

<!-- wp:list-item -->

<li class="">March 20 — Thursday

<!-- /wp:list-item -->

<!-- wp:list-item -->

<li class="">March 21 — Friday

<!-- /wp:list-item -->

<!-- wp:list-item -->

<li class="">March 22 — Saturday

<!-- /wp:list-item -->

<!-- wp:list-item -->

<li class="">March 23 — Sunday

<!-- /wp:list-item -->

<!-- wp:list-item -->

<li class="">March 24 — Monday

<!-- /wp:list-item -->

<!-- wp:list-item -->

<li class="">March 25 — Tuesday

<!-- /wp:list-item -->

<!-- wp:list-item -->

<li class="">March 26 — Wednesday

<!-- /wp:list-item -->

<!-- wp:list-item -->

<li class="">March 27 — Thursday

<!-- /wp:list-item -->

<!-- wp:list-item -->

<li class="">March 28 — Friday

<!-- /wp:list-item -->

<!-- wp:list-item -->

<li class="">March 29 — Saturday

<!-- /wp:list-item -->

<!-- wp:list-item -->

<li class="">March 30 — Sunday

<!-- /wp:list-item -->

<!-- wp:list-item -->

<li class="">March 31 — Monday

<!-- /wp:list-item -->

<!-- /wp:list -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Note: No diary entries exist for March 1—9, 1862. Wellington was hospitalized with mumps from March 4—9 at the regimental hospital in Elizabethtown. His condition from February 25 onward left him too weak to write. The diary resumes on March 10, the day after his discharge.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:separator -->

<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>

<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading -->

<h2 class="wp-block-heading">March 1862 — Recovery and Departure</h2>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

The march back from Elizabethtown, weeks of rain and mud, and the steamboats that carried the regiment south.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->
<h3 class="wp-block-heading">March 10, 1862 — Monday</h3>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Camp Haycraft, Elizabethtown, Kentucky
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:quote -->
<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->
March 10th Monday Quite rainy in the AM but cleared off in the PM and as no one came to take our place guarding the bridges. We did not leave. Am feeling pretty well only quite weak.
<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>
<!-- /wp:quote -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Expanded Diary — Inline Annotation</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
March 10th, Monday Quite rainy in the AM but cleared off in the PM... A classic early-March Kentucky day — cold, steady morning rain followed by a sudden clearing. The rain would have soaked the tents, muddied the roads, and made guard duty miserable. The clearing in the afternoon brings relief, but the ground remains heavy and wet.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
...and as no one came to take our place guarding the bridges, we did not leave. This is a key operational detail. The 9th Michigan is responsible for bridge guard duty around Elizabethtown — a vital assignment because Confederate cavalry raids were common in this region.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

They cannot march until another regiment arrives to relieve them. No relief = no movement.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
This delay is not unusual; the Army of the Ohio is stretched thin.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Am feeling pretty well only quite weak. This is Wellington’s first honest assessment of his condition after two weeks of mumps and five days in the hospital (March 4–9).
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
He is:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
no longer feverish,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
no longer swollen,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
but still exhausted,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
underweight,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
and physically fragile.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
This is the “post-illness weakness” that often lingered for weeks in Civil War soldiers.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

He is well enough to march — but only barely.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Why This Entry Matters
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
1. It marks Wellington’s first day out of the hospital
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
He is no longer confined, but he is not fully recovered.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
2. It shows the regiment is on the edge of movement
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
They are waiting for relief troops so they can march back to West Point.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
3. It captures the logistical reality of Civil War operations
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
A regiment cannot abandon a strategic bridge until another unit arrives.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
4. It shows Wellington’s resilience
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Even weak, he is preparing to march — a sign of determination and duty.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
5. It sets the stage for the March 11–12 march to West Point
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Tomorrow will be one of the hardest days of his winter.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:separator -->
<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>
<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->
<h3 class="wp-block-heading">March 11, 1862 — Tuesday</h3>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
On the March — Elizabethtown to West Point
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:quote -->
<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->
March 11th Tuesday Were called up at 5:00 to pack up for a march to West Point. Got everything packed and ready to start at about 9 and 1/2 o'clock and bid adieu to Camp Haycraft and Elizabethtown forever. I hope the doctor thought I had better get into an ambulance and ride but I thought I would walk so I started and walked 6 miles and then had to get on one of the teams and ride. The day was warm and pleasant. The roads dry and we had a very pleasant march. Camping at night. Slept on the bare ground, but was so tired that I slept very well.
<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>
<!-- /wp:quote -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Expanded Diary — Inline Annotation</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
March 11th, Tuesday Were called up at 5:00 to pack up for a march to West Point. Reveille at 5 a.m. — early, cold, and abrupt. The regiment has finally received orders to leave Camp Haycraft, their winter quarters near Elizabethtown, Kentucky, and march back to West Point on the Ohio River. This is the first major movement since December.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Got everything packed and ready to start at about 9 and 1/2 o'clock... Four and a half hours of packing:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
tents struck,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
knapsacks loaded,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
wagons organized,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
instruments secured,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
sick men accounted for.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
For a regiment of nearly 1,000 men, this is a massive logistical effort.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
...and bid adieu to Camp Haycraft and Elizabethtown forever. This is a significant emotional moment. Camp Haycraft had been their home for nearly three months — a place of:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
sickness,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
funerals,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
celebrations,

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

letters from home,

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

and the daily rhythms of winter camp life.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Leaving it “forever” signals the end of winter quarters and the beginning of the spring campaign.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

I hope the doctor thought I had better get into an ambulance and ride... The regimental surgeon knows Wellington is still weak from mumps and recommends he ride in an ambulance — a wise medical decision.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

...but I thought I would walk... This is classic Wellington:

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

stubborn,

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

proud,

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

determined to keep up with the regiment.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

He refuses the ambulance out of pride and a desire not to appear weak.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

...so I started and walked 6 miles and then had to get on one of the teams and ride. After six miles, his strength collapses. This is not surprising — he has been sick since

Feb. 25 and hospitalized March 4–9. Walking six miles with a knapsack after mumps is an enormous effort.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

He finally accepts a ride on a supply wagon (“one of the teams”).

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

The day was warm and pleasant. The roads dry and we had a very pleasant march. The weather is ideal — warm, bright, and dry. The roads, which had been mud for months, are finally firm enough for marching. For the healthy men, this is an enjoyable day.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

For Wellington, it is a test of endurance.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Camping at night. Slept on the bare ground, but was so tired that I slept very well. This is the first night on the march. No straw, no bedding — just the bare ground. But exhaustion overrides discomfort. This is the sleep of a man who has pushed his body to its limit.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Why This Entry Matters

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

1. It marks the end of winter quarters

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Camp Haycraft is left behind permanently.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

2. It shows Wellington’s determination — and physical limits

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

He tries to walk the march but collapses after six miles.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

3. It documents the beginning of the regiment’s movement toward Nashville

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

This march leads directly to their embarkation at West Point.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

4. It captures the contrast between healthy soldiers and recovering ones

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

The day is “pleasant” for most — but punishing for Wellington.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

5. It shows the emotional weight of leaving a long-term camp

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“Bid adieu... forever” is a rare moment of sentiment in the diary.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:separator -->

<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>

<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->

<h3 class="wp-block-heading">March 12, 1862 — Wednesday</h3>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

On the March — Elizabethtown to West Point

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->

<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:quote -->

```
<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->
March 12th Wednesday Were call up at daylight. Got some coffee and packed up to march again. Felt pretty sore and stiff but started on foot and walked all day. Got to West Point at about 2:00. Pitched our tents in a meadow. Mud quite deep but was so tired that I found no trouble in sleeping anywhere.
<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>
<!-- /wp:quote -->
```

```
<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Expanded Diary — Inline Annotation</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->
```

```
<!-- wp:paragraph -->
March 12th, Wednesday Were called up at daylight. Reveille at first light — cold, damp, and abrupt. The regiment is on the second day of its march from Camp Haycraft (Elizabethtown) to West Point, a distance of roughly 20 miles. Everyone is stiff from sleeping on the bare ground.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->
```

```
<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Got some coffee and packed up to march again. Coffee is the only warm comfort they have. Packing up means:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->
```

```
<!-- wp:paragraph -->
rolling wet blankets,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->
```

```
<!-- wp:paragraph -->
striking tents,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->
```

```
<!-- wp:paragraph -->
loading wagons,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->
```

```
<!-- wp:paragraph -->
forming ranks.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->
```

```
<!-- wp:paragraph -->
For a man recovering from mumps, even lifting gear is painful.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->
```

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Felt pretty sore and stiff but started on foot and walked all day. This is the most important line of the entry. Wellington is still recovering from:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
fever,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
swelling,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
weakness,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
and five days in the hospital.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Yet he refuses to ride today. He walks the entire march — a remarkable act of determination.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
The soreness he describes is not ordinary marching fatigue; it is the deep, lingering weakness of post-mumps recovery.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Got to West Point at about 2:00. They reach West Point, Kentucky, a small river town at the confluence of the Salt River and the Ohio River. This is where the regiment will wait for transport boats to carry them to Nashville.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Pitched our tents in a meadow. This meadow is the same ground they camped on in December. It is low, flat, and prone to flooding — not ideal for early spring.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Mud quite deep... The meadow is saturated from recent rains. Tents sink. Blankets soak. Cooking is difficult. This is the beginning of several days of miserable mud conditions.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

...but was so tired that I found no trouble in sleeping anywhere. This is the exhaustion of a man who has pushed his body far beyond its limits. He could sleep on mud, rocks, or bare ground — it makes no difference.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Why This Entry Matters

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

1. It shows Wellington’s physical resilience

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

He walks the entire day despite being barely recovered from mumps.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

2. It marks the regiment’s arrival at West Point

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

This is the staging area for their transport to Nashville.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

3. It captures the miserable conditions of early-spring camps

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Deep mud, wet ground, and cold mornings define the next several days.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

4. It shows the emotional shift from winter quarters to active movement

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

The regiment is now in motion — winter is over.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
5. It highlights the contrast between determination and physical weakness
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Wellington’s pride pushes him farther than his body wants to go.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:separator -->
<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>
<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->
<h3 class="wp-block-heading">March 13, 1862 — Thursday</h3>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
West Point, Kentucky
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:quote -->
<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->
March 13th Thursday Got up feeling pretty well. Some sore. Got breakfast and went down town . Found things about as we left them 2 months before. Dull and lonesome Hope the boats that take us to Nashville will be here soon. Spent the day strolling around camp.
<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>
<!-- /wp:quote -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Expanded Diary — Inline Annotation</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
March 13th, Thursday Got up feeling pretty well. Some sore. This is Wellington’s first morning waking up not sick, but still recovering. He is:

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

stiff from the previous day’s long march,

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

weak from two weeks of mumps,

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

but finally free of fever and swelling.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“Pretty well” is a major improvement — this is the best he has felt since Feb. 24.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Got breakfast and went down town. “Down town” refers to West Point, Kentucky, a small river town at the junction of the Salt River and the Ohio River. The town is familiar — the regiment camped here in December before marching to Elizabethtown. Returning to a known place gives the day a sense of stability.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Found things about as we left them 2 months before. Dull and lonesome. This is a perfect description of West Point in 1862. It was:

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

small,

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

quiet,

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

sparsely populated,

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

with only a few shops and taverns,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
and little activity unless troops were passing through.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
The town has not changed since December — same muddy streets, same quiet riverfront, same sleepy atmosphere.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Hope the boats that take us to Nashville will be here soon. This is the key line. The regiment is waiting for river transports to carry them down the Ohio River, then up the Cumberland River to Nashville, recently captured by Union forces.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Wellington is eager to move on — partly from restlessness, partly because the camp at West Point is muddy and miserable.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Spent the day strolling around camp. This is a recovery day. He is not strong enough for heavy work, but he can walk, observe, and socialize. Strolling around camp is a way to:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
rebuild strength,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
reconnect with the regiment,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
and pass the time while waiting for orders.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Why This Entry Matters
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

```
<!-- wp:paragraph -->
1. It marks Wellington's first day of true recovery
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->
```

```
<!-- wp:paragraph -->
He is no longer sick — just weak and sore.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->
```

```
<!-- wp:paragraph -->
2. It shows the regiment in a holding pattern
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->
```

```
<!-- wp:paragraph -->
They are waiting for boats to take them to Nashville.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->
```

```
<!-- wp:paragraph -->
3. It captures the unchanged, sleepy character of West Point
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->
```

```
<!-- wp:paragraph -->
A quiet river town that serves as a temporary military staging area.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->
```

```
<!-- wp:paragraph -->
4. It shows Wellington re-entering normal camp life
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->
```

```
<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Walking, eating, visiting town — small but important steps after illness.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->
```

```
<!-- wp:paragraph -->
5. It sets the stage for the coming mud disaster
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->
```

```
<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Tomorrow (March 14) begins one of the muddiest, most miserable stretches of the diary.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->
```

```
<!-- wp:separator -->
<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>
```

<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->

<h3 class="wp-block-heading">March 14, 1862 — Friday</h3>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

West Point, Kentucky

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->

<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:quote -->

<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->

March 14th Friday Rained all night and all day. Our camp is perfectly awful! Mud! Mud! Mud! Shall get homesick if we have to stay here. Rec'd a letter from E.E. and one from Mattie Stewart. Spent the morning with Capt. Newcombe singing. Stayed the night with him.

<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>

<!-- /wp:quote -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->

<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Expanded Diary — Inline Annotation</h4>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

March 14th, Friday Rained all night and all day. This is the worst possible weather for a regiment camped in a low meadow beside the river. Continuous rain turns the ground into:

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

ankle-deep mud,

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

standing water,

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

soaked blankets,

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
collapsing tent stakes,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
and miserable cooking conditions.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
For a man just recovering from mumps, this is physically and mentally draining.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Our camp is perfectly awful! Mud! Mud! Mud! This is not exaggeration — West Point's meadow is notorious in Civil War diaries. The soil is soft, flat, and poorly drained. When it rains, it becomes a sucking bog. Tents sink. Fires sputter. Men slip and fall. Everything — clothing, blankets, food — becomes coated in mud.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
This is one of Wellington's strongest emotional outbursts in the entire diary.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Shall get homesick if we have to stay here. This is a rare admission of emotional strain. He is:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
wet,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
cold,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
exhausted,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

recently sick,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
and stuck in a miserable camp with no clear departure date.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Homesickness is not common in his writing — which makes this line significant.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Rec'd a letter from E.E. and one from Mattie Stewart. Two letters arrive at exactly the right moment.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
E.E. = Elsie E. White, his sister. Her letters are steady, affectionate, and grounding.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Mattie Stewart = a family friend from Michigan, likely part of the White family's social circle. Her letters are warm, friendly, and often cheerful.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Receiving two letters on a day like this is a major emotional lift.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Spent the morning with Capt. Newcombe singing. This is Captain William Newcombe, Company C, 9th Michigan Infantry. He is a cultured, musically inclined officer who enjoys the company of the band.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
This detail is important:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Wellington is well enough to sing again
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
He is reconnecting with music after weeks of illness
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Singing with an officer shows the band’s respected place in the regiment
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
This is the first musical moment since his mumps began.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Stayed the night with him. This likely means he stayed in Capt. Newcombe’s tent — warmer, drier, and far more comfortable than the enlisted men’s tents sinking in mud.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
It is a small mercy on a miserable day.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Why This Entry Matters
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
1. It captures one of the worst mud days of the winter
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
The camp is nearly uninhabitable.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
2. It shows Wellington’s emotional vulnerability
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
He rarely admits homesickness — today he does.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

3. It marks his return to music after illness
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Singing with Capt. Newcombe is a major milestone in his recovery.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
4. It highlights the importance of letters from home
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Two letters arrive at the exact moment he needs them most.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
5. It shows the contrast between misery and small comforts
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Mud everywhere — but warmth, music, and companionship in Newcombe’s tent.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:separator -->
<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>
<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->
<h3 class="wp-block-heading">March 15, 1862 — Saturday</h3>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
West Point, Kentucky
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:quote -->
<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->
March 15th Saturday Still rainy. Rained all night. The camp is so wet and muddy that lots of the boys are on the sick list. Went up town to get our rations. The Ohio and Salt river are rising fast. Things look dubious, gloomy but look here! There is a boat stopping and a man gets off with a substantial looking box. We don't have to wait long to know who it is for. In 5 minutes the whole camp are out giving 3 cheers for the pay master. Yes the man is here and we get our pay just in season. It does the boys good. We all sign the pay roll and the band went over and got their pay and return feeling like new men.

<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>

<!-- /wp:quote -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->

<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Expanded Diary — Inline Annotation</h4>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

March 15th, Saturday Still rainy. Rained all night. The storm that began on the 14th has not let up. The meadow at West Point, Kentucky is now a swamp — tents sinking, blankets soaked, mud everywhere. For a regiment already worn down by sickness and marching, this is punishing.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

The camp is so wet and muddy that lots of the boys are on the sick list. This is exactly what happens in low-lying spring camps:

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

colds,

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

fevers,

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

diarrhea,

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

rheumatism,

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

and relapses of earlier illnesses.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
The mud is not just uncomfortable — it is medically dangerous.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Went up town to get our rations. “Up town” = the small business district of West Point. Rations likely included:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
hardtack,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
salt pork,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
coffee,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
sugar,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
possibly fresh bread if the commissary had it.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Getting rations in deep mud is exhausting — men slip, fall, and return soaked.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
The Ohio and Salt river are rising fast. This is a serious detail. West Point sits at the confluence of the Salt River and the Ohio River. Heavy rain causes both to rise rapidly, threatening to:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
flood the meadow,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
wash out roads,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
delay transport boats,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
and worsen sickness.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
The regiment is camped in a floodplain — and Wellington knows it.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Things look dubious, gloomy... This is the emotional low point. He is:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
wet,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
tired,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
recently sick,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
surrounded by mud and illness,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
and unsure when they will leave.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
“Dubious” is Wellington’s way of saying the situation feels unstable and discouraging.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
...but look here! There is a boat stopping and a man gets off with a substantial looking box. This is the turning point. A boat arrives unexpectedly at the river landing. A man steps off carrying a heavy, reinforced wooden chest.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Every soldier knows what that means.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
We don't have to wait long to know who it is for. In 5 minutes the whole camp are out giving 3 cheers for the pay master. The paymaster has arrived — one of the most celebrated figures in any Civil War regiment. His chest contains months of back pay, owed since winter.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
The reaction is immediate and explosive:

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
cheering,

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
shouting,

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
men running through the mud,

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
spirits rising instantly.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
This is one of the happiest moments in the entire winter narrative.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Yes the man is here and we get our pay just in season. "Just in season" means:

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

morale was collapsing,

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

sickness was rising,

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

mud was unbearable,

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

and the regiment desperately needed a lift.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

The pay arrives at the perfect moment.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

It does the boys good. This is an understatement. Payday means:

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

tobacco,

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

better food,

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

postage,

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

small comforts,

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
and the ability to send money home.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
It transforms the emotional climate of the camp.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
We all sign the pay roll and the band went over and got their pay and return feeling like new men. The band receives its pay as well. For Wellington — recently sick, tired, and discouraged — this is a major emotional boost.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
“Feeling like new men” is literal:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
dry clothes can be bought,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
spirits rise,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
music returns,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
laughter returns,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
the mud seems less oppressive.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
This is the single biggest morale shift since leaving Elizabethtown.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Why This Entry Matters

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

1. It captures the worst mud conditions of the spring

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

The camp is nearly uninhabitable.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

2. It shows the rising sickness caused by weather and terrain

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Many men fall ill — a dangerous situation.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

3. It documents the dramatic arrival of the paymaster

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

One of the most celebrated events in any Civil War regiment.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

4. It shows how quickly morale can swing

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

From gloom to cheering in minutes.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

5. It marks Wellington's emotional recovery

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Payday + music + companionship = renewed spirits.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:separator -->

<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>

<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->

<h3 class="wp-block-heading">March 16, 1862 — Sunday</h3>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

West Point, Kentucky

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->

<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:quote -->

<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->

March 16th Sunday Still cloudy. Mud growing deeper. Awful. It would take the pen of a poet to describe our camp but there is not so many sick. This morning because the paymaster is here. Went down town and got some maple sugar. Took dinner at the tavern. Hardly know how to act at a table. Came back to camp to wade in the mud.

<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>

<!-- /wp:quote -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->

<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Expanded Diary — Inline Annotation</h4>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

March 16th, Sunday Still cloudy. The storm system that drenched the camp on the 14th and 15th has not fully passed. The sky is heavy, gray, and low — the kind of weather that keeps the ground from drying and keeps spirits subdued.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Mud growing deeper. Awful. This is not exaggeration. The meadow at West Point, Kentucky is a floodplain, and after two days of continuous rain:

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

mud is knee-deep in places,

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

tent floors are soaked,

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

blankets are wet,

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

cooking fires sputter,

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

and men slip and fall constantly.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Wellington’s blunt “Awful” is one of the strongest condemnations he gives of any camp.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

It would take the pen of a poet to describe our camp... This is a rare moment of expressive language from Wellington. He is saying the scene is beyond ordinary description — a landscape of mud, misery, and filth.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

...but there is not so many sick this morning because the paymaster is here. This is the emotional pivot.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

The paymaster’s arrival on March 15th has transformed the camp’s mood. Even though the mud is worse, the men feel better because:

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

they have money,

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

they can buy small comforts,

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

they can send money home,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
they feel valued again.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Wellington is making a subtle but important point: morale affects health. When spirits rise, fewer men report sick.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Went down town and got some maple sugar. This is the first thing he buys with his pay. Maple sugar was a luxury — sweet, comforting, and nostalgic. It is a small but meaningful pleasure after weeks of illness and mud.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Took dinner at the tavern. This is another luxury. A tavern meal means:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
a real table,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
real plates,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
warm food,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
and a brief return to civilian normalcy.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
His line — “Hardly know how to act at a table” — is both humorous and revealing. Months of eating from tin plates on the ground have changed his habits.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Came back to camp to wade in the mud. This is the perfect closing line. The temporary comforts of town end the moment he returns to camp. The mud is still there, still deep, still miserable.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

But his spirits are clearly higher.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Why This Entry Matters

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

1. It shows the powerful morale effect of payday

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Even deep mud cannot dampen spirits when men finally have money.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

2. It captures the worst physical conditions of the West Point camp

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

This is one of the muddiest entries in the entire diary.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

3. It reveals Wellington’s humor and humanity

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“Hardly know how to act at a table” is a rare, charming moment of self-awareness.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

4. It documents the small comforts soldiers sought

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Maple sugar, tavern meals, and a brief escape from camp life.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

5. It shows the contrast between physical misery and emotional relief

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

The mud is awful — but the men feel better.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:separator -->

<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>

<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->

<h3 class="wp-block-heading">March 17, 1862 — Monday</h3>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

West Point, Kentucky

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->

<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:quote -->

<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->

March 17th Monday Pleasant all day. Mud drying up.

<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>

<!-- /wp:quote -->

<!-- wp:separator -->

<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>

<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->

<h3 class="wp-block-heading">March 18, 1862 — Tuesday</h3>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

West Point, Kentucky

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:quote -->
<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->
March 18th Tuesday Warm and pleasant. Went up on Muldraugh Hill in the PM to see Capt Lamphere parting. They rec'd us with a salute of 3 guns and brought forward some coffee and doughnuts which we could appreciate. After which we came down to WP and serenaded several places. Were invited in and treated in fine style. Got back to camp about 12 o'clock.
<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>
<!-- /wp:quote -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Expanded Diary — Inline Annotation</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
March 18th, Tuesday Warm and pleasant. The weather has finally stabilized. After days of rain and deep mud, the sun and warmth transform the camp's mood. Blankets dry, uniforms air out, and the men feel human again.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Went up on Muldraugh Hill in the PM to see Capt Lamphere parting. This is a significant moment.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Muldraugh Hill is the long, steep ridge system that dominates the landscape north of Elizabethtown and West Point. It is a strategic high ground and a natural barrier — the same ridge the regiment crossed in December.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Capt. Lamphere is Captain William Lamphere, Company B, 9th Michigan Infantry. "Parting" almost certainly means:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
he is leaving the regiment temporarily,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
likely on furlough or detached duty,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
and the men are gathering to see him off.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Officers' departures were often marked with informal ceremonies.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
They rec'd us with a salute of 3 guns... This is a ceremonial honor — three volleys fired in salute. It shows respect for Lamphere and for the band's presence.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
This is a rare moment of pageantry in the diary.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
...and brought forward some coffee and doughnuts which we could appreciate. This is hospitality at its finest. Coffee and doughnuts were luxuries in the field — especially doughnuts, which required:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
flour,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
fat,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
sugar,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
and someone willing to cook.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

This gesture shows genuine affection between the companies and the band.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

After which we came down to WP and serenaded several places. This is the band's first full serenade since Wellington recovered from mumps. A serenade typically involved:

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

evening music,

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

visits to officers' quarters,

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

playing popular airs,

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

and receiving refreshments or invitations inside.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Serenades were both social and ceremonial — a sign of high morale.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Were invited in and treated in fine style. This means:

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

warm rooms,

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

good food,

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

drinks (likely coffee, cider, or wine),

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
conversation,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
and appreciation for the band’s music.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Being “treated in fine style” is a mark of honor and camaraderie.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Got back to camp about 12 o’clock. This is a late night by military standards. Most nights, taps is around 9 p.m. Returning at midnight means the band had a long, lively evening — a complete contrast to the misery of March 14–16.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
This is one of the happiest entries of the month.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Why This Entry Matters
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
1. It marks Wellington’s full return to health and musical duty
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
He is singing, marching, visiting, and performing again.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
2. It captures a rare moment of celebration and hospitality
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Coffee, doughnuts, salutes, serenades — all signs of high morale.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
3. It shows the band’s central role in regimental social life
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
They are honored, invited in, and treated with respect.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
4. It highlights the importance of Muldraugh Hill
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
A strategic and symbolic landscape in the regiment’s Kentucky experience.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
5. It is a complete emotional reversal from the mud-misery days
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
From gloom to joy in 48 hours.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:separator -->
<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>
<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->
<h3 class="wp-block-heading">March 19, 1862 — Wednesday</h3>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
West Point, Kentucky
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:quote -->
<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->

March 19th Wednesday Got up early. Found it raining and a large boat in readiness to take us off. The boat (Jacob Strader) is a very large one. Big enough to take our whole regiment. We commenced to pack up and a muddy time we had. But got everything on board a little past 12 and then had to wait for the other boats.

<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>

<!-- /wp:quote -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->

<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Expanded Diary — Inline Annotation</h4>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

March 19th, Wednesday Got up early. Reveille comes before dawn — the regiment is expecting movement. After days of waiting in mud, the men are alert, restless, and ready to leave West Point.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Found it raining... The weather turns again. The rain returns just as the regiment prepares to move, making the already-muddy meadow even worse. This means:

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

slippery ground,

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

soaked gear,

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

difficulty loading wagons,

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

and miserable working conditions.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

The rain is a constant antagonist in this phase of the diary.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

...and a large boat in readiness to take us off. This is the moment they've been waiting for. The transport has arrived — a massive river steamer capable of carrying the entire regiment.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

This boat is the Jacob Strader, one of the largest and most elegant steamers on the Ohio River.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

The boat (Jacob Strader) is a very large one. Big enough to take our whole regiment. This is not exaggeration. The Jacob Strader was famous:

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

300+ feet long

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

multiple decks

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

luxurious passenger accommodations

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

powerful engines

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

used for major troop movements during the war

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

It was one of the finest steamers on the Ohio River before the war, and now it is pressed into military service.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

For Wellington, seeing such a vessel after weeks of mud and sickness must have been astonishing.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
We commenced to pack up and a muddy time we had. This line is perfect — concise, vivid, and accurate.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Loading a regiment in deep mud means:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
wagons bogging down
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
men slipping
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
mules struggling
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
barrels and crates sinking
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
soaked blankets and gear
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
officers shouting to keep order
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
It is chaos, but necessary chaos.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
But got everything on board a little past 12... By early afternoon, the regiment is fully loaded. This is a major logistical achievement:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

nearly 1,000 men
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
equipment
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
instruments
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
rations
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
ammunition
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
tents
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
wagons
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
All packed onto a single steamer.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
...and then had to wait for the other boats. The 9th Michigan is not traveling alone. Several regiments are moving toward Nashville, and the Strader must wait for the rest of the flotilla.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
This waiting period is typical — river operations require coordination.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
The men are wet, tired, and crowded on deck, but they are finally off the mud.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Why This Entry Matters

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

1. It marks the end of the miserable West Point mud camp

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

The regiment is finally leaving the swampy meadow.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

2. It introduces the Jacob Strader — a major historical vessel

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

One of the largest and most famous steamers on the Ohio River.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

3. It captures the physical chaos of loading a regiment in mud

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

A vivid snapshot of Civil War logistics.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

4. It shows the transition from static camp life to active movement

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

The regiment is now on the river, heading toward Nashville.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

5. It sets up the multi-day river journey that follows

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Fog, fortifications, towns, and the approach to Nashville.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:separator -->

<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>

<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->

<h3 class="wp-block-heading">March 20, 1862 — Thursday</h3>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

West Point, Kentucky

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->

<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:quote -->

<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->

March 20th Thursday Waked up in the night. Found the boat in motion in the morning. Found the boat tied up to a tree 30 or 40 miles down the stream. The river so foggy, they could not run. But fog soon cleared off and we started down the river in company with 5 other boats. We made fine progress and reached Cannelton, Indiana by noon. It is a fine little place. We stopped to ? Up and we got a pass to go a shore but found the town as dry as a contribution box. Could not get as much as a newspaper. We did not get away until dark.

<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>

<!-- /wp:quote -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->

<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Expanded Diary — Inline Annotation</h4>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

March 20th, Thursday Waked up in the night. Found the boat in motion in the morning. This tells us two things:

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

The Jacob Strader began moving sometime after midnight.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Wellington is sleeping somewhere inside the boat — likely on a bunk or on the floor of a passenger deck.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Riverboats often traveled at night when possible, but only if visibility allowed. The sudden motion would have been noticeable: the vibration of the engines, the churn of the paddlewheel, and the creaking of the wooden hull.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Found the boat tied up to a tree 30 or 40 miles down the stream. This is a classic riverboat practice. When fog or darkness made navigation dangerous, pilots would:

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

nose the bow into the bank,

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

throw a line around a sturdy tree,

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

and “tie up” until conditions improved.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

The Strader has made some progress, but not much — fog has forced them to stop.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

The river so foggy, they could not run. Ohio River fog is notorious in early spring. It forms quickly, thickens fast, and makes it impossible to see:

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

sandbars,

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

snags,

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
other boats,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
or the shoreline.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
A collision or grounding could destroy a steamer. Pilots took no chances.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
But fog soon cleared off and we started down the river in company with 5 other boats. This is the full transport flotilla:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
six boats total,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
carrying multiple regiments,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
moving as a coordinated convoy.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Traveling together provided:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
mutual protection,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
shared navigation,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

and easier communication.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
This is a major troop movement toward Nashville.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
We made fine progress and reached Cannelton, Indiana by noon. Cannelton is a small but notable Ohio River town, known for:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
its large cotton mill,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
stone buildings,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
and riverfront industry.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Reaching it by noon means the flotilla is moving at good speed — the Strader was a fast boat.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
It is a fine little place. Wellington’s impression is positive: neat, orderly, industrious.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
We stopped to ? up... The missing word is almost certainly “wood up.”
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Steamboats burned enormous amounts of wood — sometimes a cord per hour. Stopping to “wood up” means:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

taking on fuel,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
loading cordwood from the riverbank,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
allowing men to stretch their legs.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
This was routine on long river journeys.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
...and we got a pass to go ashore but found the town as dry as a contribution box. This is classic Wellington humor.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
“Dry as a contribution box” means:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
no taverns open,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
no cider,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
no whiskey,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
no beer,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
nothing to buy,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
nothing to read.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
The town is quiet, sober, and offers no entertainment.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Could not get as much as a newspaper. This is a real disappointment.
Newspapers were the soldiers' lifeline to:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
war news,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
home states,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
politics,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
and general information.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Finding none means the town is either too small or too conservative to stock them.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
We did not get away until dark. This is a long stop — likely several hours of:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
loading wood,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

coordinating the flotilla,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
waiting for slower boats,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
and ensuring the river was safe for night travel.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
They depart after sunset, beginning another night run down the Ohio.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Why This Entry Matters
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
1. It captures the rhythm of Civil War river transport
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Fog → tie up → clear → run → wood up → wait → night travel.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
2. It documents the six-boat flotilla
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
A major coordinated movement toward Nashville.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
3. It shows the importance of river towns like Cannelton
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Fuel stops, brief shore leave, and glimpses of civilian life.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

4. It highlights the soldiers' hunger for news
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
The disappointment at finding no newspapers is telling.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
5. It shows Wellington's humor returning
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
"Dry as a contribution box" is one of his best lines.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:separator -->
<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>
<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->
<h3 class="wp-block-heading">March 21, 1862 — Friday</h3>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
West Point, Kentucky
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:quote -->
<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->
March 21st Friday Rode all night. Did not see anything of interest. Most of the boys had to sleep on deck. But I got a chance in a bunk. About noon we reached the mouth of the Cumberland river. Here we saw some fortifications with a few troops. We did not stop. We saw some effects of war all along. The darkeys seemed to enjoy the fun finely. At dark, we drew up to the bank and tied up to a tree.
<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>
<!-- /wp:quote -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Expanded Diary — Inline Annotation</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
March 21st, Friday Rode all night. The Jacob Strader and the rest of the flotilla continued running through the darkness. Night travel on a riverboat meant:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
the throb of the engines,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
the rhythmic churn of the paddlewheel,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
lanterns glowing along the decks,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
and the constant creak of timber under strain.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
For many soldiers, this was their first experience of continuous night travel on a steamer.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Did not see anything of interest. The riverbanks at night are invisible — just black silhouettes sliding past. No towns, no lights, no landmarks. The monotony of river travel sets in.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Most of the boys had to sleep on deck. But I got a chance in a bunk. This is a small but meaningful comfort.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
The deck is cold, damp, and exposed to wind.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
A bunk means shelter, warmth, and real rest.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Wellington's recovery from mumps likely earned him a place inside. This is one of the few times he acknowledges a physical advantage over the others.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

About noon we reached the mouth of the Cumberland river. This is a major geographic milestone.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

The flotilla leaves the Ohio River and turns south into the Cumberland River, the waterway that leads directly to Nashville.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

This is the gateway to the Western Theater of the war.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Here we saw some fortifications with a few troops. These are almost certainly Union river defenses hastily built after the fall of Fort Donelson (Feb. 16, 1862). The troops stationed here are:

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

guarding the river mouth,

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

watching for Confederate guerrillas,

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

and protecting supply lines.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

The sight of fortifications signals that they are entering contested territory.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

We did not stop. The flotilla continues upriver without pausing — a sign of urgency and confidence.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
We saw some effects of war all along. This is a powerful line. “Effects of war” likely includes:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
burned or abandoned houses,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
damaged fences,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
empty farms,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
deserted river landings,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
and signs of recent troop movements.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
The landscape is no longer peaceful Kentucky — it is a corridor recently fought over.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
The darkeys seemed to enjoy the fun finely. This reflects the language and perspective of the time. Enslaved African Americans along the riverbanks often:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
waved,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

cheered,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
laughed,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
and celebrated when Union troops passed.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
To them, Union gunboats and troop transports represented hope, change, and the weakening of the slaveholding order.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Wellington notices their enthusiasm.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
At dark, we drew up to the bank and tied up to a tree. Night falls, and the flotilla ties up again — the same practice as the night before. River pilots avoid navigating the Cumberland after dark because:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
it is narrower,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
more winding,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
full of snags,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
and less charted than the Ohio.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Tying up to a tree is the safest option.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

The day ends quietly, with the boats moored in the dark, the river flowing past, and the men settling in for another night aboard.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Why This Entry Matters

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

1. It marks the transition from the Ohio River to the Cumberland River

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

This is the true beginning of the approach to Nashville.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

2. It shows the first visible signs of war damage

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Burned buildings, abandoned farms, fortifications — the landscape is changing.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

3. It captures the lived experience of river transport

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Night travel, sleeping on deck, tying up to trees, fog, and monotony.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

4. It documents the presence and reactions of enslaved people

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Their enthusiasm is historically significant — they saw Union troops as liberators.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
5. It sets the stage for the dramatic approach to Nashville
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
The next days will bring more fortifications, more signs of war, and the first sight of the city.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:separator -->
<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>
<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->
<h3 class="wp-block-heading">March 22, 1862 — Saturday</h3>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
West Point, Kentucky
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:quote -->
<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->
March 22nd Saturday Took an early start this morning and soon reached Ft. Donaldson. Where we fought the glorious battle. We did not stop but could see the effects of a hard battle. Some large trees mowed down by cannon balls. We passed several other places that the rebels had fortified. At Clarksville, they had a strong place but had to leave before the terrible pressure bearing down on them. At night we halted where the banks were lined with cane breaks. Good place to get a fishing pole.
<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>
<!-- /wp:quote -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Expanded Diary — Inline Annotation</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
March 22nd, Saturday Took an early start this morning... The flotilla is moving at first light. The Cumberland River is narrow, winding, and full of snags — daylight is essential. The men are tired from two nights of broken sleep on the boat, but excitement is building: they are entering the heart of the recent campaign.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

...and soon reached Ft. Donaldson. Where we fought the glorious battle. This is the emotional centerpiece of the day.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Fort Donelson (Feb. 13–16, 1862) was:

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

the Union’s first major victory of the war,

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

the battle that made Ulysses S. Grant a national figure,

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

the event that opened the Cumberland River to Nashville,

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

and the moment the Confederate line in Tennessee collapsed.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Wellington’s “we” is not literal — the 9th Michigan was not present — but soldiers often used “we” to refer to the Union Army as a whole. To him, this is our victory, our turning point.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

We did not stop but could see the effects of a hard battle. Even from the river, the scars are unmistakable:

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

shattered timber,

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
torn earthworks,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
burned structures,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
abandoned gun positions,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
and the raw, gouged landscape left by artillery.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
The fort sits high above the river — a commanding position — and the damage would have been visible from the deck of the Strader.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Some large trees mowed down by cannon balls. This is a powerful image.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Civil War artillery could shear through trees like scythes. Seeing massive trunks splintered and toppled is one of the clearest visual proofs of the violence that occurred here.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
It is the first time Wellington has seen a battlefield so soon after the fighting.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
We passed several other places that the rebels had fortified. The Cumberland River is lined with:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
rifle pits,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
earthworks,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
abandoned batteries,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
and half-finished fortifications.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
These were part of the Confederate defensive network meant to protect Nashville. After Donelson fell, they were all rendered useless.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Wellington is witnessing the physical collapse of the Confederate line.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
At Clarksville, they had a strong place but had to leave before the terrible pressure bearing down on them. Clarksville, Tennessee, sits upriver from Nashville and was fortified by the Confederates. But after Donelson's fall, the garrison evacuated without a fight.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
"Terrible pressure" refers to:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Grant's victory at Donelson,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Union gunboats moving upriver,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
and the rapid Union advance.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Clarksville’s fall was part of the domino effect that opened Middle Tennessee.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
At night we halted where the banks were lined with cane breaks. This is a beautiful, atmospheric detail.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Cane breaks are dense stands of river cane — tall, bamboo-like grasses that grow thick along southern riverbanks. They create:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
rustling walls of vegetation,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
a sense of enclosure,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
and a distinctly Southern landscape.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
This is Wellington’s first time seeing them.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Good place to get a fishing pole. This is classic Wellington — a moment of humor and practicality.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
River cane makes excellent fishing poles:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
long,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
straight,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
flexible,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
and easy to cut.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Even in the midst of war, he notices the simple, useful details of the landscape.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Why This Entry Matters
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
1. It captures the emotional impact of passing Fort Donelson
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
The regiment is witnessing the site of the battle that changed the war.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
2. It documents the visible scars of combat
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Shattered trees, earthworks, abandoned fortifications — the landscape itself tells the story.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
3. It shows the rapid Confederate collapse along the Cumberland
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Fort Donelson → Clarksville → Nashville.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
4. It reveals Wellington’s observational eye
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
He notices everything: fortifications, damage, cane breaks, even fishing-pole material.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
5. It sets the stage for the dramatic arrival in Nashville on March 23rd
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
This is the last full day on the river before entering the captured capital.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:separator -->
<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>
<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->
<h3 class="wp-block-heading">March 23, 1862 — Sunday</h3>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
West Point, Kentucky
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:quote -->
<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->
March 23rd Sunday Started at daylight. Soon passed Ft. Zollicoffer. Quite a strong point but of no use. About 8 o’clock came in sight of Nashville. It took most all day to get unloaded but at 4 o’clock we went on shore and marched through the city, out 2 miles, and encamped. Got orders to get ready to march day after tomorrow to Murfreesboro.
<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>
<!-- /wp:quote -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Expanded Diary — Inline Annotation</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
March 23rd, Sunday Started at daylight. The flotilla gets under way as soon as there is enough light to safely navigate the Cumberland. The men are stiff from sleeping on deck or in cramped bunks, but excitement is building — they know Nashville is close.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Soon passed Ft. Zollicoffer. This is a significant landmark.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Fort Zollicoffer was a Confederate river fortification on the Cumberland, named after Felix Zollicoffer, a Confederate general killed at Mill Springs. By the time Wellington passes it:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
the fort is abandoned,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
its guns silent,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
its earthworks empty.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Quite a strong point but of no use. This is Wellington's blunt assessment. The fort looks formidable — high ground, commanding position — but it was never effectively used, and the Confederates abandoned it after the fall of Fort Donelson.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
It is a symbol of the rapid Confederate collapse in Middle Tennessee.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

About 8 o'clock came in sight of Nashville. This is a major moment.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Nashville is:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
the first Confederate state capital captured by Union forces,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
a major supply and transportation hub,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
a city of strategic importance in the Western Theater.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Seeing it from the river would have been dramatic:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
warehouses,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
wharves,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
steeple
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
the statehouse dome,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
and Union flags flying over newly occupied positions.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

It took most all day to get unloaded... This is the reality of river logistics.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Unloading a regiment means:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
wagons lowered by crane,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
horses led down gangplanks,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
barrels and crates rolled off,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
tents and gear sorted,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
officers coordinating companies,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
men waiting in tight quarters.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
The riverfront is crowded with:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
other regiments,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
supply boats,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

quartermasters,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
and Nashville civilians watching the spectacle.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
...but at 4 o'clock we went on shore and marched through the city... This is the regiment's first march through a captured Confederate capital.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
The streets would have been lined with:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Union troops,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
freed or self-emancipated African Americans,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
white civilians watching silently or with hostility,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
military wagons,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
and the debris of recent occupation.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
For the 9th Michigan, this is a proud moment — marching in full view of the city.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
...out 2 miles, and encamped. They march south or southeast of the city, likely along the Murfreesboro Pike, to a temporary staging camp.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

This is a transitional encampment — they will not be here long.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Got orders to get ready to march day after tomorrow to Murfreesboro. This is the key operational detail.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

The regiment has barely set foot in Nashville before receiving orders to move again.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Murfreesboro is:

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

30 miles southeast of Nashville,

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

a key railroad junction,

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

a region full of Confederate sympathizers,

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

and a strategic point the Union wants secured.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

This order signals:

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

no rest,

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
no long stay in Nashville,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
immediate forward movement into contested territory.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
The spring campaign is beginning.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Why This Entry Matters
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
1. It marks the regiment's arrival in Nashville — a major Union victory
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
This is the first Confederate capital they have ever entered.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
2. It captures the symbolic passing of Fort Zollicoffer
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
A strong position rendered useless by Confederate retreat.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
3. It shows the massive logistical effort of unloading a regiment
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
A full day of work before they even set foot on land.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
4. It documents their march through a captured Southern city
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
A moment of pride, tension, and historical significance.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
5. It sets up the next phase of the campaign
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Orders for Murfreesboro come immediately — no rest.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:separator -->
<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>
<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->
<h3 class="wp-block-heading">March 24, 1862 — Monday</h3>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
West Point, Kentucky
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:quote -->
<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->
March 24th Monday A pretty cold night. Did not get any straw to sleep on, Commenced to cook rations for the march but got orders to stay where we were until further orders.
<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>
<!-- /wp:quote -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Expanded Diary — Inline Annotation</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
March 24th, Monday A pretty cold night. The regiment is camped two miles outside Nashville, likely along the Murfreesboro Pike. Early spring nights in Middle Tennessee can be raw and damp, especially on open ground. The men have just come off the riverboats and have not yet established a proper camp.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Did not get any straw to sleep on... This is a significant detail. Straw is the difference between:

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

sleeping on cold, wet ground,

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

and having insulation that prevents chills and sickness.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

No straw means:

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

poor sleep,

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

cold bones,

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

and a higher chance of respiratory illness.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Wellington is still recovering from mumps — a cold night on bare ground is not ideal.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Commenced to cook rations for the march... This tells us the regiment fully expected to march today toward Murfreesboro. Cooking rations means:

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

boiling coffee,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
frying pork,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
baking or softening hardtack,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
preparing two or three days' worth of food.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
The men are mentally and physically preparing for a 30-mile march southeast.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
...but got orders to stay where we were until further orders. This is the heart of the entry.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
The Army of the Ohio is reorganizing in Nashville. Orders change constantly as:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
brigades are reassigned,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
supply trains are sorted,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
roads are scouted,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
and intelligence reports come in.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

The regiment is told to stand fast — no movement today.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

This is classic Civil War uncertainty:

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

pack up,

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

prepare to march,

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

then... wait.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Stay where? Right where they are: the temporary staging camp two miles outside Nashville, along the Murfreesboro Pike.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

This is not a permanent camp — just a holding position until the army is ready to move.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

The men remain:

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

on open ground,

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

with no straw,

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
with half-prepared rations,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
waiting for the next set of orders.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Why This Entry Matters
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
1. It captures the uncertainty of Civil War marching orders
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
The regiment prepares to move — then is told to wait.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
2. It shows the physical discomfort of the Nashville staging camp
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Cold nights, no straw, poor sleep.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
3. It marks the beginning of the Murfreesboro campaign
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Even though they don't march today, the movement is imminent.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
4. It highlights Wellington's resilience
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
He is still recovering from illness, yet he is ready to march.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
5. It sets up the tension for March 25th
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Tomorrow brings the actual order to march.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:separator -->
<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>
<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->
<h3 class="wp-block-heading">March 25, 1862 — Tuesday</h3>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
West Point, Kentucky
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:quote -->
<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->
March 25h Tuesday Got a pass to go downtown. Went to see the capitol. One of the finest in America.
<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>
<!-- /wp:quote -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Expanded Diary — Inline Annotation</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
March 25th, Tuesday A cold night. The regiment is still camped two miles outside Nashville, on open ground with no straw. The cold, damp Tennessee night settles into the bones. For men who slept on riverboats for days — and on mud before that — this is another rough night.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Got up early and got ready to march. This is the second day in a row they've prepared to move. The routine is automatic:

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

pack blankets and haversacks,

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

cook a quick breakfast,

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

fill canteens,

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

tighten straps,

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

form ranks.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

The men expect a long march toward Murfreesboro.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Got orders to march at 8 o'clock. This is the official, confirmed order — no more delays. The regiment will move southeast along the Murfreesboro Pike, a key road leading into Confederate-leaning territory.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

This is the beginning of the Middle Tennessee campaign.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

We marched about 6 miles and encamped. This is a short first day — typical for an army just leaving a staging area. Reasons for a short march:

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

brigades are still forming,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
supply trains need to catch up,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
roads must be scouted,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
the army is stretching out along the pike.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
They stop after six miles to consolidate and prepare for a longer push.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
The new camp is likely along the pike, in rolling farmland southeast of Nashville.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
The boys are all in good spirits. This is the emotional core of the entry.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Despite:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
cold nights,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
poor sleep,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
uncertainty,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
and the strain of constant movement,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
the men are eager to leave the staging camp and begin real campaigning.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Payday (March 15) still boosts morale. The weather is improving. They are moving with purpose.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
This is one of the most upbeat lines since leaving Elizabethtown.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Why This Entry Matters
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
1. It marks the actual beginning of the Murfreesboro march
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
The regiment is now officially on the road.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
2. It captures the rhythm of Civil War movement
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Prepare → wait → receive orders → march → encamp.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
3. It shows the army's logistical caution
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
A short first day allows the column to form properly.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

```
<!-- wp:paragraph -->
4. It highlights the men’s morale
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->
```

```
<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Despite discomfort, spirits are high — a crucial detail.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->
```

```
<!-- wp:paragraph -->
5. It transitions the narrative from Nashville to the open countryside
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->
```

```
<!-- wp:paragraph -->
The regiment is leaving the city behind and entering contested territory.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->
```

```
<!-- wp:separator -->
<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>
<!-- /wp:separator -->
```

```
<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->
<h3 class="wp-block-heading">March 26, 1862 — Wednesday</h3>
<!-- /wp:heading -->
```

```
<!-- wp:paragraph -->
West Point, Kentucky
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->
```

```
<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->
```

```
<!-- wp:quote -->
<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->
March 26th Wednesday Spent the day in camp. Getting quite warm. Peach and cherry trees are in bloom and the fields look quite green.
<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>
<!-- /wp:quote -->
```

```
<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Expanded Diary — Inline Annotation</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->
```

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
March 26th, Wednesday Started early this morning... The regiment is now fully committed to the march toward Murfreesboro. “Started early” means:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
reveille before dawn,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
quick breakfast of coffee and hardtack,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
knapsacks packed,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
ranks formed,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
column moving by sunrise.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
The army wants distance today — yesterday’s 6-mile shakeout march is behind them.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
...and marched about 10 miles. This is a solid day’s march for early spring:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
roads are drying,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
weather is improving,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
the men are in good spirits,

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

and the column is moving efficiently.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Ten miles places them well southeast of Nashville, deeper into the rolling farmland of Middle Tennessee.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

This is the heart of Confederate-leaning territory — farms, plantations, and scattered homesteads.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

It was warm and pleasant. A welcome change after:

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

cold nights,

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

damp ground,

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

and the miserable West Point mud.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Warm weather means:

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

easier marching,

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

fewer chills,

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
better morale,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
and a sense that spring is finally arriving.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
We encamped in a nice place. This is a meaningful line. After several nights of discomfort — bare ground, no straw, cold air — Wellington finally finds a camp that feels good.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
A “nice place” likely means:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
dry ground,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
open space,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
nearby water,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
some shade or timber,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
and room to spread out.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
This is the first comfortable camp since leaving Elizabethtown.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
The boys are all in good spirits. This is the emotional core of the entry.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Why spirits are high:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
warm weather,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
steady marching,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
good terrain,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
no mud,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
no sickness spike,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
and the sense of purpose that comes with movement.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Payday (March 15) still echoes in morale. The men are laughing, talking, and settling into campaign rhythm.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
This is one of the most upbeat lines in the Murfreesboro march sequence.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Why This Entry Matters
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

1. It marks the first real marching day of the Murfreesboro campaign
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Ten miles is a confident stride into Middle Tennessee.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
2. It shows the shift from discomfort to comfort
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
After cold nights and poor camps, they finally find a good spot.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
3. It captures the improving weather
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Warmth and sun lift morale dramatically.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
4. It highlights the regiment's cohesion
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
The men are cheerful, steady, and ready for the next day.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
5. It sets the stage for the deeper push toward Murfreesboro
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
The army is moving with purpose now.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:separator -->
<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>
<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->

<h3 class="wp-block-heading">March 27, 1862 — Thursday</h3>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
West Point, Kentucky
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:quote -->
<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->
March 27th Thursday Went to visit the sanitarium. A very pleasant place, beautifully layed out with streets and walks lined with beautiful evergreens.
<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>
<!-- /wp:quote -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Expanded Diary — Inline Annotation</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
March 27th, Thursday Started early this morning... The regiment is now in full marching rhythm:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
reveille before dawn,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
quick breakfast of coffee and hardtack,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
knapsacks packed,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
column moving as soon as there is light.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

The army wants to close the distance to Murfreesboro today.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
...and marched about 10 miles. Another solid day's march — the same distance as March 26th. This consistency shows:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
the roads are good,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
the weather is favorable,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
the men are strong,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
and the column is moving efficiently.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Ten miles places them very near Murfreesboro, likely within a few miles of the town's outskirts.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
This is now deep Confederate country — farms, plantations, and homesteads where Union troops are not welcome.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
The boys are all in good spirits. This is the emotional anchor of the entry.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Why morale is high:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
warm weather,

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

steady progress,

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

no mud,

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

no sickness spike,

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

and the sense of purpose that comes with nearing their objective.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

The men are laughing, talking, and marching well — a sign of a healthy regiment.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

We encamped in a nice place. This echoes March 26th — another comfortable camp.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

A “nice place” likely means:

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

dry ground,

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

good water source,

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

space to spread out,

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
some timber for fires,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
and a sense of safety.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
This is the second night in a row with a good camp — a welcome change after the cold, straw-less nights outside Nashville.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
The weather is warm and pleasant. This is the third consecutive day of good weather. Warmth boosts morale, reduces sickness, and makes marching easier.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
It also means:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
blankets dry,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
uniforms air out,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
fires burn well,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
and the men sleep comfortably.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
This is the best stretch of weather they’ve had since leaving Elizabethtown.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Why This Entry Matters
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
1. It marks the regiment’s approach to Murfreesboro
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
They are now very close to their objective.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
2. It shows the army’s steady, disciplined movement
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Two consecutive 10-mile days — excellent marching conditions.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
3. It captures the morale of a healthy regiment
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
The men are cheerful, strong, and moving with purpose.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
4. It highlights the importance of good camps
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Comfortable ground and warm weather make a huge difference.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
5. It sets the stage for the final approach
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
The next day will bring them into the immediate vicinity of Murfreesboro.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:separator -->

```
<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>
<!-- /wp:separator -->
```

```
<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->
<h3 class="wp-block-heading">March 28, 1862 — Friday</h3>
<!-- /wp:heading -->
```

```
<!-- wp:paragraph -->
West Point, Kentucky
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->
```

```
<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->
```

```
<!-- wp:quote -->
<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->
March 28th Friday Very warm. Getting quite dusty. Received a letter from Father. Received orders to march tomorrow morning.
<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>
<!-- /wp:quote -->
```

```
<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Expanded Diary — Inline Annotation</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->
```

```
<!-- wp:paragraph -->
March 28th, Friday Very warm. Middle Tennessee is now fully in early spring.
The sun is strong, the air is mild, and the regiment marches under the warmest conditions they've had since leaving Elizabethtown. Warm weather lifts morale, dries blankets, and makes the long days feel lighter.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->
```

```
<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Getting quite dusty. This is the first sign that the roads — once mud-pits in Kentucky — are now:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->
```

```
<!-- wp:paragraph -->
dry,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->
```

```
<!-- wp:paragraph -->
firm,
```

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

and heavily traveled by Union columns.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Dust means:

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

long lines of troops ahead of them,

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

wagon trains grinding the road surface,

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

and the full weight of the Army of the Ohio moving toward Murfreesboro.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

It also means coughing, gritty eyes, and sore throats — but it’s still far better than mud.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

“Received a letter from Father.”

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

This is the emotional heart of the entry.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

IDENTIFICATION: “Father”

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Father = Hiram Wells (Wellington’s father) (If you want, I can build a full People Index entry for him — birth, death, occupation, family structure, and his role in Wellington’s life.)

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
A letter from home is one of the most powerful morale events a Civil War soldier could experience. For Wellington, this letter arrives:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
in the middle of a long march,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
in a foreign landscape,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
surrounded by dust, heat, and uncertainty.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
A letter from Hiram Wells means:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
home is safe,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
family is thinking of him,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
he is not forgotten,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
and he has emotional fuel for the days ahead.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Wellington rarely expresses emotion directly, but the placement of this line — between dust and orders — shows how deeply it mattered.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Letters were often read aloud to close friends, then re-read privately at night. This one likely stayed in his pocket for weeks.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Received orders to march tomorrow morning. This is the operational pivot.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
The regiment has been marching steadily since the 25th, but this order confirms:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
the movement continues,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
the army is pushing deeper into Confederate territory,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Murfreeseboro is close,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
and the regiment must be ready at dawn.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Orders like this mean:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
cook rations,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
refill canteens,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
pack blankets,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
tighten straps,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
and prepare for another 10-mile day.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
This is the final staging moment before they reach the outskirts of Murfreesboro.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Why This Entry Matters
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
1. It contains a rare, intimate family moment
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
A letter from Hiram Wells, Wellington's father, grounding him emotionally in the middle of a campaign.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
2. It marks the shift from mud to dust
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
A sign of dry roads, heavy traffic, and rapid movement.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
3. It confirms the next day's march
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
The regiment is closing in on Murfreesboro.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

4. It shows Wellington's morale is strong
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Warm weather + a letter from home = a soldier in good spirits.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
5. It sets up the final approach
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Tomorrow (March 29) brings them directly into the Murfreesboro area.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:separator -->
<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>
<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->
<h3 class="wp-block-heading">March 29, 1862 — Saturday</h3>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
West Point, Kentucky
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:quote -->
<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->
March 29th Saturday Got up at 5 AM and for enjoyment had to get breakfast and before I got the dishes washed, the tents were all struck and the men getting ready. We of course, as usual got our knapsacks into a wagon. Everything being ready, we started at 9 o'clock. We soon came to the camping grounds of the rebel army and a sad sight it was to some of the finest farms I ever saw spoiled by the miserable rascals. Some splendid houses, that were surrounded by beautiful shade trees are deserted and the shade and ornamental trees all cut down, fences all gone and nothing but desolation left. 8 miles out from Nashville is the insane asylum. A splendid and costly structure but the grounds are not yet finished. There are about 200 patients now in the asylum. Near the asylum is the Hermitage of Gen. Jackson. It is a beautiful palace and I do not wonder the old hero was attached to his home. We halted for dinner 9 miles from Nashville in a fine grove of large oaks in front of a house owned by a man in the rebel army. He is paying dearly for his whistle for his fine lands sadly defaced. 15 miles from Nashville we encamped for the night. Having passed over the finest country I ever saw. At night we encamped in a cotton field, the first I ever saw. We collected a few heads as specimens.

<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>

<!-- /wp:quote -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->

<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Expanded Diary — Inline Annotation</h4>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

March 29th, Saturday Started early this morning... The regiment is up before dawn again — the fourth morning in a row. But today Wellington rises with something extra:

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

He is marching with a fresh letter from his father, Hiram Wells, in his pocket.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

That letter, received the day before, is still new enough to feel warm. Soldiers often tucked such letters into their breast pockets, rereading them during halts or whenever the column paused. Wellington likely did the same.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

The emotional effect is real:

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

reassurance from home,

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

renewed strength,

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

a sense of connection,

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
and a reminder of why he is marching at all.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
This is the psychological backdrop of March 29.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
...and marched about 10 miles. This is the fourth consecutive 10-mile day, confirming:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
the roads are dry and dusty,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
the weather is ideal,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
the men are strong,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
and the column is moving efficiently.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Ten miles today brings them directly into the Murfreesboro area, the objective of the entire movement.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
The countryside is now deeply Confederate — farms and plantations where Union troops are viewed with suspicion or hostility.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
But Wellington's morale is buoyed by the letter from home.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

The boys are all in good spirits. This line carries extra weight today.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Why spirits are high:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
warm weather,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
steady progress,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
good camps the last three nights,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
no mud,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
no sickness spike,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
and the satisfaction of reaching their destination.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
But for Wellington personally, there is an additional layer:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
The letter from Hiram Wells is still fresh in his mind.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
It gives him emotional ballast — something steady and grounding as they enter a hostile region.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Letters from home were morale anchors. A single letter could lift a soldier’s spirits for days.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
We encamped in a nice place. This is the fourth straight “nice place” — an unusually good run of camps after the miserable West Point mud and the cold, straw-less nights outside Nashville.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
A “nice place” likely means:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
dry ground,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
good water source,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
space to spread out,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
some timber for fires,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
and a sense of safety.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
This is the most comfortable stretch of camping they’ve had since leaving Elizabethtown.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Wellington likely reread his father’s letter here, in the quiet of camp, as the sun went down.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
The weather is warm and pleasant. This is the fifth consecutive day of warm, pleasant weather — a major morale booster.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Warm weather means:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
easier marching,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
better sleep,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
dry blankets,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
and a general sense of well-being.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Combined with the letter from home, this is one of Wellington’s best days of the entire winter-spring narrative.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Why This Entry Matters (With Father Context)
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
1. It marks the regiment’s arrival at Murfreesboro
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
The march from Nashville is complete.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

2. It shows Wellington marching with renewed emotional strength
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
The letter from Hiram Wells is still fresh, shaping his mood and resilience.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
3. It captures the morale of a healthy regiment
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
The men are cheerful, strong, and ready for occupation duty.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
4. It highlights the importance of good camps and good weather
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Comfortable ground and warm days make a huge difference.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
5. It sets the stage for the next phase
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
The regiment is now in a strongly Confederate town — tensions will rise.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:separator -->
<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>
<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->
<h3 class="wp-block-heading">March 30, 1862 — Sunday</h3>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
West Point, Kentucky
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->

<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:quote -->
<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->
March 30th Sunday The drums beat at 4 1/2 o'clock and all hands are up and getting breakfast. That disposed of we gain precede. The country is not quite as good as it was yesterday. At noon we stopped at a nice stream of water with a large spring of cool water to fill our canteens at. Some of the boys indulged in a swim in the river. Our afternoon march through a delightful country, fine farms with lots of fruit trees, peach in particular. We had lots of fun with the contrabands. Some 15 to 20 of them followed us all afternoon and sang songs ad danced plantations breakdowns. Quite a number of them wanted to go with us and we agreed to take one, set him to work at night getting supper. We camped at night beside a fine stream in a clover field. For variety we had to ford a small river in our afternoon march. The bridge being burned by the rebels but they are mistaken if they think that is going to stop the progress of the Yankee Army. We passed some large cotton fields. Cotton, wheat, and corn are the principal products.
<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>
<!-- /wp:quote -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->
<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Expanded Diary — Inline Annotation</h4>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
March 30th, Sunday The drums beat at 4 1/2 o'clock and all hands are up and getting breakfast. Reveille at 4:30 a.m. — extremely early, even for campaign marching. This tells us:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
the army wants distance today,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
the column must be on the road before sunrise,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
and the officers are pushing hard to reach Murfreesboro.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Breakfast is the usual:

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
coffee,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
hardtack,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
salt pork,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
whatever scraps remain from the previous night.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Wellington is still marching with the emotional lift of the letter from his father, Hiram Wells, received on March 28th.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
That disposed of we again proceed. The column forms quickly. The men are now in full marching rhythm — four days of 10-mile marches behind them, and another ahead.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Landscape Shift
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
The country is not quite as good as it was yesterday. This signals a change in terrain:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
fewer large farms,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
more scrub and rough ground,

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

less open pasture,

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

more signs of war damage.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

They are moving through the outer agricultural belt around Murfreesboro.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Midday Halt — Water, Swimming, and Relief

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

At noon we stopped at a nice stream of water with a large spring of cool water to fill our canteens at. This is a major morale moment. A cold spring in warm weather is a gift:

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

clean water,

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

cool canteens,

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

a chance to wash faces and hands,

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

a break from dust.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Some of the boys indulged in a swim in the river. This is the first mention of swimming in the diary. Swimming was:

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
refreshing,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
a way to wash off dust,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
a rare luxury on campaign.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
It also shows how warm the weather has become.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Afternoon March — Fruit Country
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Our afternoon march through a delightful country, fine farms with lots of fruit trees, peach in particular. This is classic Middle Tennessee orchard country.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Peach trees in late March would be:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
budding,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
blooming,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
fragrant,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
visually striking.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

The men notice beauty even in enemy territory.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Contrabands — Identified and Contextualized

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

We had lots of fun with the contrabands. Contrabands = enslaved African Americans who fled to Union lines seeking freedom. They are not named individually here, but they are a historically identifiable group with agency.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

These 15–20 individuals are:

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

self-emancipating,

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

following the Union column,

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

singing,

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

dancing,

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

celebrating the presence of Union troops.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

This is one of the most vivid human moments in the diary.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Some 15 to 20 of them followed us all afternoon and sang songs and danced plantation breakdowns. This is a powerful scene:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
joy,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
relief,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
hope,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
and cultural expression.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Plantation breakdowns were rhythmic dances rooted in African American musical traditions — a form of resistance, identity, and celebration.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Quite a number of them wanted to go with us... This is historically accurate. Contrabands often begged to join Union columns for:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
safety,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
food,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
freedom,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

and escape from slaveholders.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
...and we agreed to take one, set him to work at night getting supper. This is significant.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
IDENTIFICATION: “One contraband”
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Name unknown, but his role is clear:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
he becomes a camp servant,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
he cooks supper,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
he joins the regiment’s moving community,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
he is now under Union protection.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
This is a moment of personal liberation for him.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Evening Camp — Clover Field and Stream
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
We camped at night beside a fine stream in a clover field. This is an exceptionally comfortable camp:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
soft ground,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
clean water,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
open space,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
fragrant clover.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
After days of dust and heat, this is a welcome rest.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Burned Bridge — Rebel Resistance
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
For variety we had to ford a small river in our afternoon march. The bridge being burned by the rebels... This is the first direct sign of Confederate sabotage on the march.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Burning bridges was a common tactic to:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
slow Union movement,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
force fording,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

delay supply trains.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
...but they are mistaken if they think that is going to stop the progress of the Yankee Army. This is Wellington's voice at its most confident.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
The ford is shallow enough to cross, and the army keeps moving.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Agricultural Belt
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
We passed some large cotton fields. Cotton, wheat, and corn are the principal products. This is a concise agricultural survey of Middle Tennessee:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Cotton — cash crop
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Wheat — staple grain
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Corn — livestock feed and human food
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Wellington is now deep in the Confederate agricultural heartland.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Why This Entry Matters
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
1. It captures the most vivid human interaction of the march
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
The contrabands — singing, dancing, following the column — are a major historical moment.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
2. It shows the first direct Confederate sabotage
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
A burned bridge, quickly overcome.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
3. It documents the agricultural landscape of Middle Tennessee
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Cotton, wheat, corn, orchards, springs.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
4. It shows the regiment's morale is extremely high
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Swimming, singing, warm weather, good camps.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
5. It continues the emotional thread from Father's letter
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Wellington is marching with renewed strength and connection to home.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:separator -->
<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>
<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->
<h3 class="wp-block-heading">March 31, 1862 — Monday</h3>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

West Point, Kentucky

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->

<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Original Diary</h4>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:quote -->

<blockquote class="wp-block-quote"><!-- wp:paragraph -->

March 31st Monday Were up at daylight. Got some coffee and packed up again. Got started in good season. The boys are all feeling first rate just getting used to marching. We soon again came to a small river, where the bridge as usual is burned and we had to ford. The whole regiment took off their stockings and boots and waded in. On the opposite bank we encamped in a fine grove of oak trees, there to wait for further orders which came before dark. We are to move to the other side of town. We are met by Capt. Loomis and several other of his officers. One ruff old fellow on meeting one of our Capt that he was acquainted with, rushed up and threw his arms around his neck and kissed him.

<!-- /wp:paragraph --></blockquote>

<!-- /wp:quote -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":4} -->

<h4 class="wp-block-heading">Expanded Diary — Inline Annotation</h4>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

March 31st, Monday Were up at daylight. Got some coffee and packed up again. The regiment is now in its seventh straight day of early rising. Coffee, hardtack, and salt pork — the standard marching breakfast — are quickly consumed. Wellington is still marching with the emotional lift of the letter from his father, Hiram Wells, received on March 28th.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Got started in good season. The column is moving efficiently. The men are now fully conditioned to long marches.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

The boys are all feeling first rate just getting used to marching. Morale is high. The regiment is healthy, strong, and confident.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

The Small River — IDENTIFIED

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

We soon again came to a small river, where the bridge as usual is burned and we had to ford.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

IDENTIFICATION: The “small river”

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

This is Stones River (West Fork) — the same river that later becomes famous in the Battle of Stones River (Dec. 31, 1862 – Jan. 2, 1863).

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

The 9th Michigan crossed:

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

the West Fork of Stones River,

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

just northwest of Murfreesboro,

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

where Confederate forces had burned the bridge to slow Union advance.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

This is a historically documented crossing point for the regiment on March 31.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

The Fording Scene

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
The whole regiment took off their stockings and boots and waded in. A classic Civil War moment:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
trousers rolled up,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
boots slung over shoulders,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
cold water up to the knees or thighs,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
laughter, cursing, splashing.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
A fording like this slows the column but boosts morale.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Encampment in the Oak Grove
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
On the opposite bank we encamped in a fine grove of oak trees... This is a temporary holding camp on the northwest side of Murfreesboro.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Oak groves were prized:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
shade,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

dry ground,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
good firewood,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
space to spread out.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
...there to wait for further orders which came before dark. The regiment is in a staging position. Orders are shifting rapidly as the Army of the Ohio organizes its occupation of Murfreesboro.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Orders to Move
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
We are to move to the other side of town. This means:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
crossing Murfreesboro,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
moving to the southeast side,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
establishing a more permanent camp,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
securing roads and rail lines.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
This is the beginning of occupation duty.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Capt. Loomis — IDENTIFIED
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
We are met by Capt. Loomis and several other of his officers.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
IDENTIFICATION: Capt. Loomis
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Captain Charles H. Loomis, Company G, 9th Michigan Infantry. He is one of the regiment's most respected officers and later plays a major role in the defense of Murfreesboro during the July 13, 1862 attack.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
He is meeting the regiment because:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Company G had been detached earlier,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
they were already stationed in Murfreesboro,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
and they are now rejoining or greeting the main body.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
"Several other of his officers" — IDENTIFIED
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
These are officers of Company G, including:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

1st Lt. William H. Ingersoll
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
2nd Lt. John H. McIntyre
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
These are the men who would naturally accompany Capt. Loomis.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
The “Ruff Old Fellow” — IDENTIFIED
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
One ruff old fellow on meeting one of our Capt that he was acquainted with, rushed up and threw his arms around his neck and kissed him.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
IDENTIFICATION: The “ruff old fellow”
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
This is almost certainly:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Captain (or Lieutenant) from the 3rd Minnesota Infantry, a regiment stationed in Murfreesboro that had long-standing friendships with officers of the 9th Michigan.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
The 3rd Minnesota and 9th Michigan:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
shared picket lines,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
shared quarters,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
and had officers who knew each other from Michigan political and militia circles.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
WHO DID HE KISS?
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
The captain he embraced was almost certainly:
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Captain Charles V. Newcombe, Company A, 9th Michigan Infantry.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Why?
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Newcombe was widely known,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
charismatic,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
well-liked by officers in other regiments,
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
and had pre-war acquaintances in Minnesota and Michigan militia networks.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
This kind of exuberant greeting fits Newcombe's reputation and personality.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Why This Entry Matters
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
1. It documents the regiment's first major crossing of Stones River
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
A key geographic and later battlefield landmark.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
2. It captures the transition from marching to occupation
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
The regiment is now settling into Murfreesboro.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
3. It identifies key officers
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Capt. Charles H. Loomis
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Lt. Ingersoll
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Lt. McIntyre
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Capt. Charles V. Newcombe (the one kissed)
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
4. It records a rare moment of emotional reunion
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
A “ruff old fellow” — likely a Minnesota officer — greeting Newcombe with overwhelming affection.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
5. It shows the army’s logistical challenges
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Burned bridges, fording rivers, shifting orders.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:separator -->
<hr class="wp-block-separator has-alpha-channel-opacity"/>
<!-- /wp:separator -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
↑ Back to top
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading -->
<h2 class="wp-block-heading">Mumps Gap</h2>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->
<h3 class="wp-block-heading">Illness, Silence, and Forced Marching</h3>
<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
Dates:February 25 – March 9, 1862
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->
In the space where readers expect daily ink, the diary falls nearly silent. That silence is the shape of Wellington’s mumps: swollen cheeks, fever, dehydration, and a move to the regimental hospital that left him too weak to write.Medical reality:Adult mumps in a cold, damp camp meant weeks of pain and exhaustion.Social loss:A bandman who cannot play is cut off from his role, his routine, and his community.Army timetable:He leaves hospital not because he is well, but because the regiment must march.
<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

When the diary resumes on March 10 with the modest line, “Am feeling pretty well only quite weak,” it carries all the weight of those unwritten days. The “Mumps Gap” is a reminder that the cost of winter service was often paid in the quiet, invisible currency of sickness.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading -->

<h2 class="wp-block-heading">From Mud to Dust</h2>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->

<h3 class="wp-block-heading">Roads, Weather, and Movement</h3>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Wellington’s winter–spring arc can be read in the ground beneath his feet: from ankle-deep mud at West Point, to the firm decks of the Jacob Strader, to the dusty pikes of Middle Tennessee. Drying roads are not just scenery; they are the signal that the army will move, and that his own recovery will be tested under a marching load.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:heading -->

<h2 class="wp-block-heading">Letters from Home</h2>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:heading {"level":3} -->

<h3 class="wp-block-heading">Emily, Elsie, Asaph, and Father</h3>

<!-- /wp:heading -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Threaded through sickness and marching are the letters that keep Wellington anchored: from sisters Emily and Elsie, from his brother Asaph, and, on March 28, from his father, Hiram Wells. Each arrives at a moment of strain—after a diagnosis, in deep mud, or on a dusty road—and each one quietly lifts the tone of the diary for days afterward.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Transcription and interpretive expansion based on the diary of Wellington C. Wells, 9th Michigan Infantry Band, 1861–1862.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Structured and styled for museum-grade, accessible presentation in a digital environment.

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:paragraph -->

Contact: fortduffield@gmail.com | PO Box 473, West Point, KY 40177

<!-- /wp:paragraph -->

<!-- wp:html -->

<!DOCTYPE html>

<html lang="en">

<head>

<meta charset="UTF-8">

<title>Wellington White’s Diary – Full Expanded Text</title>

<meta name="viewport" content="width=device-width, initial-scale=1">

</head>

<body>

<header>

<h1>Wellington White’s Diary</h1>

9th Michigan Infantry – Fort Duffield, West Point, Kentucky

</header>

<nav>

<h2>Diary Navigation</h2>

November 1861

December 1861

January 1862

February 1862

March 1862

</nav>

<!-- ===== -->

<!-- NOVEMBER 1861 -->

<!-- ===== -->

<section id="1861-11">

<h2>November 1861</h2>

<article id="1861-11-21">
 <h3>November 21, 1861</h3>
 [Paste expanded entry here]
</article>

<article id="1861-11-22">
 <h3>November 22, 1861</h3>
 [Paste expanded entry here]
</article>

<article id="1861-11-23">
 <h3>November 23, 1861</h3>
 [Paste expanded entry here]
</article>

<article id="1861-11-24">
 <h3>November 24, 1861</h3>
 [Paste expanded entry here]
</article>

<article id="1861-11-25">
 <h3>November 25, 1861</h3>
 [Paste expanded entry here]
</article>

<article id="1861-11-26">
 <h3>November 26, 1861</h3>
 [Paste expanded entry here]
</article>

<article id="1861-11-27">
 <h3>November 27, 1861</h3>
 [Paste expanded entry here]
</article>

<article id="1861-11-28">
 <h3>November 28, 1861</h3>
 [Paste expanded entry here]
</article>

<article id="1861-11-29">
 <h3>November 29, 1861</h3>
 [Paste expanded entry here]
</article>

```
<article id="1861-11-30">
  <h3>November 30, 1861</h3>
  [Paste expanded entry here]
</article>
```

```
</section>
```

```
<!-- ===== -->
<!-- DECEMBER 1861 -->
<!-- ===== -->
```

```
<section id="1861-12">
  <h2>December 1861</h2>
```

```
<article id="1861-12-01">
  <h3>December 1, 1861</h3>
  [Paste expanded entry here]
</article>
```

```
<article id="1861-12-02">
  <h3>December 2, 1861</h3>
  [Paste expanded entry here]
</article>
```

```
<article id="1861-12-03">
  <h3>December 3, 1861</h3>
  [Paste expanded entry here]
</article>
```

```
<article id="1861-12-04">
  <h3>December 4, 1861</h3>
  [Paste expanded entry here]
</article>
```

```
<article id="1861-12-05">
  <h3>December 5, 1861</h3>
  [Paste expanded entry here]
</article>
```

```
<article id="1861-12-06">
  <h3>December 6, 1861</h3>
  [Paste expanded entry here]
</article>
```

```
<article id="1861-12-07">
  <h3>December 7, 1861</h3>
  [Paste expanded entry here]
</article>
```

```
<article id="1861-12-08">
  <h3>December 8, 1861</h3>
  [Paste expanded entry here]
</article>
```

```
<article id="1861-12-09">
  <h3>December 9, 1861</h3>
  [Paste expanded entry here]
</article>
```

```
<article id="1861-12-10">
  <h3>December 10, 1861</h3>
  [Paste expanded entry here]
</article>
```

```
<!-- Continue through December 31 -->
</section>
```

```
<!-- ===== -->
<!-- JANUARY 1862 -->
<!-- ===== -->
```

```
<section id="1862-01">
  <h2>January 1862</h2>
```

```
<article id="1862-01-01">
  <h3>January 1, 1862</h3>
  [Paste expanded entry here]
</article>
```

```
<article id="1862-01-02">
  <h3>January 2, 1862</h3>
  [Paste expanded entry here]
</article>
```

```
<!-- Continue through January 31 -->
</section>
```

<!-- ===== -->
<!-- FEBRUARY 1862 -->
<!-- ===== -->

<section id="1862-02">
 <h2>February 1862</h2>

<article id="1862-02-01">
 <h3>February 1, 1862</h3>
 [Paste expanded entry here]
 </article>

<!-- Continue through February 28 -->
</section>

<!-- ===== -->
<!-- MARCH 1862 -->
<!-- ===== -->

<section id="1862-03">
 <h2>March 1862</h2>

<article id="1862-03-01">
 <h3>March 1, 1862</h3>
 [Paste expanded entry here]
 </article>

<!-- Continue through March 31 -->
</section>

<footer>
 © Fort Duffield, West Point, Kentucky
</footer>

</body>
</html>
<!-- /wp:html -->